

THE POEMS OF SCHILLER

ORIGINAL PREFACE.

IN venturing to submit to the public this attempt to render into English the poetical works of the great German lyric bard, the Translator feels it necessary to say one or two words respecting the motives which have induced him to undertake the somewhat daring task of appearing in a field that has been already partially occupied by others.

These translations were originally made by the Translator for his own amusement; but as he proceeded in what has been to him a labor of love, he was induced gradually to extend his original idea of making a mere selection, until he at length found himself drawn on to attempt the whole. Accordingly, the following pages will be found to contain a version of every piece, without exception, that is contained in the authorized editions of Schiller's Poems (including the fine dramatic sketch of Semele, which is now given amongst his other poems); and even all the minor pieces, which it has been usual to omit, as being without interest to the English reader. But the Translator has thought that, in order fully to appreciate the poetic genius of Schiller, his poems should be viewed as a whole.

With the same object, the meter of the original has been adhered to as closely as possible; and in only a few unimportant instances has this rule been departed from. With regard to the Elegiacs, in particular, in which meter some of the finest productions of Schiller are written (as, for instance, The Walk), the Translator has preserved the hexameter and pentameter of the German, not only because they admit of a more faithful rendering of the original, but also because he conceives that a meter which has been employed with such singular success by the German poet, cannot be entirely unsuited to a language so closely allied in origin and construction to the German as our own. He believes, moreover, that there is a growing taste in this country for classical metres which, it cannot be denied, have until very recently been far from popular. It is with respect to this class of poems, and also to several of Schiller's earlier pieces, the meaning of which is often mystical, and the meter very peculiar, that he especially hopes for the indulgence of the reader.

With regard to the translation itself, the Translator has invariably kept in view the necessity of preserving the strictest fidelity to the original, his desire having been to render Schiller's Pœms into English, but nothing more. He feels that it would have been both absurd and presumptuous in him to have attempted to make any alterations in the productions of the great bard. Whatever may be the language into which Schiller is translated, whatever may be the nation where he is read, he has a giant-voice of his own, wherewith to make himself heard and understood.

The addition of an appendix, containing translations of all the various minor poems, &c., found in Schiller's dramatic works, completes the list of his recognized pieces.

I will now be necessary to say a few words respecting the Suppressed Poems, which are given in this collection.

Shortly after the publication of Schiller's celebrated Robbers, appeared a work entitled Anthology for the Year 1782, containing a collection of poems, evidently the work of several hands. It soon became known that it was edited by Schiller, and that he was the author of most of the pieces. This was subsequently fully proved, when he published the complete collection of his works, where the whole of the Pœms of the First Period, together with two or three of the Second, are taken from the Anthology. But it was also known that, for various reasons, he had suppressed a large proportion of the pieces there published, and indisputably written by him.

The Anthology has for a long time been a literary rarity, known only to a few connoisseurs; and is probably entirely unknown to the English reader. It has been reprinted in Germany very recently; and advantage has been taken of its republication to introduce translations of the whole of the poems in it which critics have pronounced to be Schiller's, and which are, notwithstanding, excluded from the collected editions of his poems. The original wild and fantastic dedication and preface are also added.

The total number of poems comprised in the Anthology is ninety, of which thirty are given elsewhere, under either the First or the Second Period of the recognized poems. Of the others, thirty-two are universally pronounced not to be Schiller's, and they certainly contain sufficient internal evidence of this fact, as nothing can be more vapid and talentless than they are. The following friends of the poet are believed to have been amongst their contributors: Peterson, Pfeiffer, Zuccato, Von Hoven, Hang, and Scharffenstein.

The remaining twenty-eight pieces, comprising nearly twelve hundred verses, are assigned by the almost unanimous voice of the commentators—Hoffmeister, Boas, Döring, Schwab, and Bulow—to Schiller; and there are very few concerning which there is any question. They are accordingly all given here. As respects the thirty admitted into the collected poems, the latter versions, as given by Schiller himself, have been invariably adhered to, rather than those found in the Anthology, whenever any difference exists between them.

Many of these early pieces are either inscribed to, or relate to, the Laura whose image first enslaved his mind, and whose influence over him, as evinced by many of his most impassioned poems, appears to have been unbounded.* The suppressed Reproach—To Laura, and the ode To the Fates, here given, may be added to the long list found in the Poems of the First Period.

Six pieces among the Suppressed Poems, of a humorous character, viz., The Journalists and Minos, Bacchus in the Pillory, the Muses' Revenge, the Parallel, the Hypochondriacal Pluto, and the Satyr and my Muse, combined with the Wallenstein's Camp, and the well-known Celebrated Woman, admitted into the published editions, go far to refute the opinion expressed by the most eminent of living critics, that Schiller was totally deficient in humor. It is certain, however, that he did not wield this power in the manner that he might have done this; and the only poem of his mature years where we find any traces of it is his Pegasus in Harness.

The sublimity of the Hymn to the Eternal, and the terrific power of the sketch of the plague, stand in strong contrast to the gentle but deep poetic feeling that breathes in every line of the poem entitled Thoughts on the 1st October, 1781, and to the pleasing mixture of repose and playfulness in The Winter Night; and the bitterness apparent throughout The Bad Monarchs is no bad evidence of the natural strength of Schiller's passions, before he obtained that complete control over them which his later works evince.

The Epigrams, &c., are, for the most part, quite insignificant, and only worth preserving as having been written by Schiller.

The poems of this volume are arranged in the precise order of the latest authorized German editions, both for convenience of reference, and because it does not appear that anything would be gained by deviation from that arrangement.

The Translator is glad to avail himself of this opportunity to express his thanks to Lord Hcbart and another friend,* for the many valuable suggestions with which they have favored him during the progress of this work through the press.

London, April, 1851.

* The late Mr. Albany Fonblanque.

PREFACE TO THE SECOND EDITION.

IN this Edition the Translator has corrected various minor mistakes and inaccuracies which had crept into the Original Edition, published upwards of twenty years ago; but substantially it differs but a little from it. His excuse for its many imperfections is only to be found in his youth and inexperience at the time when he made the translations. He has, unfortunately for himself, now surmounted the first of these faults, whilst his kind readers will benefit but little from the cure of the second.

TRANSLATOR'S APOLOGY TO THE READER

In days of old, while Grecian bards yet sang,
And, at Olympia vying, swept the chord,
Throughout the world the victor's praises rang,
And great, exceeding great, was his reward.
The story of his prowess echoing sprang
From land to land, and e'en to heaven upsoar'd.
And when his ashes slumber'd in the tomb,
His memory long survived in pristine bloom.

And is it not so still? Yes! SCHILLER, thou
Hast earn'd a glorious—an immortal name:
The universal voice hath wreath'd thy brow
With laurels fair, in token of thy fame;
The poet's mantle bright thou wearest now,—
Upon thy shoulders placed with one acclaim;
Thy native country holds thy memory dear,—
It still hath bloom'd through many a changing year

Yet thou hast liv'd not for one land alone:
For the whole world are surely meant thy lays.
He, then, who seeks to make thy numbers known
To those whose hearts their spell may upward raise,
If in the language cloth'd, they call their own,—
He who to others' ears perchance conveys
E'en a faint echo of thy minstrelsy,
He who dares this, may haply pardon'd be.

If, then, these feeble numbers have but power
E'en on one bosom pleasure to bestow;
If they can help to cheer one heavy hour,—
Soothe e'en one sorrow, lighten e'en one woe;
If to life's garland they can add one flower,
Although unseen, forgotten, it may blow,—
Then will the prize I covet be obtain'd:
I ask no more,—my utmost wish is gain'd.

POEMS OF THE FIRST PERIOD.

—to:—

HECTOR'S FAREWELL.

ANDROMACHE.

ART thou, Hector, hence for ever going
Where Achilles, with fierce vengeance glowing
To Patroclus piles a hecatomb ?
Who, alas ! will teach thine Infant truly
Spears to hurl, the Gods to honor duly,
When thou'rt buried in dark Orcus' womb ?

HECTOR.

Dearest wife, restrain thy tearful sadness !
For the fray my bosom pants with madness,
This stout arm must Pergamus defend ;
For my household Gods all dangers braving,
Should I fall, my Fatherland in saving,
To the Stygian flood I'll glad descend.

ANDROMACHE.

For thy clashing arms I vain shall listen,
In thy halls thy glaive will idly glisten,
Priam's hero-race in dust will lie ;
Thou wilt go, where day can enter never,
Where Cocytus wails 'mid deserts ever,
And thy Love in Lethe's stream will die.

HECTOR.

Though the ardent hopes, the thoughts I cherish,
All in Lethe's silent stream may perish,
Yet my Love shall never die !
Hark ! I hear the foe the walls assailing !
Gird my sword around me,—cease thy wailing !
Hector's Love in Lethe cannot die !*

* In the original, the same word is repeated, as it is here, instead of a rhyme being employed.

AMALI 4.

ANGEL-FAIR, Walhalla's charms displaying,
 Fairer than all mortal youths was he ;
 Mild his look, as May-day sunbeams straying
 Gently o'er the blue and glassy sea.

And his kisses !—what ecstatic feeling !
 Like two flames that lovingly entwine,
 Like the harp's soft tones together stealing
 Into one sweet harmony divine,—

Soul and soul embraced, commingled, blended,
 Lips and cheeks with trembling passion burn'd
 Heav'n and Earth, in pristine chaos ended,
 Round the blissful Lovers madly turn'd.

He is gone—and, ah ! with bitter anguish
 Vainly now I breathe my mournful sighs ;
 He is gone—in hopeless grief I languish,
 Earthly joys I ne'er again can prize !

A FUNERAL PHANTASY.

Lo ! on high the moon, her lustre dead,
 O'er the death-like grove uplifts her head,
 Sighing flits the spectre through the gloom—
 Misty clouds are shivering,
 Pallid stars are quivering,
 Looking down, like lamps within a tomb.
 Spirit-like, all silent, pale, and wan,
 Marshall'd in procession dark and sad.
 To the sepulchre a crowd moves on,
 In the grave-night's dismal emblems clad.

Who is he, who, trembling on his crutch,
 Walks with gloomy and averted eye,
 And bow'd down by Destiny's hard touch,
 Vents his sorrow in a mournful sigh
 O'er the coffin borne in silence by?
 Was it "Father!" from the youth's lips came?
 Soon a damp and fearful shudder flies
 Through his grief-emaciated frame,
 And his silv'ry hairs on end uprise.

All his fiery wounds now bleed anew!
 Through his soul, hell's bitter torments run!
 "Father!" 'twas that from the youth's lips flew,
 And the Father's heart hath whispered "Son!"
 Ice-cold, ice-cold, in his shroud he lies,—
 By thy dream, so sweet and golden erst,
 Sweet and golden, Father, thou art eurst!
 Ice-cold, ice-cold, in his shroud he lies,
 Who was once thy joy, thy Paradise!

Mild, as when, fann'd by Elysian gale,
 Flora's son over the verdant plain skips,
 Girded with roses that fragrance exhale,
 When from the arms of Aurora he slips,—
 Onward he sped o'er the sweet-smelling field,
 Mirror'd below in the silvery flood;
 Rapturous flames in his kiss were conceal'd,
 Chasing the maidens in amorous mood.

Boldly he sprang 'mid the stir of mankind,
 As o'er the mountains a youthful roe springs;
 Heav'nward ascended his wish unconfin'd,
 High as the eagle his daring flight wings.
 Proud as the steeds that in passion their manes,
 Foaming and champing, toss round in wild waves,
 Rearing in majesty under the reins,
 Stood he alike before monarchs and slaves.

Bright as a spring-day, his life's joyous round
 Fleeted in Hesperus' glory away;
 Sighs in the grape's juice all-golden he drown'd,
 Sorrow he still'd in the dance light and gay.
 Worlds were asleep in the promising boy,
 But when he once as a man shall be ripe,—
 Father, rejoice—in thy promising boy,
 Soon as the slumbering germ shall be ripe!

Not so, Father—hark ! the churchyard gates
 Groan, and lo, the iron hinges creak !—
 See the dreaded tomb its prey awaits !—
 Not so—let the tears course down thy cheek !
 Tow'rd Perfection lov'd one, hasten on,
 In the sun's bright path with joy proceed !
 Quench thy noble thirst for bliss alone
 In Wulhalla's peace, from sorrow freed !

Ye will meet—oh thought of rapture full !—
 Yonder, at the gate of Paradise !
 Hark ! the coffin sinks with echo dull ;
 As it re-ascends the death-rope sighs !
 Then, with sorrow drunk, we madly roll'd,
 Lips were silent, but the mute eye spoke—
 Stay, oh, stay !—we grudg'd the tomb so cold ;
 But soon warmer tears in torrents broke.

Lo ! on high the moon, her lustre dead,
 O'er the deathlike grove uplifts her head,
 Sighing flits the spectre through the gloom—
 Misty clouds are shivering,
 Pallid stars are quivering,
 Looking down like lamps within a tomb.
 Dully o'er the coffin earth-flakes rise,—
 All the wealth of earth for one look more !
 Now the grave barr'd up for ever lies ;
 Duller, duller o'er the coffin earth-flakes rise :
 Never will the grave its prey restore !

PHANTASY—TO LAURA.

NAME, my Laura, name the whirl-compelling
 Bodies to unite in one blest whole—
 Name, my Laura, name the wondrous magio
 By which Soul rejoins its kindred Soul !

See ! it teaches yonder roving Planets
 Round the sun to fly in endless race ;
 And as children play around their mother,
 Checker'd circles round the orb to trace.

Every rolling star, by thirst tormented,
 Drinks with joy its bright and golden rain—
 Drinks refreshment from its fiery chalice,
 As the limbs are nourish'd by the brain.

'Tis through Love that atom pairs with atom,
 In a harmony eternal, sure ;
 And 'tis Love that links the spheres together—
 Through her only, systems can endure.

Were she but effaced from Nature's clockwork,
 Into dust would fly the mighty world ;
 O'er thy systems thou wouldst weep, great Newton,
 When with giant force to Chaos hurl'd !

Blot the Goddess from the Spirit Order,
 It would sink in death, and ne'er arise.
 Were Love absent, spring would glad us never ;
 Were Love absent, none their God would prize !

What is that, which, when my Laura kisses,
 Dyes my cheek with flames of purple hue,
 Bids my bosom bound with swifter motion,
 Like a fever wild my veins runs through ?

Ev'ry nerve from out its barriers rises,
 O'er its banks the blood begins to flow ;
 Body seeks to join itself to Body,
 Spirits kindle in one blissful glow.

Powerful as in the dead creations
 That eternal impulses obey,
 O'er the web Arachine-like of Nature,—
 Living Nature,—Love exerts her sway.

Laura, see how Joyousness embraces E'en the overflow of sorrows wild !
 How e'en rigid desperation kindles
 On the loving breast of Hope so mild.

Sisterly and blissful rapture softens
 Gloomy Melancholy's fearful night,
 And, deliver'd of its golden Children,
 Lo, the eye pours forth its radiance bright !

Does not awful Sympathy rule over
 E'en the realms that Evil calls its own ?
 For 'tis Hell our crimes are ever wooing,
 While they bear a grudge 'gainst Heaven alone !

Shame, Repentance, pair Eumenides-like,
 Weave round sin their fearful serpent-coils :
 While around the eagle-wings of Greatness
 Treach'rous danger winds its dreaded toils.

Ruin oft with Pride is wont to trifle,
 Envy upon Fortune loves to cling ;
 On her brother, Death, with arms extended,
 Lust, his sister, oft is wont to spring.

On the wings of Love the Future hastens
 In the arms of ages past to lie ;
 And Saturnus, as he onward speeds him,
 Long hath sought his bride—Eternity !

Soon Saturnus will his bride discover,—
 So the mighty Oracle hath said ;
 Blazing Worlds will turn to marriage torches
 When Eternity with Time shall wed !

Then a fairer, far more beauteous morning,
 Laura, on our Love shall also shine,
 Long as their blest bridal-night enduring :—
 So rejoice thee, Laura—Laura mine !

TO LAURA AT THE HARPSICORD.

When o'er the chords thy fingers stray,
 My spirit leaves its mortal clay,
 A statue there I stand ;
 Thy spell controls e'en life and death,
 As when the nerves a living breath
 Receive by love's command ! *

More gently Zephyr sighs along
 To listen to thy magic song :
 The systems form'd by heav'nly love
 To sing for ever as they move,
 Pause in their endless-whirling round
 To catch the rapture-teeming sound ;
 'Tis for thy strains they worship thee,—
 Thy look, Enchantress, fetters me!

From yonder chords fast-thronging come
 Soul-breathing notes with rapturous speed,
 As when from out their heav'nly home
 The new-born Seraphim proceed ;
 The strains pour forth their magic might,
 As glitt'ring suns burst through the night,
 When, by Creation's storm awoke,
 From Chaos' giant-arm they broke.

Now sweet, as when the silv'ry wave
 Delights the pebbly beach to lave ;
 And now majestic as the sound
 Of rolling thunder gath'ring round ;
 Now pealing more loudly, as when from yon height Descends the mad mountain-stream, foaming and bright ;

Now in a song of love
 Dying away,
 As thro' the aspen grove
 Soft zephyrs play ;
 Now heavier and more mournful seems the strain,
 As when across the desert, death-like plain,
 Whence whispers dread and yells despairing rise,
 Coeytus' sluggish, wailing current sighs.

Maiden fair, oh, answer me !
 Are not spirits leagued with thee ?
 Speak they in the realms of bliss
 Other language e'er than this ?

* The allusion in the original is to the seemingly magical power possessed by a Jew conjuror, named Philadelphia, which would not be understood in English.

RAPTURE—TO LAURA.

From earth I seem to wing my flight,
 And sun myself in Heaven's pure light,
 When thy sweet gaze meets mine
 I dream I quaff ethereal dew,
 When mine own form I mirror'd view
 In those blue eyes divine !

Blest notes from Paradise afar,
 Or strains from some benignant star
 Enchant my ravish'd ear ;
 My Muse feels then the shepherd's hour
 When silv'ry tones of magic power
 Escape those lips so dear !

Young Loves around thee fan their wings—
 Behind, the madden'd fir-tree springs,
 As when by Orpheus fir'd ;
 The poles whirl round with swifter motion,
 When in the dance, like waves o'er Ocean,
 Thy footsteps float untir'd !

Thy look, if it but beam with love,
 Could make the lifeless marble move,
 And hearts in rocks enshrine ;
 My visions to reality
 Will turn, if, Laura, in thine eye
 I read—that thou art mine !

THE SECRET OF REMINISCENCE.

What unveils to me the yearning glow
 Fix'd for ever to thy lips to grow ?
 What the longing wish thy breath to drink,—
 In thy Being blest, in death to sink
 When thy look steals o'er me ?

As when Slaves without resistance yield
 To the Victor in the battle-field,
 So my senses in the moment fly
 O'er the bridge of Life tumultuously
 When thou stand'st before me !

Speak ! Why should they from their Master roam ?
 Do my Senses yonder seek their home ?
 Or do sever'd brethren meet again,
 Casting off the Body's heavy chain,
 Where thy foot hath lighted ?

Were our Beings once together twin'd ?
 Was it therefore that our bosoms pin'd ?
 Were we in the light of suns now dead,
 In the days of rapture long since fled,
 Into One united ?

No ! we were so ! thou wert link'd with me,
 In Æone that has ceas'd to be ;
 On the mournful page of vanish'd time,
 By my Muse were read these words sublime .
 Nought thy love can sever !

And in Being closely twin'd and fair,
 I too wondering saw it written there,—
 We were then a Life, a Deity,—
 And the world seem'd order'd then to lie
 'Neath our sway for ever.

And, to meet us, nectar-fountains still Pour'd for ever forth their blissful rill ;
 Foreibly we broke the seal of Things,
 And to Truth's bright sunny hill our wings
 Joyously were soaring.

Laura, weep !—this Deity hath flown,—
 Thou and I his ruins are alone ;
 By a thirst unquenchable we're driven
 Our lost Being to embrace ;—tow'rd Heaven
 Turns our gaze imploring

Therefore, Laura, is this yearning glow
Fix'd for ever to thy lips to grow,
And the longing wish thy breath to drink,
In thy Being blest, in death to sink
When thy look steals o'er me!

And as Slaves without resistance yield,
To the Victor in the battle-field,
Therefore do my ravish'd Senses fly
O'er the bridge of Life tumultuously,
When thou stand'st before me!

Therefore do they from their Master roam !
Therefore do my Senses seek their home !
Casting off the Body's heavy chain,
Those long-sever'd brethren kiss again,
Hush'd is all their sighing !

And thou, too—when on me fell thine eye,
What disclos'd thy cheek's deep-purple dye?
Tow'rd each other, like relations dear,
As an exile to his home draws near,
Were we not then flying?

MELANCHOLY—TO LAURA.

LAURA,—in thy golden gaze
Burns the morning sunbeam's glow,
In thy cheek the red blood plays,
And thy tears, that pearl-like flow,
Rapture as their Mother know—
He whom those fair drops bedew,
Who therein a God can view,
Ah, the youth who thus rewarded sighs,
Sees new suns begin to rise !

And thy Spirit, bright and clear,
As the glassy waves appear,
Turns to May the Autumn sad;
Deserts wild, inspiring fear,
In thy genial rays are glad.

Distant Future, gloomy, cold,
 In thy star is turn'd to gold ;
 Smil'st thou at the Graces' harmony ?
 I must weep those charms to see !

Have not Night's all-dreaded Powers
 Undermin'd Earth's fastness long ?
 Yes ! our proudly-soaring towers,
 And our cities, stately, strong,
 All on mould'ring bones repose ;
 From Decay their fragrant bloom
 Drink thy flowers ; thy current flows
 From the hollow of a—tomb !

Laura, yonder floating planets see !
 Let them of their Worlds discourse to thee !
 'Neath their magic Circle's sway,
 Thousand springs have pass'd away,
 Thousand thrones the skies have sought,
 Thousand fearful fights been fought,
 Wouldst thou find their trace again,
 Seek it on the iron plain !
 Earlier, later, ripe to pass
 To the grave,—the wheels, alas,
 Of tho Planets clogg'd remain !

Thrice look around,—and lo ! the sun's bright rays
 In the death-night's Ocean quench their blaze :
 Ask me how thy beams are fann'd to flame !
 Dost thou boast thy sparkling eye,
 Or thy cheek's fresh purple dye,
 That for crumbling Mould first came ?
 For the hues he lent to thee,
 Maiden, Death with usury
 Heavy interest soon will claim !

Maiden, do not scorn that mighty one !
 On the cheek a fairer, brighter dye
 Is, alas ! but Death's more beauteous throne ;
 From behind that flow'ry tapestry
 Marks his prey the Spoiler for his own.
 Laura—in thy Worshipper confide !
 'Tis tow'rd Death alone thine eyes now strain ;

And thy beaming glances only drain
 Life's frail lamp so niggardly supplied.
 "Yet my pulses," boastest thou,
 "Throb in joyous youthful play"—
 Ah! the 'Tyrant's creatures now
 Are but hast'ning tow'ards Decay.

And this smile the blast of Death
 Scatters, as the zephyr's breath
 Scatters rainbow-color'd foam.
 Vain thou seek'st to find its trace,
 E'en from Nature's spring-like grace,
 E'en from Life, as from his home,
 Sallies the Destroyers base!

Stripp'd of leaves I see thy lifeless roses,
 Pale and dead thy mouth so sweet of yore,
 And thy cheek, that dimple soft discloses,
 By the wintry tempest furrow'd o'er.
 Gloomy years will, gathering blacker, stronger,
 Cloud the silver-spring of Infancy—
 Then will Laura—Laura love no longer,
 Then will Laura lovely cease to be!

Maiden! as an oak thy Bard still rears his head;
 Blunt against a rock-like youthful might
 Falls the death-spear's shaft, its vigor fled;
 And my glances,—burning as the light
 Of yon Heaven,—my Soul more fiercely glowing
 Than the light of yon eternal Heaven,
 O'er its own World's heaving Ocean driven,
 Piling rocks and overthrowing;
 Boldly through the World my thoughts are steering,
 Nothing save their barriers fearing!

Glow'st thou, Laura?—Swells thy haughty breast?
 Learn then, Maiden, that this drink so blest,
 That this cup of God-like seeming,
 Laura, is with Poison teeming!
 Hapless they who ever trust
 Sparks divine to forge from dust!
 Ah! the boldest Harmony
 'Mongst the notes but discord breeds,—

Genius, glowing Spark from high,
 On Life's glim'ring lamp but feeds.
 Lur'd from Life's bright throne away,
 Ev'ry Gaoler marks him as his prey !
 Ah ! e'en now, with shameless passion fir'd,
 'Gainst me all my Spirits have conspir'd !
 Let—I feel it—two short springs fleet by,
 Laura—and this tottering house of clay
 Will with fearful ruin on me lie,
 Quenching me in my self-kindled ray :—

Weep'st thou, Laura ?—Be that tear denied
 Which as Age's penance is supplied !
 Hence ! away ! thou tear, thou sinner mean !
 Wouldst thou, Laura, that my strength should sink ?—
 That I trembling from that Sun should shrink
 Who tho stripling's eagle-course hath seen ?
 That my bosom's heavenly flame so bright
 'Neath a frozen heart's cold touch should perish ?—
 That my Spirit should be rest of sight ?—
 Must I curse the sins that most I cherish ?
 No ! away ! thou tear, thou sinner mean !
 Break the flow'ret in its fairest bloom !
 Queneli, O Youth, with that deep look of gloom,
 Queneli with bitter tears my torel's ray !
 As when o'er the scene that most enthral's
 On the tragic stage, the curtain falls
 Though each shadow flies,—tho crowds all-breathless stay !

THE INFANTICIDE.

HARK !—the bells are tolling mournfully,
 And the dial's hand hath run its race.
 In the name of God, so let it be !
 Grave-attendants,—to the fatal place !
 Take, O World, this last departing kiss !
 'Take, O World, these bitter tears away !
 Yet thy Poison has a taste of bliss !
 Bosom-poisoner, we are quit to-day !

Fare thee well, thou happiness of Earth,
 Now to be exchang'd for crumbling mould.
 Fare ye well, ye days of rosy birth,
 That the maiden revell'd in of old !
 Fare ye well, ye gold-embroider'd dreams,
 Heaven-descended Phantasies so bright !
 Ah, they perish'd in their morning beams,
 Ne'er again to blossom to the light !

I was deck'd with rosy ribbons fair,
 Clad in Innocence's swan-like dress,
 And my bright and loosely-flowing hair
 Rosebuds sweet then carelessly did press.
 Woe, oh, woe ! though garments white did grieve
 Her who now is Hell's sad sacrifice,
 Yet, alas, those rosy ribbons' place
 Now the fillet black of Death supplies

Weep for me, oh, ye who never fell !
 Ye for whom tho guileless lily blows,
 On whose gentle bosoms as they swell
 Nature her heroic strength bestow'd .
 Woe !—this heart has felt frail passion's charms,
 Feeling now my judgment-sword must be !
 Woe !—encircled in the False One's arms,
 Slept my Virtue,—ah, too easily !

Al, forgetting me, that serpent-heart
 Makes Another now perchance its prey,—
 Overflows, when I to Death depart,
 At her toilet in some amorous play !—
 Sports, it may be, with his Maiden's hair,
 Drink the kiss that she responsive brings,
 When upon the death-block spurting there,
 From my body, high the life-blood springs !

Joseph ! Joseph ! many a weary mile
 May Louisa's death-song follow thee !
 And the belfrey's hollow peal the while
 On thy startled ear strike fearfully !
 When Love's soft and murmuring tones may swell
 Tow'rd thee from some Maiden's tender lips,
 Sudden let them plant a Wound from Hell,
 Where Joy's rosy form its Being sips !

'Traitor ! heed'st thou not Lonisa's smart ?--
 Not, thou Cruel one, a Woman's shame ?--
 Not the unborn Life beneath my heart ?--
 Not what e'en the tiger fierce would tame ?
 See ! his sails now proudly leave this land,
 Sadly after them is turn'd mine eye,
 While around the Maids on Seine's far strand,
 Breathes he forth his false and treach'rous sigh !

And my baby,—wrapp'd in soft repose—
 Calmly lay it on its mother's breast ;
 In the beauty of the morning rose & sweetly on me smil'd the infant blest.
 Deadly-lovely was each feature fair
 Of its blissful image tow'rd me bent ;
 While by Love and visions of Despair
 Was its mother's tortured bosom rent.

" Woman, where's my Father ?"—Thus it spoke
 In its innocent mute thunder tone ;
 " Woman, where's thy Sponse ?"—responsive broke
 From my inmost heart, with heavy groan.
 Him who now many other children kiss,
 Orphan, thou, alas, wilt seek in vain !
 Thou wilt curse the moment of our bliss
 When the Baslard's name inflicts its stain.

And thy mother—in her heart is Hell !
 Lonely sits she in wide Nature's All.
 Thirsting ever at the blissful well,
 Which thy sight converts to bitter gall.
 Ah ! with ev'ry sound from thee arises
 Madden'd feelings of departed joy,
 And Death's bitter arrow 'gainst me lies,
 From the smiling glances of my Boy.

Hell surrounds me when thy form I miss ;
 Hell, whene'er mine eyes thy form behold !
 And the Furies' lash is now thy kiss,
 That from his lips ravish'd me of old !
 From the Grave his Oath still thunders back,
 Ever does his Perjury kill on—
 Here around me twined the Hydra black,
 Add the work of Murder soon was done !

Joseph ! Joseph ! many a weary mile
 May the phantom dread thy steps pursue,
 Catch thee in its ice-cold arms the while,
 From thy dreams of rapture wake thee, too !
 May thine infant's dying gaze so sad
 Glare down from the softly glimm'ring star,
 Meet thee in its bloody vesture clad,
 Scourge thee back from Paradise afar !

See ! there lay it lifeless at my feet—
 Coldly staring, with a mind confus'd
 Saw I then its Life-blood current fleet,
 And my own Life with that current ooz'd ;—
 Fearfully the messengers of doom
 Knock e'en now,—more fearfully my heart !
 Gladly haste I, in the chilly tomb
 Evermore to quench my burning smart.

Joseph ! thou may'st pardon'd be by Heaven,
 Thou art pardon'd by the Sinner, too !
 To the Earth my wrongs be henceforth given !
 Rake, ye Flames, the Death-pile thro' and thro' ?
 Joy ! oh, Joy ! His letters burn on high,
 And a conquering flame his oath devours,
 While his kisses upwards blazing fly !—
 Yet was aught so dear in happier hours !

Sisters, trust your youthful roses ne'er,
 Trust them ne'er to false Man's treach'rous vow !
 Beauty for my Virtue laid its snare,—
 On the Place of Death I curse it now !
 Tears ?—From stranglers' eyes can tears, then, gush ?
 Let my face the bandage quickly veil
 Hangman, canst not thou a lily crush ?
 Do not tremble, Hangman pale !

THE GREATNESS OF THE WORLD.

Thno' the world which the Spirit creative and kind,
 First form'd out of Chaos, I fly like the wind,
 Until on the strand
 Of its billows I land,
 My anchor cast forth where the breeze blows no more,
 And Creation's last boundary stands on the shore.

I saw infant stars into Being arise,
 For thousands of years to roll on through the skies ;
 I saw them in play
 Seek their goal far away.—
 For a moment my fugitive gaze wander'd on,—
 I look'd round me, and lo!—all these bright stars had flown !

Madly yearning to reach the dark Kingdom of Night,
 I boldly steer on with the speed of the light ;

 All misty and drear
 The dim Heavens appear,
 While embryo systems and seas at their source
 Are whirling around the Sun-Wanderer's course.

When sudden a Pilgrim I see drawing near Along the lone path.—“ Stay! What seekest thou here? ”

 “ My bark, tempest-tost,
 “ Seeks the world's distant coast,
 “ I sail tow'rd the land where the breeze blows no
 more,
 “ And Creation's last boundary stands on the shore.”

“ Stay, thou sailest in vain ! 'Tis INFINITY yonder ! ”— “ 'Tis INFINITY, too, where thou, Pilgrim, wouldest wander !

 “ Eagle thoughts that aspire,
 “ Let your proud pinions tire !
 “ For 'tis here that sweet Phantasy, bold to the last,
 “ Her anchor in hopeless dejection must cast ! ”

ELEGY ON THE DEATH OF A YOUNG MAN.*

MOURNFUL groans, as when the Tempest lowers,
 Echo from the dreamy house of Woe ;
 Death-notes rise from yonder Minster's towers !
 Bearing out a youth they slowly go ;
 Yes ! a youth—unripe yet for the Bier,
 Gather'd in the spring-time of his days,

* The youth's name was John Christian Weckherlin.

Thrilling yet with pulses strong and clear,
 With the flame that in his bright eye plays—
 Yes! a Son—the Idol of his Mother,
 (Oh, her mournful sigh shows that too well!)
 Yes! my Bosom-friend,—alas, my Brother!—
 Up! each Man, the sad procession swell!

Do ye boast, ye Pines, so grey and old,
 Storms to brave, with thunderbolts to sport?
 And ye Hills, that ye the Heavens uphold?
 And, ye Heavens, that ye the Suns support?
 Boasts the greybeard, who on haughty Deeds
 As on billows, seeks Perfection's height?
 Boasts the Hero, whom his Prowess leads
 Up to the future Glory's Temple bright?
 If the gnawing worms the flow'ret blast,
 Who can madly think he ne'er decays?
 Who above, below, can hope to last,
 If the young man's life thus flees away?

Joyously his days of youth so glad
 Danced along in rosy garb beclad,
 And the world, the world was then so sweet!
 And how kindly, how enchantingly
 Smiled the Future,—with what golden eye
 Did Life's Paradise his moments greet!
 While the tear his Mother's eye escap'd,
 Under him the Realm of Shadows gap'd,
 And the Fates his thread began to sever,—
 Earth and Heaven then vanish'd from his sight,
 From the Grave-Thought shrank he in affright—
 Sweet the world is to the Dying ever!

Dumb and deaf 'tis in that narrow place,
 Deep the Slumbers of the Buried One!
 Brother! Ah, in ever-slack'ning race
 All thy hopes their circuit cease to run!
 Sunbeams oft thy native hill still have,
 But their glow thou never more canst feel;
 O'er its flowers the Zephyr's pinions wave,
 O'er thine ear its murmur ne'er can steal;

Love will never tinge thine eye with gold,
 Ne'er wilt thou embrace thy blooming bride.
 Not e'en though our tears in torrents roll'd—
 Death must now thine eye for ever hide !

Yet 'tis well !—for precious is thy Rest,
 In that narrow house tho Sleep is calm ;
 There, with Rapture, Sorrow leaves the breast,—
 Man's afflictions there no longer harm.
 Slander may now wildly rave o'er thee,
 And Temptation vomit Poison Fell,
 O'er thee wrangle on the Pharisee,
 Murd'rous bigots banish thee to Hell !
 Rogues beneath Apostle-masks may leer,
 And the Bastard Child of Justice play,
 As it were with dice with mankind here,
 And so on, untill the Judgment Day !

O'er thee Fortune still may juggle on,
 For her minions blindly look around,—
 Man now totter on his staggering throne,
 And in dreary riddles now be found !
 Blest art thou, within thy narrow cell !
 To this stir of tragic-comedy,
 To these Fortune-Waves that madly swell,
 To this vain and childish Lottery.
 To this busy crowd effecting naught,
 To this rest with labor teeming o'er,
 Brother !—to this Heaven with Devils fraught,
 Now thine eyes have closed for evermore.

Fare thee well, oh, thou to memory dear.
 By our blessings lull'd to slumbers sweet !
 Sleep on calmly in thy prison drear,—
 Sleep on calmly till again we meet !
 Till the loud Almighty trumpet sounds,
 Echoing through these corpse-cumber'd hills,...
 Till God's storm-wind, bursting through the bounds Placed by Death, with Life those Corpses fills—
 Till, impregnate with Jehovah's blast,
 Graves bring forth, and at His menace dread,
 In the smoke of Planets melting fast,
 Once again the tombs give up their Dead !

Not in Worlds, as dreamt of by the Wise,
 Not in Heavens, as sung in Poets' song,
 Not in e'en the People's Paradise—

Yet we shall o'ertake thee, and ere long.
 Is that true which cheer'd the Pilgrim's gloom?
 Is it true that Thoughts can yonder be?
 True, that Virtue guides us o'er the tomb?
 That 'tis more than empty Phantasy?
 All these riddles are to thee unveil'd!
 Truth thy Soul ecstatic now drinks up,
 Truth in radiance thousandfold exhal'd
 From the Mighty Father's blissful cup.

Dark and silent Bearers draw, then, nigh!
 To the Slayer serve the Feast the while!
 Cease, ye Monners, cease your wailing cry!
 Dust on dust upon the Body pile!
 Where's the Man who God to tempt presumes?
 Where the eye that through the Gulf can see?
 Holy, holy, holy art thou, God of Tombs!
 We, with awful trembling, worship Thee!
 Dust may back to native dust be ground,
 From its crumbling house the Spirit fly.
 And the storm its ashes strew around,—
 But its Love, its Love shall never die!

THE BATTLE.

With a dull, heavy tread,
 Like a storm-cloud o'erhead,
 Moves the march through the wide plain so green;
 And the field for the strife,
 Where the stake is man's life,
 In its boundless expanse is now seen.

Tow'rd the ground ev'ry eye is uneasily cast,
 And each warrior's heart 'gainst his ribs beateth fast

To the front now the Major with thundering pace
 Gallops on past each pallid and death-lighted face—Halt!

And the regiments obey that stern word of command
 Y hile in silence unbroken the front takes its stand.

Glittering in the morning beam,
 See ye on yon hill the gleam?
 Is't the banner of the foe?
 Yes, their waving flag we know!

Wife and children of my love,
 God protect ye from above!

Now merrily, merrily rise on the ear
 The roll of the drum and the fife's note so clear;
 Oh! hark to the wildly harmonious tone,
 How it thrills through the marrow and thrills through the bone!

God be with ye, comrades brave,—
 We shall meet beyond the grave!

Soon the vivid lightning flashes,
 Soon the rolling thunder crashes
 From the fierce artillery;
 Eyelids quiver,—loud are heard
 Fearful sounds,—the signal word
 Through each rank runs rapidly.
 In God's name, so let it be!—
 Ev'ry breast now breathes more free.

Death is loose, the din grows louder,—
 Sharper rings the musketry;
 Driven by the deadly powder
 Iron bullets fill the sky.

Almost touching each other the armies now stand,—
 From platoon to platoon runs the word of command
 "Make ready!" with thundering roar;
 And sudden the foremost on knee sinking low,
 Their death-laden weapons discharge on the foe.
 But many, alas! rise no more.
 By the grapeshot resistless whole ranks are o'erthrown:
 But as fast as the ranks in the front are mown down,
 O'er their bodies the hinder ranks pour.

Devastation spreads around,
 Whole battalions bite the ground.

VERSES WRITTEN IN THE ALBUM OF A YOUNG LADY 99

But now,—Oh, may he be accurs'd!—appear'd
 A Great Man, aye, a Shining Spirit, too.
 The Great Man did a deed!—and overthrew
 The house of cards that I tow'rd heaven had rear'd.
 What have I now?—What sad exchange is this!—
 Awaken'd from my madd'ning dream of bliss,
 What of this Angel now remains to me?
 A spirit strong within a body weak,
 Hermaphroditic, so to speak;
 Alike unfit for love or mystery—
 A child, who with a giant's weapons rages,
 A cross between baboons and sages!
 One that has fled the fairer race,
 To gain among the stronger a vain place,
 Hurl'd headlong from a throne eternal,
 Flying the mysteries by Charm controll'd—
 Eras'd from Cytherea's Book of Gold,*
 To gain a corner—in a Journal.

VERSES WRITTEN IN THE ALBUM OF A YOUNG LADY.

SWEET friend, the world, like some fair infant blest,
 Radiant with sportive grace, around thee plays:
 Yet 'tis not as depicted in thy breast—
 Not as within thy soul's fair glass, its rays
 Are mirror'd. The respectful fealty
 That my heart's nobleness hath won for thee,
 The miracles thou workest ev'rywhere,
 The charms thy being to this life first lent,—
 To it, mere charms to reckon thou'rt content,
 To us, they seem humanity so fair.
 The witchery sweet of ne'er-polluted youth,
 The talisman of innocence and truth—
 Him I would see, who these to scorn can dare!
 Thou revellest joyously in telling o'er
 The blooming flowers that round thy path are strown,—
 The glad, whom thou hast made so evermore,—
 The souls that thou hast conquer'd for thine own.

* The Golden Book is the Roll in which, in some of the Italian Republics, the names of noble Families were inscribed.

In thy deceit so blissful be thou glad!
 Never let a wailing disenchanted sad
 Hunt thee departing from thy dream's proud light!
 Like the fair flowers that thy beads perfume,
 Observe them, but never touch them as they bloom,—
 I hate them, but only for the distant sight
 Created only to enchain the eye,
 In faded beauty as thy feet thy'll fly,
 The nearer thee, the nearer their long night!

THE MEETING.

I see her still—by her fair train surrounded,
 The furthest of them all, she took her place;
 Alas! I stood, by her bright charms confounded,
 For, oh! they dazzled with their heavenly grace.
 With awe my soul was fill'd—with bliss unbounded,
 While gazing on her softly radiant face;
 But soon, as if up-borne on wings of fire,
 My fingers 'gan to sweep the sounding lyre.
 The thoughts that rush'd across me in that hour,
 The words I sang, I'd fain once more invoke;
 Within, I felt a new-awakened power,
 That each emotion of my bosom spoke.
 My soul, long time enchain'd in sloth's dull bower,
 Through all its fetters now triumphant broke;
 And brought to light unknown, harmonious numbers,
 Which, in its deepest depths, had liv'd in slumbers.
 And when the chorists had cens'd their gentle sighing,
 And when my soul rejoic'd its mortal frame,
 I look'd up on her face and saw love vying,
 In every feature, with her maiden shame,
 And soon my ravish'd heart seem'd heavenward flying,
 When her soft whisper o'er my senses came.
 The blissful seraph's choral strains alone
 Can glad mine ear again with that sweet tone.

Of that fond heart, which pining silently,
 Ne'er ventures to express its feelings lowly,
 The real and modest worth is known to me—
 'Gainst cruel fate I'll guard its cause so holy.
 Most blest of all, the meek one's lot shall be—Love's flowers by love's own hand are gathered solely—
 The fairest prize to that fond heart is due,
 That feels it, and that beats responsive too!

TO EMMA.

FAR away, where darkness reigneth,
 All my dreams of bliss are flown;
 Yet with love my gaze remaineth
 Fixed on one fair star alone.
 But, alas! that star so bright
 Sheds no lustre save by night.

If in slumbers ending never,
 Gloomy death had seal'd thine eyes,
 Thou hadst liv'd in memory over—
 Thou hadst liv'd still in my sighs;
 But, alas! in light thou livest—
 To my love no answer givest!

Can the sweet hopes love once cherish'd . . .
 Emma, can they transient prove?
 What has pass'd away and perish'd—
 Emma, say, can that be love?
 That bright flame of heavenly birth—
 Can it die like things of earth?

THE SECRET.

SHE sought to breathe one word, but vainly—
 Too many listeners were nigh;
 And yet my timid glance read plainly
 The language of her speaking eye.

The silent shades my footsteps press,
Thou fair and leaf-embosom'd grove!
Conceal within thy green recesses
From mortal eye our wreted love!

Afar with strange discordant noises,
The busy day is echoing:

And, mid the hollow hum of voices,
I hear the heavy hammer ring.

'Tis thus that man, with toil never-ending,
Exerts from Heaven his daily bread;

Yet oft unseen the Gods are sending
The gifts of fortune on his head!

Oh, let mankind discover never
How true love fills our hearts!

They would but crush our joy forever,
For joy to them no glow imparts.

Thou never wilt from the world obtain it—
'Tis never captured save as prey;

Thou needs must strain each nerve to gain it,
Ever Envy dark asserts her sway.

The hours of night and stillness loving,
It comes upon us silently—

Away with hasty footsteps moving
Soon as it sees a trencher's eye.

Thou gentle stream, soft circles weaving,
A wistful barrier cast around,

And, with thy waves in anger heaving,
Guard from each foe this holy ground!

EXPECTATION.

Hear I the portal not flying?
Hear I the lutelet not fall?
No, 'tis but the Zephyr sighing
Gently through the poplars tall.

Put on thy fairest dress, thou leafy grove,
To welcome her sweet face its charms displaying!
Ye branches weave a shady roof above,
When she, at eve's soft hour, is hither straying!

And all ye balmy winds, that sportive rove,
 Awake, and round her blushing cheeks 'gin playing,
 Soon as her foot, all gently moving on,
 Its beauteous burden bears to Love's own throne !

Hark to yon sound that seems parting
 The bushes, and hastening near !—
 No, 'tis but the bird upstarting
 From the copse, in sudden fear !

Oh, quench thy torch, bright Day ! And thou, pale
 Night,
 With thy propitious silence o'er us hover !
 Around us spread a veil of purplè light !
 Let mystic boughs our blissful meeting cover !
 From listeners' ears, Love's raptures take their flight,
 They fly when Phœbus' beams the world rule over ;
 For Hesperus alone, who silently
 Casts down his rays, their confidant can be !

Hear I not soft whispers cleaving
 Tho air as tho echoes they wake ?
 No, 'tis but the cygnet weaving
 Circlets in the silv'ry lake !

A flood of harmony mine ear assails,—
 The fountain's gush with murmur sweet is falling—
 The west wind's balmy kiss the flow'ret hails,—
 And all creation smiles with joy enthralling ;
 Tho purple grape, tho luscious peach that veils,
 'Neath shelt'ring leaves, its charms, seem softly calling ;
 The incense-bearing Zephyrs, as they blow,
 Drink from my burning cheeks their fiery glow !

Down through yon laurel-walk rushing,
 Hear not I footsteps resound ?
 No, 'tis but the fruit all blushing, .
 Falling ripen'd to the ground !

In gentle death now sinks day's flaming eye,
 And all his gorgeous hues are fast declining ;
 Tho flowers, that 'neath his fiery an'or sigh,
 Open their cups, wher twilight soft 'gins shining ;

The moon her silver beams shed silently,—
 The world in shadows when the form is shining;
 Each charm it's envying galleys aside,
 And beauty stands at eld in modest pride!

Is not a white form advancing?
 Glides not its soft-musling train?
 No, 'tis but the yew-trees glancing
 You dim columns back again!

With sweet but airy dreams like these to jilly,
 No longer be content, thou bosom painting!
 No shadowy bliss my heart's mad thirst can stay—
 She whom this art would clasp, alas, is wanting!
 Oh, galle her living, her alluring charms this way!
 Oh, let me press her hand, with joy exclaiming!
 Too very shadow of her heart's dream—
 But to!—a form of life assumes my dream!

And as, from the Il avens descending,
 Approves the sweet moment of bliss,
 In silence her steps with a bending,
 She waketh her love with a kiss!

EVENING.

(AFTER A PICTURE.)

O! thou bright-beaming God, the plains are thirsting, Thirsting for freshening dew, and man is pining;
 Weary move on thy horses—
 Let, then, thy chariot descend!

Gest thou her who, from Ocean's crystal billows, Love'sly mads and smiles?—Thy heart must know her!
 Joyously sped on thy horses,—
 Tethys, the Goddess, its mads!

Swiftly from out his flaming chariot leaping,
 Into her arms he springs,—the reins takes Cupid,— Quietly stand the horses,
 Drinking the cooling blood.

Now, from the Heavens with gentle step descending,
 Balmy Night appears, by sweet Love follow'd;
 Mortals, rest ye and love ye,— Phœbus, the loving one, rests!

LONGING.

Could I from this valley dear,
 Where the mist hangs heavily,
 Soar to some more blissful sphere,
 Ah! how happy should I be!
 Distant hills enchant my sight,
 Ever young and ever fair;
 To these hills I'd take my flight
 Had I wings to scale the air.

Harmonies mine ear assail,
 Tones that breathe a heavenly calm;
 And the gentle-sighing gale
 Greets me with its fragrant balm.
 Peeping through the shady bowers,
 Golden fruits their charms display,
 And these sweetly-blooming flowers
 Ne'er become cold winter's prey.

THE PILGRIM.

103

Yet I 'twas in life's happy morning
That I first began to roam,
And, Youth's transient pleasures scorning,
Left for aye my native home.
All the wealth by fate imparted
To the winds with joy I hurst;
Then with conscience single-hearted,
Grop'd my staff, and sought the world.
By a mighty impulse driven—
By a voice of mystic strength—
"Go!" it cried, "to thee 'tis given Happiness to reach at length.
"When thou seest a golden portal
Star above thy way, enter in;
There each thing that earth made mortal,
Heavenly is, and free from sin."
Evening came, and morn succeeded,
On I went unweary'd;
But the rest my bosom needed -
Ever from me seemed to fly.
In my path lay mountain ridges,
Streams to hem my progress roll'd;
Yet I spann'd their gulfs with bridges—
Cross'd each flood with courage bold.
Till at length I reached a torrent—
Eastward ran its waters clear;
Trusting fondly to the current,
In I plunged without a fear.
Soon into a mighty ocean
I was carried by the stream;
Vain now prov'd my self-devotion,—
All was but an empty dream!
Naught, alas, can lead me thither!—
You bright realms of Heaven so clear
Nor can send their brightness hither—
And the There is never here!

THE IDEALS.

AND wilt thou, Faithless one, then, leave me,
 With all thy magic phantasy,—
 With all the thoughts that joy or grieve me,
 Wilt thou with all for ever fly?
 Can naught delay thine onward motion,
 Thou golden time of life's young dream?
 In vain! Eternity's wide ocean
 Ceaselessly drowns thy rolling stream.

The glorious suns my youth enchanting
 Have set in never-ending night;
 Those blest Ideals now are wanting
 That swell'd my heart with mad delight.
 The offspring of my dream hath perish'd,
 My faith in Being pass'd away;
 The godlike hopes that once I cherish'd
 Are now Reality's sad prey.

As once Pygmalion, fondly yearning,
 Embrac'd the statue form'd by him,
 Till the cold marble's cheeks were burning,
 And life diffus'd through ev'ry limb,—
 So I, with youthful passion fired,
 My longing arms round Nature threw
 Till, clinging to my breast inspired,
 She 'gan to breathe, to kindle, too.

And all my fiery ardor proving,
 Though mute, her tale she soon could tell,
 Return'd each kiss I gave her loving,
 The throbbings of my heart read well.
 Then living seem'd each tree, each flower,
 Then sweetly sang the waterfall,
 And e'en the soulless in that hour
 Shar'd in the heav'nly bliss of all.

For then a circling World was bursting
 My bosom's narrow prison-cell,
 To enter into Being thirsting,
 In deed, word, shape, and sound as well.
 This world, how wondrous great I deem'd it,
 Ere yet its blossoms could unfold!

When open, oh, how little seem'd it !
 That little, oh, how mean and cold !

How happy, wing'd by courage daring,
 The youth Life's merry path first press'd—
 No care his manly strength impairing,
 And in his dream's sweet vision blest !
 The dimmest star in air's dominion
 Seem'd not too distant for his light ;
 His young and ever-eager pinion
 Soar'd far beyond all mortal sight.

Thus joyously tow'rd Heaven ascending,
 Was nought for his bright hopes too far ?
 The airy guides his steps attending,
 How danced they round Life's radiant car !
 Soft Love was there, her guerdon bearing,
 And Fortune, with her crown of gold,
 And Fame, her starry chaplet wearing,
 And Truth, in majesty untold.

But while the goal was yet before them,
 The faithless guides began to stray ;
 Impatience of their task came o'er them,
 Then one by one they dropp'd away.
 Light-footed Fortune first retreating,
 Then Wisdom's thirst remain'd unstill'd,
 While heavy storms of doubt were beating
 Upon the path Truth's radiance fill'd.

I saw Fame's sacred wreath adorning
 The brows of an unworthy crew ;
 And, ah ! how soon Love's happy morning,
 When spring had vanish'd, vanish'd too .
 More silent yet, and yet more weary,
 Became the desert path I trod ;
 And even Hope a glimmer dreary
 Scarce cast upon the gloomy road.

Of all that train, so bright with gladness,
 Oh, who is faithful to the end ?
 Who now will seek to cheer my sadness,
 And to the grave my steps attend ?

Thou, Friendship, of all guides the fairest,
 Who gently healest ev'ry wound ;
 Who all Life's heavy burdens sharest,
 'Thou, whom I early sought and found !

Employment, too, thy loving neighbor,
 Who quells the bosom's rising storms ;
 Who ne'er grows weary of her labor,
 And ne'er destroys, though slow she forms ;
 Who, though but grains of sand she places
 To swell eternity sublime,
 Yet minutes, days, aye ! years effaces
 From the dread reckoning kept by 'Time !

THE MAIDEN'S LAMENT.

'Till clouds fast gather,
 'The forest-oaks roar,—
 A maiden is sitting Beside the green shore,—
 'The billows are breaking with might, with might,
 And she sighs aloud in the darkling night,
 Her eyelids heavy with weeping.

“ My heart's dead within me,
 The world is a void ;
 To the wish it gives nothing,
 Each hope is destroy'd.
 I have tasted the fulness of bliss below—
 I have liv'd, I have lov'd,—thy child, oh take now, Thou Holy One, into thy keeping !”

“ In vain is thy sorrow,
 In vain thy tears fall,
 For the Dead from their slumbers
 They ne'er can recall ;
 Yet if aught can pour comfort and balm in thy heart,
 Now that love its sweet pleasures no more can impart,
 Speak thy wish, and thou granted shalt find it !”

“ Though in vain is my sorrow,
 Though in vain my tears fall,—

THE YOUTH AT THE BROOK.

Though the Dead from their slumbers
 They ne'er can recall,
 Yet no balm is so sweet to the desolate heart,
 When love its soft pleasures no more can impart,
 As the torments that love leaves behind it!"

THE YOUTH AT THE BROOK

Near a brook a boy is sitting,
 Twining many a garland gay;
 But, alas! he sees them ever
 Hurried by the stream away.
 "Restless as those dancing waters,
 My sad days are fleeting on;
 Transient as those fragrant garlands,
 Lo! my youth will soon be gone.

"Ask me not why I am sorrowing
 In the spring-time of my years!
 Joy and hope fill every creature
 Soon as smiling Spring appears;
 But the thousand voices hailing
 Nature wak'ning from her sleep,
 In my bosom waken only
 Anguish bitter, torments deep.

"What avail to me the pleasures
 Spring is able to convey?
 There is only one I sigh for,
 Yet, though near, 'tis far away.
 Fain I'd seize the flattering vision,
 Fain I'd clasp it to my breast;
 But, alas! it ever flies me,
 And my heart remains oppress'd.

"Leave thy castle proud behind thee
 Hither, maiden, wend thy way;
 And I'll fill thy lap with flowers,
 Offspring of all-bounteous May.

Hark ! the streamlet softly murmurs,
Joyous carols fill the air ;
E'en a cottage is a palace
To a happy, loving pair !"

THE FAVOR OF THE MOMENT.

So, at length, once more we meet
In the Muses' glad domain !
Let us twine a garland sweet,
Fit to grace their brows again !

To what God shall we now bring Earliest tribute of our lays ?
Let us first His glory sing,
Who with bliss our toil repays.

What avails it that a Soul
Ceres breathes into the shrine ?
That great Bacchus brims the bowl
With the red blood of the vine ?

If that spark which set on fire
Mortal hearths, comes not from high,
Joy will ne'er the soul inspire,
And the heart will vainly sigh.

From the clouds must fortune fall,
From the lap of Deities ;
And the mightiest Lord of all
Is the moment as it flies.

'Mongst the things that have their birth
'Neath eternal Nature's sway,
Naught is god-like here on earth,
Save the thought's all-piercing ray.

Slowly stone and stone unite,
As the circling seasons roll ;
But our work will see the light
Soon as fashion'd by the soul.

As the sunlight's radiant glow
 Weaves a golden tapestry—
 As upon her gorgeous bow
 Iris quivers in the sky,

So each gift that joys the heart
 Fleeth as a gleam of light;
 Soon for aye it must depart
 To the darksome tomb of night.

MOUNTAIN SONG.

Van bridge o'er the giddy abyss will conduct,
 From life unto death 'tis the portal;
 But figures gigantic the lone way obstruct,
 And threaten to crush thee, frail mortal!
 And, wouldst thou not waken the avalanche dread,
 The terrible path thou must noiselessly tread.

High over the brink of the chasm profound
 An arch is in triumph suspended;
 'Twas rais'd not by science of man from the ground.
 His thoughts to such heights ne'er ascended,
 Below, late and early, the fierce torrent boils—
 Assails it in fury, but fruitlessly toils.

A dark and mysterious gate opens wide,
 Beyond seem the shadow-realms dreaded;
 But sudden a region of bliss is deseried,
 Where autumn and spring-time are wedded;
 Oh, would I could fly to that vale of repose
 From the labors of life, and its ne'er-ending woes!

Four streams to the plain with wild roar issue forth,
 Their source remains hidden for ever;
 They flow to the East, to the West, South, and North,
 The world's four great highways they sever.
 And fast as their mother with groans gives them birth,
 They fly away swiftly and vanish from earth.

Two peaks, far above the weak gaze of mankind
 From Ether's blue vault seem advancing ;
 Upon them, in vapor all-golden enshrined,
 'Tho clouds, Heaven's daughters, are dancing.
 Their course all alone they unceasing pursue,
 The eye of no mortal their progress can view.

The Queen, on a throne that no time can e'er change
 In glory and brightness is sitting ;—
 She weareth a chaplet of diamonds strange
 'To grace her fair forehead befitting.
 The sun shoots his arrows of light at her over—
 They gild her, 'tis true, but their warmth they give never !

THE ALPINE HUNTER.

WILT thou not the lambkins guard ?
 Oh, how soft and meek they look,
 Feeding on the grassy sward,
 Sporting round the silv'ry brook !
 "Mother, mother, let me go
 On you heights to chase the roe !"

Wilt thou not the flock compel
 With the horn's inspiring notes ?
 Sweet the echo of yon bell,
 As across the wood it floats !
 "Mother, mother, let me go
 On you heights to hunt the roe !"

Wilt thou not the flow'rets bind,
 Smiling gently in their bed ?
 For no garden thou wilt find
 On you heights so wild and dread.
 "Leave the flow'rets,—let them blow !
 Mother, mother, let me go !"

And before him, like the wind,
Swiftly like the trembling hind.

Up the naked precipice
Clambers she, with footstep light
O'er the crimson'd dark abyss
Leaps with spring of daring night;
But behind, unweariedly,
With his death-bow follows he.

Now upon the rugged top
Stands she,—on the loftiest height,
Where the cliffs abruptly stop,
And the path is lost to sight.
There she views the steeps below,—
Close behind, her mortal foe.

She, with silent woeful gaze,
Seeks the cruel boy to move;
But, alas! in vain she prays—
To the string he fits the groove.
When from out the chinks, behold!
Steps the Mountain Genius old.

With his hand the Deity
Shields the beast that trembling sighs;
"Must thou, even up to me,
Death and anguish send?" he cries,—
"Earth has room for all to dwell,— Why pursue my lov'd gazelle?"

DITHYRAMB.

NEVER,—believe me,—
See we the Deities—
Never alone.
No sooner does Bacchus the Jovial greet me,
Than Love, smiling urchin, comes bounding to me,
me,
Phœbus the Radiant—he, too, is one!
See them advancing,
Crowding the portals!

Soon in my dwelling
Stands each immortal !

Say, ye Divine ones,
How I, a frail creature,
Due homage can pay ?
Bright immortality's end down from Heaven !
Yet what requital by me can be given ?
Oh, to Olympus guide upward my way !
Bliss dwelleth only
In Jupiter's palace ;
Brimming with nectar,
Oh ! give me the chalice !

Give him the chalice
Brim for the Poet,
Hebe the bowl !
Moisten his eyes with the dew we quaff ever,
Let Styx, the dark torrent, be seen by him never,
Let visions celestial brighten his soul !
The heavenly fountain
Sparkles and bubbles,
Gladd'ning the bosom,
And banishing troubles !

THE FOUR AGES OF THE WORLD.

He opens in splendor, with gladness and mirth,
That life which was hid from our eyes ;
Adorns as a temple the dwelling of earth,
That the Muse has bestow'd as his prize.
No roof is so humble, no hut is so low,
But he with Divinities bids it o'erflow.

And as the inventive descendant of Zeus,
On the unalorn'd round of the shield,
With knowledge divine could, reflected, produce
Earth, sea, and the stars' shining field,—
So he, on the moments, as onward they roll,
The image can stamp of the infinite Whole.

From the earliest age of the world he has come,
When nations rejoiced in their prime ;
A wanderer ghul, he has still found a home
With every race through all time.
Four ages of man in his lifetime have died,
And the place they once held by the Fifth is supplie'd.

Saturnus first govern'd, with fatherly smile,
Each day then resembled the last ;
'Then flourish'd the Shepherds, a race without guile—
Their bliss by no care was o'ercast.
They lov'd,—and no other employment they had,
And Earth gave her treasures with willingness glad.

Then Labor came next, and the conflict began
With monsters and beasts fam'd in song ;
And heroes upstart, as rulers of man,
And the weak sought the aid of the strong.
And strife o'er the field of Scamander now reign'd,
But Beauty the God of the world still remain'd.

At length from the conflict bright Victory sprang,
And gentleness blossom'd from might ;
In heavenly chorus the Muses then sang,
And figures divine saw the light ;—
The age that acknowledg'd sweet Phantasy's sway
Can never return, it has fled away.

'The Gods from their seats in the Heavens were hurl'd,
And their pillars of glory o'erthrown ;

And the Son of the Virgin appear'd in the world
 For the sins of mankind to atone.
 Tho fugitive lusts of the sense were suppress'd,
 And man now first grappled with 'Thought in his breast

Each vain and voluptuous charm vanish'd now,
 Wherein the young world took delight ;
 Tho monk and the nun made of penance a vow,
 And the tourney was sought by the knight.
 Though the aspect of life was now dreary and wild,
 Yet Love remain'd over both lovely and mild.

An altar of holiness, free from all stain,
 The Muses in silence uprear'd ;
 And all that was noble and worthy, again
 In woman's chaste bosom appear'd ;
 The bright flame of song was soon kindied anew
 By the minstrel's soft lays, and his love, pure and true.

And so, in a gentle and ne'er-changing band,
 Let woman and minstrel unite ;
 They weave, and they fashion, with hand join'd to hand,
 The girdle of Beauty and Right.
 When love blends with music, in unison sweet,
 The lustre of life's youthful days ne'er can fleet.

PUNCH SONG.

Four elements, join'd in Harmonious strife,
 Shadow the world forth,
 And typify life.

Into the goblet
 The lemon's juice pour ;
 Acid is ever
 Life's innermost core.

Now with the sugar's
 All-softening juice,

The strength of the acid
So burning reduce.

The bright sparkling water
Now pour in the bowl;
Water all-gently
Encircles the whole.

Let drops of the spirit
To join them now flow;
Life to the living
Naught else can bestow.

Drain it off quickly
Before it exhales;
Save when 'tis glowing,
The draught naught avails.

TO MY FRIENDS.

Yrs, my friends!—that happier times have been
Than the present, none can contravene;
That a race once liv'd of nobler worth;
And if ancient chronicles were dumb,
Countless stones in witness forth would come
From the deepest entrails of the earth.
But this highly-favor'd race has gone,
Gone for ever to the realms of night,
We, we live! The moments are our own,
And the living judge the right.

Brighter zones, my friends, no doubt excel
This, the land wherein we're doom'd to dwell
As the hardy travelers proclaim;
But if Nature has denied us much,
Art is yet responsive to our touch,
And our hearts can kindle at her flame,
If the laurel will not flourish here—
If the myrtle is cold winter's prey,
Yet the vine, to crown us, year by year,
Still puts forth its foliage gay.

Of a busier life 'tis well to speak,
 Where four worlds their wealth to barter seek,
 On the world's great market, Thames' broad stream ;
 Ships in thousands go there and depart—
 There are seen the costliest works of art,
 And the earth-god, Mammon, reigns supreme :
 But the sun his image only graves
 On the silent streamlet's level plain,
 Not upon the torrent's muddy waves,
 Swollen by heavy rain.

Far more bless'd than we, in Northern States,
 Dwells the beggar at the Angel-gates,
 For he sees the peerless city—Rome !
 Beauty's glorious charms around him lie,
 And a second Heaven up tow'rd the sky
 Mounts St. Peter's proud and wondrous dome.
 But, with all the charms that splendor grants,
 Rome is but the tomb of ages past ;
 Life but smiles upon the blooming plants
 That the seasons round her cast.

Greater actions elsewhere may be rife
 Than with us, in our contracted life—
 But beneath the sun there's naught that's new ;
 Yet we see the great of ev'ry age
 Pass before us on the world's wide stage
 Thoughtfully and calmly in review :
 All in life repeats itself for ever,
 Young for aye is phantasy alone ;
 What has happen'd nowhere,—happen'd never,—
 That has never older grown !

PUNCH SONG.

(TO BE SUNG IN NORTHERN COUNTRIES.)

On the mountain's breezy summit,
 Where the Southern sunbeams shine
 Aided by their warming vigor,
 Nature yields the golden wine,

How the wondrous mother formeth,
None have ever read aright ;
Hid for ever is her working,
And inscrutable her might.

Sparkling as a son of Phœbus,
As the fiery source of light,
From the vat it bubbling springeth,
Purple, and as crystal bright ;

And rejoiceth all the senses,
And in ev'ry sorrowing breast
Poureth Hope's refreshing balsam,
And on life bestows new zest.

But their slanting rays all feebly
On our zone the sunbeams shoot ;
They can only tinge the foliage,
But they ripen ne'er the fruit.

Yet the North insists on living,
And what lives will merry be ;
So although the grape is wanting,
We invent wine cleverly.

Pale the drink we now are offering
On the household altar here ;
But what living Nature maketh,
Sparkling is and ever clear.

Let us, from the brimming goblet,
Drain the troubled flood with mirth.
Art is but a gift of Heaven,
Borrowed from the glow of earth.

Even strength's dominions boundles'
'Neath her rule obedient lie ;
From the old the new she fashions
With creative energy.

She the elements' close union
Severs with her sov'reign nod ;

With the flame upon the altar,
Emulates the great Sun God.

For the distant, happy islands,
Now the vessel sallies forth,
And the Southern fruits, all-golden,
Pours upon the eager North.

As a type, then,—as an image,
Be to us this fiery jnico,
Of the wonders that frail mortals
Can with steadfast will produce !

NADOWESSIAN DEATH-LAMENT.

See, he sitteth on his mat,
Sitteth there upright,
With the græco with which he sat
While he saw the light.

Where is now the sturdy gripe,—
Where the breath sedate,
That so lately whiff'd the pipe
Tow'rd the Spirit Great ?

Where the bright and falcœn eye,
That the reindeer's tread
On the waving grass could spy,
Thick with dew-drops spread ?

Where the limbs that used to dart
Swifter through the snow
Than the twenty-member'd hart
Than the mountain roe ?

Where the arm that sturdily
Bent the deadly bow ?
See, its life hath fled by,
See, it hangeth low !

Happy he!—He now has gone
 Where no snow is found;
 Where with mace the fields are sown,
 Self-prung from the ground;

Where with birds each bush is fill'd,
 Where with game the wood;
 Where the fish, with joy instill'd,
 Wanton in the flood.

With the spirits blest he feeds,—
 Leaves us here in gloom;
 We can only praise his deeds,
 And his corpse entomb.

Farewell-gifts, then, hither bring,
 Sound the death-note sad!
 Bury with him ev'rything
 That can make him glad.

'Neath his head the hatchet hide
 That he boldly swung;
 And the bear's fat haunch beside,
 For the road is long;

And the knife, well sharpened
 That, with slashes three,
 Scalp and skin from foeman's head
 Tore off skilfully.

And to paint his body, place
 Dyes within his hand;
 Let him shine with ruddy grace
 In the Spirit-Land!

THE FEAST OF VICTORY.

PRIAM's castle-walls had sunk,
 Troy in dust and ashes lay,
 And each Greek, with triumph drunk
 Richly laden with his prey,

sat upon his ship's high prow,
 On the Hellespontic strand,
 Starting on his journey now,
 Bound for Greece, his own fair land.
 Raise the glad, exulting shout !
 Tow'rd the land that gave them birth
 Turn they now the ships about,
 As they seek their native earth.

And in rows, all mournfully,
 Sat the Trojan women there,—
 Beat their breasts in agony,
 Pallid, with dishevell'd hair.
 In the feast of joy so glad
 Mingled they the song of woe,
 Weeping o'er their fortunes sad,
 In their country's overthrow,
 "Land belov'd, oh, fare thee well !
 By our foreign masters led,
 Far from home we're doom'd to dwell,—
 Ah, how happy are the dead !"

Soon the blood by Cæchus spilt
 On the altar heavenward smokes ;
 Pallas, by whom towns are built
 And destroy'd, the priest invokes ;
 Neptune, too, who all the earth
 With his billowy girdle laves,—
 Zeus, who gives to terror birth,
 Who the dreaded Ægis waves.
 Now the weary fight is done,
 Ne'er again to be renew'd ;
 Time's wide circuit now is run,
 And the mighty town subdued !

Atreus' son, the army's head,
 Told the people's numbers o'er,
 Whom he, as their captain, led
 To Scamander's vale of yore.
 Sorrow's black and heavy clouds
 Pass'd across the monarch's brow;
 Of those vast and valiant crowds,
 Oh, how few were left him now
 Joyful songs let each one raise,
 Who will see his home again,

In whose veins the life-blood plays,
For, alas, not all remain !

“ All who homeward wend their way,
Will not there find peace of mind ;
On their household altars, they Murder foul perchance may find,
Many fall by false friend's stroke,
Who in fight immortal prov'd : ” —
So Ulysses warning spoke,
By Athene's spirit mov'd.
Happy he, whose faithful sponso
Guards his home with honor true !
Woman oft-times breaks her vows,
Ever loves she what is new.

And Atreides glories there
In the prize he won in fight,
And around her body fair
Twines his arms with fond delight,
Evil works must punish'd be,
Vengeance follows after crime,
For Kronon's just decree
Rules the heav'nly courts sublime.
Evil must in evil end ;
Zeus will on the impious band
Woe for broken guest-rights send,
Weighing with impartial hand.

“ It may well the glad best,”
Cried Oileus' valiant son,*
“ To extol the Gods who sit
On Olynopus' lofty throne !
Fortune all her gifts supplies,
Blindly, and no justice knows,
For Patroclus buried lies,
And Theresites homeward goes !
Since she blindly throws away
Each lot in her wheel contain'd,
Let him shout with joy to-day
Who the prize of life has gain'd.

* Ajax the Less.

"Aye, the wars the best devour !
 Brother, we will think of thee,
 In the fight a very tower,
 When we join in revelry !
 When the Grecian ships were fir'd,
 By thine arm was safety brought ;
 Yet the man by craft inspir'd *
 Won the spoils thy valor sought.
 Peace be to thine ashes blest !
 'Thou wert vanquish'd not in fight :
 Anger 'tis destroys the best,— Ajax fell by Ajax's might !"

Neoptolemus pour'd, then,
 'To his sire renown'd † the wine—
 " 'Mongst the lots of earthly men,
 Mighty father, prize I thine !
 Of the goods that life supplies,
 Greatest far of all is fame ;
 Though to dust the body flies,
 Yet still lives a noble name.
 Valiant one, thy glory's ray
 Will immortal be in song ;
 For, though life may pass away,
 To all time the dead belong !"

" Since the voice of minstrelsy
 Speaks not of the vanquish'd man,
 I will Hector's witness be,"— Tydeus' noble son ‡ began :
 " Fighting bravely in defence
 Of his household-gods he fell.—
 Great the victor's glory thence,
 He in purpose did excel !
 Battling for his altars dear,
 Sank that rock, no more to rise ;
 E'en the foeman will revere
 One whose honor'd name ne'er dies."

* Ulysses.

† Achilles.

‡ Diomed.

Nestor, joyous reveller old,
 Who three generations saw,
 Now the leaf-crown'd cup of gold,
 Gave to weeping Heecuba,
 " Drain the goblet's draught so cool,
 And forget each painful smart !
 Bacchus' gifts are wonderful,—
 Balsam for a broken heart.
 Drain the goblet's draught so cool,
 And forget each painful smart !
 Bacchus' gifts are wonderful,—
 Balsam for a broken heart.

" E'en to Niobe, whom Heaven
 Lov'd in wrath to persecute,
 Respite from her pangs was given,
 'Tasting of the corn's ripe fruit
 Whilst the thirsty lip we have
 In the foaming, living spring,
 Buried deep in Lethe's wave
 Lies all grief, all sorrowing !
 Whilst the thirsty lip we have
 In the foaming, living spring,
 Swallow'd up in Lethe's wave
 Is all grief, all sorrowing ! "

And the Prophetess * inspir'd
 By her God, upstart'd now,—
 Tow'rd the smoke of homesteads fir'd,
 Looking from the lofty prow.
 " Smoke is each thing here below ;
 Ev'ry worldly greatness dies,
 As the vapory columns go,—
 None are fixed but Deities !
 Cares behind the horseman sit—
 Round about the vessel play ;
 Lest the morrow hinder it,
 Let us, therefore, live to-day."

THE LAMENT OF CERES.

Is't the beauteous spring I see?
 Has the earth grown young again?
 Sun-lit hills grow verdantly,
 Bursting through their icy chain.
 From the streamlet's mirror blue
 Smiles the now unclouded sky,
 Zephyr's wings wave milder, too,—
 Youthful blossoms ope their eye.
 In the grove, sweet songs resound,
 Speaks the Oread as of yore;
 Once again thy flow'rs are found,
 But thy daughter comes no more.

Ah, how long 'tis since I went
 First in search o'er earth's wide face:
 Titan! All thy rays I sent
 Seeking for the lov'd one's trace;
 Of that form so dear, no ray
 Hath as yet brought news to me,
 And the all-discerning day
 Cannot yet the lost one see.
 Hast thou, Zeus, her from me torn?
 Or to Oreus' gloomy streams,
 Is she down by Pluto borne,
 Smitten by her charms' bright beams?

Who will to yon dreary strand
 Be the herald of my woe?
 Ever leaves the bark the land,
 Yet but shadows in it go.
 To each bless'd eye evermore
 Clos'd the night-like fields remain;
 Styx no living form e'er bore,
 Since his stream first wash'd the plain.
 Thousand paths lead downward there,
 None lead up again to light;
 And her tears no witness e'er
 Brings to her sad mother's sight.

Mothers who, from Pyrrha sprung,
 From a mortal race descend,
 May, the tomb's fierce flames among,
 On their children lov'd attend;

Denizens of Heaven alone
Draw not near the gloomy strand,—
Parcae! save Immortals, none
E'er are apur'd by your harsh hand.
Plunge me in the night of nights,
From the halls of heaven afar!
Honor not the Goddess' rights—
They the mother's torments are!

Where she, with her consort stern,
Joyless reigns, there went I down,—
With the silent shades, in turn,
Silent stood before her throne.
Ah! her eye, weigh'd down with tears,
Seeks in vain the light so fair,
Wanders tow'rd far distant spheres,
On her mother falling ne'er!
Till she wakes to ecstasy,
'Till with joy each bosom throbs,
And, arons'd to sympathy,
Even rugged Orens sobs.

Fruitless wish! Lamenting vain!
In its smooth track peacefully
Ever rolls day's steady wing,
Ever fixed is Jove's decree.
He has turn'd his blissful head
From the gloomy realms away;
She to me is ever dead,
Now that she is Night's sad prey,—
Till the waves, that darkly swell,
With Aurora's colors glow;
Till across the depths of Hell
Iris draws her beauteous bow.

Is naught left me now to prove,
Naught that as a pledge may stand,
That the absent still may love?
Not a trace of that dear hand?
Can no loving bond, then, spread
O'er a mother and her child?
Of the living and the dead
Can there be no union mild?

No, she is not wholly flown !
 We're not wholly sever'd now !
 For to speak one tongue alone
 Tho eternal Gods allow.

When Spring's children sink in death,
 When the leaf and flower decay,
 Smitten by the Northwind's breath,
 Sadly stands the naked spray :
 Then I take what best can live
 From Vertumnus' teeming horn, Off'ring it to Styx, to give
 In return the golden corn,—
 Into earth, then, mournfully
 Drop it on my daughter's heart,
 That it may a language be
 Of my love, my bitter smart.

When the Hours' unchanging dance
 Brings with joy the Spring again,
 Waken'd by the sun's bright glance,
 We the dead fresh life obtain.
 Germs that perish to the sight
 In the chilly womb of earth.
 In the color-realm so bright
 Free themselves again with mirth.
 When the stalk shoots high in air,
 Shyly lurks the root in night ;
 Equal in their fost'ring care
 Are both Styx's and Æther's might.

Half they rule the living's sphere,
 Half the region of the dead ;
 Ah, to me they're heralds dear,
 Sweet tones from Cocytus dread !
 Though herself be ever dumb
 In the terrible abyss,
 From the Spring's young blossoms come
 To mine ears these words of bliss,—
 That e'en far from daylight blest,
 Where the sorrowing shadows go,
 Lovingly may throb the breast,
 Tenderly the heart may glow !

O, be glad, then, evermore,
 Smiling meadows' children true!
 For your chalice shall run o'er
 With the nectar's purest dew.
 I will steep your forms in beams
 And with Iris' fairest light
 Tinge your foliage, till it gleams
 Like Aurora's features bright.
 In the Spring-time's radiance blest,
 In the Autumn's garland dead,
 There may read each tender breast
 Of my griefs—my joys, now fled!

THE ELEUSINIAN FESTIVAL.

WREATH in a garland the corn's golden ear!
 With it, the Cyane * blue intertwine!
 Rapture must render each glance bright and clear,
 For the great Queen is approaching her shrine,—
 She who compels lawless passions to cease,
 Who to link man with his fellow has come,
 And into firm habitations of peace
 Chang'd the rude tents' over-wandering home

Shyly in the mountain-cleft
 Was the Troglodyte conceal'd;
 And the roving Nomad left,
 Desert lying, each broad field
 With the javlin, with the bow
 Strode the hunter through the land;
 To the hapless stranger, woe,
 Billow-cast on that wild strand!

When, in her sad wanderings lost,
 Seeking traces of her child,
 Ceres hail'd the dreary coast,
 Ah, no verdant plain then smil'd!

* The corn-flower.

That sho here with trust may stay,
 None vouchsafes a sheltering roof;
 Not a temple's columns gay
 Give of godlike worship proof.

Fruit of no propitious ear
 Bids her to the pure feast fly;
 On tho ghastly altars here
 Human bones alone e'er dry.
 Far as she might onward rove,
 Misery found she still in all,
 And within her soul of love,
 Sorrow'd she o'er man's deep fall.

"Is it thus I find the man
 To whom we our Image lend,
 Whose fair limbs of noble span
 Upward tow'rd tho Heavens ascend?
 Laid we not before his feet
 Earth's unbounded godlike womb?
 Yet upon his kingly seat
 Wanders he without a home?"

"Does no God compassion feel?
 Will none of the blissful race,
 With an arm of miraele,
 Raise him from his deep disgrace?
 In the heights where rapture reigns
 Pangs of others ne'er can move;
 Yet man's anguish and man's pains
 My tormented heart must prove.

"So that a man a man may be,
 Let him make an endless bond
 With the kind earth trustingly,
 Who is ever good and fond—
 To revere the law of time,
 And the moon's melodious song,
 Who, with silent step sublime,
 Move their sacred course along."

And she softly parts the clond
 That conceals her from the sight;
 Sudden, in the savage crowd,
 Stands she, as a Goddess bright,

There she finds the concourse rude
 In their glad feast revelling,
 And the chalice fill'd with blood
 As a sacrifice they bring.

But she turns her face away,
 Horror-struck, and speaks the while :
 " Bloody tiger-feasts ne'er may
 Of a God the lips defile.
 He needs victims free from stain,
 Fruits matur'd by Autumn's sun ;
 With the pure gifts of the plain Honor'd is the Holy One ! "

And she takes the heavy shaft
 From the hunter's cruel hand ;
 With the murderous weapon's haft
 Furrowing the light-strown sand,—
 Takes from out her garland's crown,
 Fill'd with life, one single grain,—
 Sinks it in the furrow down,
 And the germ soon swells amain.

And the green stalks gracefully
 Shoot, ere long, the ground above,
 And, as far as eye can see,
 Waves it like a golden grove.
 With her smile the earth she cheers,
 Binds the earliest sheaves so fair,
 As her heart the landmark rears,—
 And the Goddess breathes this prayer :

" Father Zeus, who reign'st o'er all
 That in Æther's mansions dwell,
 Let a sign from thee now fall
 That thou lov'st this off'ring well !
 And from the unhappy crowd
 That, as yet, has ne'er known thee,
 Take away the eye's dark cloud,
 Showing them their Deity ! "

Zeus, upon his lofty throne,
 Harkens to his sister's prayer ;
 From the blue heights thund'ring down,
 Hurls his forked lightning there,

Jaekling, it begins to blaze,
 From the altar whirling bounds,—
 And his swift wing'd eagle plays
 High above in circling rounds.

Soon at the feet of their mistress are kneeling,
 Fill'd with emotion, the rapturous throng ;
 Into humanity's earliest feeling
 Melt their rude spirits, nurtur'd and strong.
 Each bloody weapon behind them they leave,
 Rays on their senses beclouded soon shine,
 And from the mouth of the Queen they receive,
 Gladly and meekly, instruction divine.

All the Deities advance
 Downwards from their heav'nly seats ;
 Themis' self 'tis leads the dance,
 And, with staff of justice, metes
 Unto ev'ry one his rights,—
 Landmarks, too, 'tis hers to fix ;
 And in witness she invites
 All the hidden powers of Styx.

And the Forge-God, too, is there,
 The inventive Son of Zeus ;
 Fashioner of vessels fair
 Skill'd in clay and brass's use.
 'Tis from him the art man knows
 Tongs and bellows how to wield ;
 'Neath his hammer's heavy blows
 Was the ploughshare first reveal'd.

With projecting, weighty spear,
 Front of all, Minerva stands,
 Lifts her voice so strong and clear,
 And the Godlike host commands,
 Steadfast walls 'tis hers to found,
 Shield and screen for ev'ry one,
 That the scatter'd world around
 Bind in loving unison.

The Immortals' steps she guides
 O'er the trackless plains so vast,
 And where'er her foot abides
 Is the Boundary God held fast :

And her measuring chain is led Round the mountain's border green,—
 E'en the raging torrent's bed
 In the holy ring is seen.

All the Nymphs and Oreads too
 Who, the mountain pathways o'er,
 Swift-foot Artemis pursue,
 All, to swell the concourse, pour,
 Brandishing the hunting-spear,—
 Set to work,—glad shouts uprise,—
 'Neath their axes' blows so clear
 Crashing down the pine-wood lies.

E'en the sedge-crown'd God ascends
 From his verdant spring to light,
 And his raft's direction bends
 At the Goddess' word of might,—
 While the Hours, all-gently bound,
 Nimble to their duty fly;
 Rugged trunks are fashion'd round
 By her skill'd hand gracefully.

E'en the Sea-God thither fares;—
 Sudden, with his trident's blow,
 He the granite columns tears
 From earth's entrails far below;—
 In his mighty hands, on high,
 Waves he them, like some light ball,
 And, with Nimble Hermes by Raises up the rampart-wall.

But from out the golden strings
 Lares Apollo harmony,
 Measur'd time's sweet murmurings,
 And the might of melody:
 The Camenæ swell the strain
 With their song of ninefold tone:
 Captive bound in music's chain,
 Softly stone unites to stone.

Cybele, with skillful hand,
 Open throws the wide-wing'd door ;
 Locks and bolts by her are plann'd,
 Sure to last forevermore.
 Soon complete the wondrous halls
 By the God's own hands are made,
 And the temple's glowing walls
 Stand in festal pomp array'd.

With a crown of myrtle twin'd,
 Now the Goddess-Queen comes there,
 And she leads the fairest hind
 To the shepherdess most fair.
 Venus, with her beauteous boy,
 That first pair herself attires ;
 All the Gods bring gifts of joy,
 Blessing their love's sacred fires.

Guided by the Deities,
 Soon the new-born townsmen pour
 Usher'd in with harmonies,
 Through the friendly open door.
 Holding now the rites divine,
 Ceres at Zeus' altar stands,—
 Blessing those around the shrine,
 Thus she speaks, with folded hands :—

“Freedom's love the beast inflames,
 And the God rules free in air,
 While the law of Nature tames
 Each wild lust that lingers there.
 Yet, when thus together thrown,
 Man with man must fain unite ;
 And by his own worth alone
 Can he freedom gain, and might.”

Wreath in a garland the corn's golden ear !
 With it, the Cyane blue intertwine !
 Rapturo must render each glance bright and clear,
 For the great Queen is approaching her shrine,—
 She who our homesteads so blissful has given,
 She who has man to his fellow-man bound.
 Let our glad numbers extol, then, to Heaven
 Her who the Earth's kindly mother is found !

THE RING OF POLYCRATES.*

A BALLAD.

Uros his battlements he stood,
 And downward gaz'd, in joyous mood,
 On Samos' Isle, that own'd his sway,
 "All this is subject to my yoke,"
 To Egypt's monarch thus he spoke,—
 "That I am truly blest, then, say!"

"The Immortals' favor thou hast known!
 Thy sceptre's might has overthrown
 All those who once were like to thee,
 Yet to avenge them, one lives still;
 I cannot call thee blest, until
 That dreaded foe has ceas'd to be."

While to these words the King gave vent,
 A herald, from Miletus sent,
 Appear'd before the Tyrant there:
 "Lord, let thy incense rise to-day,
 And with the laurel's branches gay
 Thou well may'st crown thy festive hair!"

"Thy foe has sunk beneath the spear,—
 I'm sent to bring the glad news here,
 By thy true marsh
 Then from a basin black he takes—
 The fearful sight their terror wakes—
 A well-known head, besmear'd with gore.

The King with horror stopp'd aside,
 And then, with anxious look, replied:
 "Thy bliss to fortune no'er commit.
 On faithless waves, bethink thee how Thy fleet with doubtful fate swims now—
 How soon the storm may scatter it!"

And ere he yet had spoke the word,
 A shout of jubilee is heard
 Resounding from the distant strand.

* For this story, see Herodotus, book iii, sections 40-43.

With foreign treasures teeming o'er,
The vessels' mast-rich wood once more
Returns home to its native land.

The guest then speaks with startled mind :
"Fortune to-day, in truth, seems kind ;
But thou her fieldness shouldst fear :
The Cretan hordes, well skill'd in arms,
Now threaten thee with war's alarms ;
E'en now they are approaching here."

And, ere the word has 'scap'd his lips,
A stir is seen amongst the ships,
And thousand voices "Victory !" cry :
"We are deliver'd from our foe,
The storm has laid the Cretan low,
The war is ended, is gone by !"

The shout with horror hears the guest :
"In truth, I must esteem thee blest !
Yet dread I the decrees of Heaven.
The envy of the Gods I fear ;
To taste of unmix'd rapture here
Is never to a mortal given.

"With me, too, everything succeeds ;
In all my sovereign acts and deeds
The grace of Heaven is ever by ;
And yet I had a well-lov'd heir—
I paid my debt to fortune there,—
God took him hence—I saw him die.

"Wouldst thou from sorrow, then, be free,
Pray to each unseen Deity,
For thy well-being, grief to send ;
The man on whom the Gods bestow
Their gifts with hands that overflow,
Comes never to a happy end.

"And if the Gods thy prayer resist,
Then to a friend's instruction list,—
Invoke thyself adversity ;

And what, of all thy treasures bright,
Gives to thy heart the most delight—
That take and cast thou in the sea !”

Then speaks the other, mov'd by fear :
“ This ring to me is far most dear
Of all this Isle within it knows—
I to the Furies pledge it now,
If they will happiness allow ”—
And in the flood the gem he throws.

And with the morrow's earliest light
Appear'd before the monarch's sight
A Fisherman, all joyously ;
“ Lord, I this fish just now have caught,
No net before e'er held the sort ;
And as a gift I bring it thee.”

The fish was opened by the cook,
Who suddenly, with wond'ring look,
Runs up, and utters these glad sounds :
“ Within the fish's maw, behold,
I've found, great Lord, thy ring of Gold !
Thy fortune truly knows no bounds !”

The guest with terror turn'd away :
“ I cannot here, then, longer stay,—
My friend thou canst no longer be !
The Gods have will'd that thou shouldst die :
Lest I, too, perish, I must fly ”—
He spoke—and sail'd thence hastily.

THE CRANES OF IBYCUS.

A BALLAD.

ONCE to the Song and Chariot-fight,
Where all the tribes of Greece unite
On Corinth's Isthmus joyously,
The God-lov'd Ibycus drew nigh,
On him Apollo had bestow'd

The gift of song and strains inspir'd ;
 So, with light staff, he took his road
 From Rhegium, by the Godhead fir'd.

Acrocorinth, on mountain high,
 Now bursts upon the wanderer's eye,
 And he begins, with pious dread,
 Poseidon's grove of firs to tread.
 Naught moves around him, save a swarm
 Of Cranes, who guide him on his way ;
 Who from far southern regions warm
 Have hither come in squadron grey.

"Thou friendly hand, all hail to thee !
 Who ledst me safely o'er the sea !
 I deem thee as a favoring sign,—
 My destiny resembles thine.
 Both come from a far distant coast,
 Both pray for some kind sheltring place ;—
 Propitious tow'rd us be the host
 Who from the stranger wards disgrace !"

And on he hastes, in joyous mood,
 And reaches soon the middle wood
 When, on a narrow bridge, by force
 Two murderers sudden bar his course.
 He must prepare him for the fray,
 But soon his wearied hand sinks low ;
 Inur'd the gentle lyre to play,
 It ne'er has strung the deadly bow.

On Gods and men for aid he cries,—
 No saviour to his prayer replies ;
 However far his voice he sends,
 Naught living to his cry attends.
 "And must I in a foreign land,
 Unwept, deserted perish here,
 Falling beneath a murderous hand,
 Where no avenger can appear ?"

Deep-wounded, down he sinks at last,
 When, lo ! the Cranes' wings rustle past.
 He hears,—though he no more can see,—
 Their voices screaming fearfully.

"By you, ye Cranes, that soar on Iliad,
 If not another voice is heard,
 Be borne to Heaven my murder-cry!"
 He speaks, and dies, too, with the word

The naked corpse, ere long is found,
 And, though defac'd by many a wound
 His host in Corinth soon could tell
 The features that he lov'd so well.
 "And is it thus I find thee now,
 Who hop'd the pine's victorious crown
 To place upon the Singer's brow,
 Illumin'd by his bright renown?"

The news is heard with grief by all
 Met at Poseidon's festival;
 All Greece is conscious of the smart,—
 He leaves a void in every heart;
 And to the Prytanis * swift lie
 The people, and they nigh him on
 The dead man's manes to pacify,
 And with the murderer's blood atone.

But where's the trace that, from the throng,
 The people's streaming crowds among,
 Allur'd there by the sports so bright,
 Can bring the villain black to light?
 By craven robbers was he slain?
 Or by some envious hidden foe?
 That Helios only can explain,
 Whose rays illumine all things below.

Perchance, with shameless step and proud,
 He threads e'en now the Grecian crowd,—
 Whilst vengeance follows in pursuit,
 Gloats over his transgression's fruit.
 Tho' very Gods perchance he braves
 Upon the threshold of their fane,—
 Joins boldly in the human waves
 That haste you teatro to gain.

* President of the Council of Five Hundred.

For thero the Greeian tribes appear,
 Fast pouring in from far and near;
 On close-pack'd benches sit they there,—
 The stage the weight can scarcely bear.
 Like ocean-billows' hollow roar,
 The teeming crowds of living man
 Bow'd the cerulean heavens upsoar,
 In bow of ever-widening span.

Who knows the nation, who the name,
 Of all who there together came?
 From Theseus' town, from Anlis' strain
 From Phoeis, from the Spartan land.
 From Asia's distant coast they wend,
 From ev'ry island of the sea,
 And from the stage they hear ascend
 The Chorus's dread melody.

Who, sad and solemn, as of old,
 With footstep measur'd and controll'd,
 Advancing from the far back ground,
 Circle the theatre's wide round.
 Thus, mortal women never move!
 No mortal home to these gave birth!
 Their giant bodies tower above,
 High o'er the puny sons of earth.

With loins in mantle black conceal'd,
 Within their fleshless hands they wield
 The torch, that with a crimsoned glow,—
 While in their cheek no life-blood flows;
 And where the hair is floating wide
 And loving, round a mortal brow,
 Here, snakes and adders are deseri'd,
 Whose bellies swell with poison now.

And, standing in a fearful ring,
 The dread and solemn chant they sing,
 That through the bosom thrilling goes,
 And round the sinner fetters throws.
 Sense-robbing, of heart-madd'ning power,
 The Furies' strains resound through air,
 The list'ner's marrow they devour,—
 The lyro can yield such numbers ne'er.

"Happy the man who, blemish-free,
 Preserves a soul of purity!
 Near him we ne'er avenging come.
 He freely o'er life's path may roam.
 But woe to him who, hid from view,
 Hath done the deed of murder base!
 Upon all heels we close pursue,—
 We, who belong to Night's dark race!"

"Alas! if he thinks to 'scape by flight.
 Wing'd we appear, our snare of night
 Around his flying feet to cast,
 So that he needs must fall at last.
 Thus we pursue him, tiring ne'er—
 Our wrath repentance cannot quell,—
 On to the shadows, and e'en there
 We leave him not in peace to dwell!"

Thus singing they the dance resume,
 And silence like that of the tomb,
 O'er the whole house lies heavily,
 As if the Deity were nigh.
 And, staid and solemn, as of old,
 Circling the theatre's wide round,
 With footstep measur'd and controll'd,
 They vanish in the far back-ground.

Between deceit and truth each breast,
 Now doubting hangs, by awe possess'd,
 And homage pays to that dread might,
 That judges what is hid from a sight,—
 That, fathomless, inscrutable,
 The gloomy skein of fate entwines,
 That reads the bosom's depths full well,
 Yet flies away where sunlight shines.

When sudden, from the tier most high,
 A voice is heard by all to cry:
 "See there, see there, 'Timothens!
 Behold the Cranes of Ibycus!"
 The Heavens become as black as night,
 And o'er the theatre they see,
 Far over-head, a dusky flight
 Of Cranes, approaching hastily.

“Of Ibycus!”—That name so blest
 With new-born sorrow fills each breast.
 As waves on waves in ocean rise,
 From mouth to mouth it swiftly flies:
 Of Ibycus, whom we lament?
 Who fell beneath the murderer’s hand?
 What mean those words that from him went?
 What means this Cranes’ advancing band?”

And louder still become the cries,
 And soon this thought foreboding flies
 Through ev’ry heart, with speed of light—
 ‘Observe in this the Furies’ might!
 The pcc^t’s maues are now appeas’d:
 The murderer seeks his own arrest!
 Let him who spoke the word be seiz’d,
 And aim to whom it was address’d!”

That word he had no sooner spoke,
 Than he its sound would fain revoke;
 In vain! his mouth, with terror pale,
 Tells of his guilt the fearful tale.
Before the Judge they drag them now,
 The scene becomes the tribunal;
 Their crimes the villains both avow,
 When ‘neath the vengeance stroke they fall

HERO AND LEANDER.

SEEST thou yonder castles grey,
 Glitt’ring in the sun’s bright ray,
 That arise on either side,
 Where the Hellespont impels
 Through the rocky Dardanelles
 Ceaselessly his angry tide?
 Hear’st thou yonder billows roar,
 As against the cliffs they break?
 Asia they from Europe tore—
 Love alone they ne’er could shake

Hero and Leander's hearts
 With his fiercer but pleasing smarts
     Cupid's might immortal mov'd.
 Hero rivall'd Hebe's grace,
 While Leander, in the chase,
     O'er the mountains boldly rov'd.
 But, ere long, parental wrath
     Sever'd the united pair,
 And the fruit by love brought forth
     Hung in mournful peril there.

See, on Scyllus' rocky tower
 'Gainst whose base with ceaseless power
     Hellespont's wild waters foam,
 Sits the maid, in sorrow lost,
 Looking toward Abydos' coast,
     Where the lov'd one has his home.
 Ah, to that far-distant strand
     Bridge there was not to convey,—
 Not a bark was near at hand,
     Yet true love soon found the way.

In the labyrinthine maze
 Love a certain clue can raise,
     E'en the foolish makes he wise,—
 Makes the savage monster bow,—
 To the adamantine plough
     Yokes the steers with flaming eyes.
 Styx, whose waters nine times flow,
     Cannot bar his daring course;
 For from Pluto's house of woe
     Orpheus' bride he tore by force.

Even through the boiling tide
 Ho Leander's mind supplied
     With deep longing's glowing spark.
 When grew pale the glitt'ring day,
 Took the swimmer bold his way
     O'er the Pontine ocean dark;
 Cleft the waves with mighty power,
     Striving for yon strand so dear,
 Where, uprais'd on lofty tower,
     Shone the torch's radiance clear.

Circled in her loving arms,
Soon the glad Leander warms
From the weary journey past,
And receives the godlike prize
That in her embraces lies
As his bright reward at last ;
Till Aurora once again
Wakes him from his vision blest,
He must tempt the briny main,
Driven from love's gentle breast.

Thirty suns had sped like this
In the joys of stolen bliss
Swiftly o'er the happy pair,
As a bridal night of love,
Worthy e'en the Gods above,
Ever young and ever fair.
Rapture true he ne'er can know,
Who with daring hand has never
Pluck'd the Heavenly fruits that grow
On the brink of Hell's dark river.

Hesper and Aurora bright
Each, in turns, put forth their light,
Yet the happy ones saw not
How the leaves began to fall,—
How from Northern icy hall
Winter fierce approach'd the spot.
Joyfully they saw each day
More and more its span reduce ;
For the night's now-lengthen'd sway,
In their madness, bless'd they Zeus,

Nicely-balanced day and night,
Held the scales of Heaven aright,—
From the tower, with pensive eye,
Gaz'd the gentlo maid alone
On the coursers of the sun,
Hastening downwards through the sky
Still and calm the ocean lay,
Like a pure, unsoiled glass,—
Not a zephyr sought, in play,
O'er the crystal flood to pass,

Dolphin-shoals, in joyous motion
 Through the clear and silv'ry ocean,
 Wanton'd its cool waves among ;
 And, in darkly-vestur'd train,
 From the bosom of the main
 Tethys' varied band upspring.
 None but they e'er saw reveal'd
 These fond lovers' blest delight :
 But their silent lips were seal'd
 Evermore by Hecate's night.

Gladly on the smiling sea
 Gaz'd she, and cressingly
 To the element exclaim'd :
 "Lovely God, canst thou deceive?
 Ne'er the traitor I'll believe,
 Who thee false and faithless nam'd.
 Treach'rous is the human race,
 Cruel is my father's heart ;
 Thou art mild and full of grace,
 And art mov'd by love's soft smart.

"In these desert walls of stone
 I had mourn'd in grief alone,
 Pin'd in sorrow without end,
 If thou, on thy crested ridge,
 Aided by no birk, no bridge,
 Hadst not hither borne my friend.
 Dreaded though thy depths may be,
 Fierce the fury of thy wave,
 Love can ever soften thee,
 Thou art vanquish'd by the brave.

"For the mighty dart of Love
 E'en the Ocean God could move,
 When the golden ram of yore,
 Helle, cloth'd in beauty bright,
 With her brother in her flight,
 Over thy deep billows bore—
 Sudden, vanquish'd by her charms,
 Starting from the whirlpool black,
 Thou didst bear her in thine arms
 To thy realms from off his back.

As a Goddess,—happy lot!—
 In the deep and wat'ry grot,
 Evermore she now resides;
 Hapless lovers' cares dispels,
 All thy raging passions quells,
 Into port the sailor guides.
 Beauteous Helle, Goddess fair,
 Blessed one, to thee I pray.
 Safely trusting to thy care,
 Hither bring my love to-day!"

Dark the waters soon became,
 And she wav'd the torch's flame
 From the lofty balcony,
 That the wanderer belov'd,
 As across the deeps he rov'd,
 Might the trusty signal see.
 Howling blast approach'd from far,
 Gloomier still the billows curl'd,
 Quench'd was ev'ry glimm'ring star,
 And the storm its might unfurl'd.

Over Pontus' boundless plain
 Night now spreads, while heavy rain
 Pours in torrents from each cloud;
 Lightning quivers through the air,
 While from out its rocky lair
 Bursts the tempest fierce and loud.
 In the waters, as they yell,
 Fearful chasms are expos'd;
 Gaping, like the jaws of Hell
 Are the ocean-depths disclos'd.

"Woe, oh, woe!" she weeping cries,
 "Mighty Zeus, regard my sighs!
 Ah, how rash the boon I crav'd!
 If the Gods gave ear to me,
 If within the treach'rous sea,
 He the raging storm has brav'd!
 Ev'ry bird that loves the tide
 Homeward swiftly wings its way;
 Ev'ry ship, in tempest tried,
 Refuge seeks in shelt'ring bay,

'Doubtless, ah ! the dauntless one
 Has his daring task begun,
 Urg'd by the great Deity ;
 When departing, he his troth
 Pledg'd with Love's most sacred oath ;
 Death alone can set him free.
 He, alas, this very hour,
 Wrestles with the tempest's gloom ;
 And the madden'd billows' power
 Bears him downwards to their womb

" Pontus false !—thy seeming calm
 Serv'd suspicion to disarm ;
 Thou wert like a spotless glass ;
 Basely smooth thy waters lay,
 That they might my love betray
 Into thy false realms to pass,
 In thy middle current now,
 Where no hopes of refuge be,
 On the hapless victim thou
 Let'st thy fearful terrors fly ! "

Fiercer grows the tempest's might,
 Leaping up to mountain-height
 Swells the sea,—the billows roar
 'Gainst the cliffs with fury mad ;
 E'en the ship with cask beclad
 Breaks to pieces on the shore.
 And the wind puts out the blaze
 That had serv'd to light the track ;
 Terror round the landing plays,
 Terror in the waters black.

Venus she implores to chain
 The tempestuous hurricane,
 And the angry waves to bind ;
 And a steer with golden horn
 Vows the maid, by anguish torn,
 As a victim to each wind.
 Ev'ry Goddess of the deep,
 Ev'ry heavenly Deity,
 She implores to lull to sleep
 With smooth oil the raging sea,

"To my mournful cry attend !
 Blest Leucothea, ascend
 Hither from thy sea-green bower !
 Thou who ofttimes com'st to save
 When the fury of the wave
 Threats the sailor to devour !
 O'er him cast thy sacred veil,
 Which, with its mysterious charm,
 E'en when floods his life assail,
 Guards its wearer from all harm !"

And the wild winds cease to blow,
 Brightly through the Heavens now go
 Eos' coursers, mounting high ;
 Gently in its wonted bed
 Flows the ocean, smoothly spread,
 Sweetly smile both sea and sky.
 Softly now the billows stray
 O'er the peaceful, rock-bound strand.
 And, in calm and eddying play,
 Waft a lifeless corpse to land.

Ah, 'tis he who, even now,
 Keeps in death his solemn vow
 In an instant knows she him ;
 Yet she utters not a sigh,—
 Not a tear escapes her eye,
 Cold and rigid is each limb.
 Sadly looks she on the light,
 Sadly on the desert deep ;
 And unearthly flushes bright
 O'er her pallid features creep.

"Dreaded Gods, I own your force !
 Fearfully, without remorse,
 Ye have urg'd your rights divine,
 Though my race is early run,
 Yet I happiness have known,
 And a blissful lot was mine.
 Living, in thy temple, I
 As a priestess deck'd my brow,
 And a joyful victim die,
 Mighty Venus, for thee now !"

And, with garments flutt'ring round,
 From the tower, with madd'nd bound,
   Plung'd she in the distant wave.
 High the God through his domain
 Bears those hallow'd corpses twain,—
   He himself becomes their grave;
 And, rejoicing in his prize,
   Gladly on his way he goes,—
 From his urn, that never dries,
   Pours his stream, that ceaseless flows.

CASSANDRA.

Mirth the halls of Troy was filling,
   Ere its lofty ramparts fell;
 From the golden lute so thrilling
   Hymns of joy were heard to swell.
 From the sad and tearful slaughter
   All had laid their arms aside,
 For Pelides Priam's daughter
   Claim'd then as his own fair bride.

Laurel branches with them bearing,
   Troop on troop in bright array
 To the temples were repairing,
   Owning 'Thymbrius' sov'reign sway.
 Through the streets, with frantic measure,
   Danced the bacchanal mad around,
 And, amid the radiant pleasure,
   Only one sad breast was found.

Joyously in the midst of gladness,
   None to heed her, none to love,
 Roam'd Cassandra, plung'd in sadness,
   To Apollo's laurel grove.
 To its dark and deep recesses
   Swift the sorrowing priestess hied,
 And from off her flowing tresses
   Tore the sacred band, and cried:

CASSANDRA.

"All around with joy is beaming,
Ev'ry heart is happy now,
And my sire is fondly dreaming,
Wreath'd with flowers my sister's brow.
I alone am doom'd to wailing,
That sweet vision flies from me ;
In my mind these walls assailing,
Fierce destruction I can see.

"Though a torch I see all-glowing,
Yet 'tis not in Hymen's hand ;
Smoke across the skies is blowing,
Yet 'tis from no votive brand.
Yonder see I feasts entraneing,
But, in my prophetic soul,
Hear I now the God advancing,
Who will steep in tears the bowl !

"And they blame my lamentation,
And they laugh my grief to scorn ;
To the haunts of desolation
I must bear my woes forlorn.
All who happy are, now shun me,
And my tears with laughter see ;
Heavy lies thy hand upon me,
Cruel Pythian Deity !

"Thy divine decrees foretelling,
Wherefore hast thou thrown me here,
Where the ever-blind are dwelling,
With a mind, alas, too clear ?
Wherefore hast thou power thus given,
What must needs occur to know ?
Wrought must be the will of Heaven
Onward come the hour of woe !

"When impending fate strikes terror,
Why remove the covering ?
Life we have alone in error,
Knowledge with it death must bring.
Take away this presence fearful,
Take this sight of woe from me :
Of thy truths, alas ! how fearful
'Tis the mouth-piece frail to be !

"Veil my mind once more in slumbers,
 Let me heedlessly rejoice;
 Never have I sung glad numbers
 Since I've been thy chosen voice.
 Knowledge of the future giving,
 Thou hast stol'n the present day,
 Stol'n the moment's joyous living,—
 Take thy false gift, then, away!

"Ne'er with bridal train around me,
 Have I wreath'd my radiant brow,
 Since to serve thy fane I bound me—
 Bound me with a solemn vow.
 Evermore in grief I languish—
 All my youth in tears was spent;
 And, with thoughts of bitter anguish
 My too-feeling heart is rent.

"Joyously my friends are playing,
 All around are blest and glad,
 In the paths of pleasure straying,—
 My poor heart alone is sad.
 Spring in vain unfolds each treasure,
 Filling all the earth with bliss;
 Who in life can o'er take pleasure,
 When is seen its dark abyss?

"With her heart in vision burning,
 Truly blest is Polyxene,
 As a bride to clasp him yearning,
 Him, the noblest, best Hellene!
 And her breast with rapture swelling,
 All its bliss can scarcely know;
 Even the Gods in heavenly dwelling
 Envy not, when dreaming so.

"Ho to whom my heart is plighted
 Stood before my ravish'd eye,
 And his look, by passion lighted,
 Tow'rd me turn'd imploringly.
 With the lov'd one, oh, how gladly
 Homeward would I take my flight
 But a Stygian shadow sadly
 Steps between us ev'ry night.

“Cruel Proserpine is sending
 All her spectres pale to me ;
 Ever on my steps attending
 Those dread shadowy forms I see.
 Though I seek, in mirth and laughter
 Refuge from that ghastly train,
 Still I see them hast'ning after,— Ne'er shall I know joy again.

“And I see the death-steel glancing,
 And the eye of murder glare ;
 On, with hasty strides advancing,
 Terror haunts me ev'rywhere.
 Vain I seek alleviation ;—
 Knowing, seeing, suff'ring all,
 I must wait the consummation,
 In a foreign land must fall.”

While her solemn words are ringing,
 Hark ! a dull and wailing tone
 From the temple's gate upspringing,—
 Dead lies Thetis' mighty son !
 Eris shakes her snake-locks hated,
 Swiftly flies each Deity,
 And o'er Ilion's walls ill-fated
 Thunder-clouds loom heavily !

THE HOSTAGE.

A BALLAD.

To the tyrant Dionys Mæros once lied,—
 A dagger his mantle contain'd ;
 They seize him, and soon he is chain'd,
 “What sought'st thou to do with the dirk by thy side ?
 And Mæros with gloomy fury replied :
 “The town from the Tyrant to free”—
 “The cross thy reward then shall be.”

"I can't," said the officer, "prepared to die,
 Nor seek for permission to live;
 Yet, prithee, this one favor give :
 A respite I ask till three days have gone by,
 While the marriage-dot of my sister I tie ;
 I'll leave thee my friend as my bail,—
 Thou canst sell him instead, if I fail."

The monarch Jor. smil'd with a malice-fraught sneer,
 And after a pause answer'd he :
 "Thou shalt not will give unto thee ;
 But know I if he out of that time shall appear,
 And thou shalt yet then have surrender'd thee here,
 Thy friend in thy place must then bleed,
 And thou, 'r return, shall be freed."

And he went to his friend, and he said : "The king vows
 That I on the cross must atone
 For the rapacious thing I have done ;
 And yet not a respite of three days allows,
 'Till I my sister have join'd to her spouse ;
 As oath to the king thou remain,
 'Till I'm back here to loose thee again !"

In silence embrac'd him his friend dear and true,
 Resign'd to the Sovereign's power ;
 The other went off the same hour :
 And ere the third morning had dawn'd on the view,
 His sister he join'd to her spouse, and then flew
 With anxious concern toward his home,
 That true to his time he might come.

Soon the rain in torrents begins to pour,
 The springs down the mountain's side race,
 The brook and the stream swell apace,
 And he comes with his pilgrim's staff to the shore,
 When the whirlpool tears down the bridge with wild roar,
 And the waves with a thundering crash,
 To atoms the vaulted arch dash.

And he wanders along the bank in despair,
 But far as he casts round his eyes,
 And far as re-echo his cries.

No friendly bark pushing off he sees there,
 By whose aid to the wish'd for land to repair,
 None coming its pilot to be,—
 And the torrent now swells to a sea.

Then he sinks on the shore, and he weeps, and he prays
 With hands rais'd on high unto Zeus :
 "The torrent's wild force, oh reduce !
 The hours haste on, and the mid-day rays
 Of the sun now fall, and if quench'd is their blaze
 Before at the town I can be,
 My friend must then perish for me."

Yet the stream into greater fury now wakes,
 And billows on billows dash high,
 And hours on hours fleet by.
 Then driven by anguish, courage he takes,
 And leaps in the flood as it madly breaks,
 And the torrent he cleaves with strong limb,
 And a God has compassion on him.

And he gains the shore, and then onward he speeds,
 And the God who has saved him he blesses ;
 When out of the wood's dark recesses
 A band of robbers sudden proceeds,
 And menaces death, and his progress impedes.
 Obstructing the wanderer's course,
 And wielding the club with wild force.

"What would ye?" all pallid with terror cries he,
 "Save my life, I have no other thing,
 And that I must give to the king !"
 And the club from the next he tears hastily :
 "For the sake of my friend, here's mercy for thee !"
 And three, with invincible might,
 He slays, and the rest take to flight.

And the sun pours down his hot beams on the land,
 And, worn by the toil he had pass'd,
 His knees sink beneath him at last.
 "Oh ! am I then sav'd from the spoiler's fierce hand,
 And brought safe o'er the flood to the holy strand,
 That I here my lost moments may see,
 While the friend that I love dies for me?"

And hark! close at hand, with a purling sound,
 Comes a gush, and as silver it glistens;
 And he pauses, and anxiously listens:
 And lo! from the cliffs, with a rapid bound,
 A murmuring fountain leaps down to the ground,
 And stooping to earth in glad mood,
 He laves his hot limbs in the flood.

And through the green foliage shines now the sun,
 And the gum-like shade of each tree
 On the glittering mead pictures he;
 And he sees two travellers moving on,—
 With hurried footstep seeks past them to run,
 When thus he o'erhears their discourse:
 "Ere this he is nail'd to the cross!"

And anguish gives wings to his hastening feet,
 That, goaded by care, seem to fly;
 Soon Syracuse bursts on his eye,
 And its battlements glow in the sunset sweet,
 And its glances ere long Philostratus meet,
 The steward of his household so true,—
 But he shudders his master to view.

"Back! Back! to rescue thy friend 'tis too late;
 Thyself, then, to save, hasten thou:
 For he suffers death even now.
 From hour to hour, with confidence great,
 For thy return he ceas'd not to wait;
 His courage and faith were not torn
 By the Tyrant's contemptuous scorn."

"And if 'tis too late, and I cannot, then, now
 Arrive to receive his last breath,
 I'll hasten to join him in death.
 Ne'er the bloodthirsty Tyrant to boast I'll allow
 That the friend to the friend has broken his vow;
 When two victims have bitten the dust,
 In Love and in Faith let him trust!"

And the sun sinks to rest, and he reaches the gate,
 And the cross he sees rais'd from the ground!
 Whilo the wondering crowd stand around.
 They are hoisting his friend on the rope to his fate.

When through the denso concourse he pushes him straight;

“Now, Hangman!” he cries, “strangle me!
For the one whom he bail’d,—I am he!”

Astonishment seizes on all that stand by,
While fondly embrace the glad twain,
And weep with mix’d rapture and pain;
And a tear is seen glist’ning in every eye,—
To the king with the wondrous story they fly,
And he, mov’d by a merciful thought,
To the foot of his throne has them brought.

And on them in wonderment long gazes he,
Then speaks: “Ye the victory have won,
And conquer’d my heart for your own.
That faith is no empty vision I see,
So suffer me, too, your companion to be;
And let my entreaty be heard,
To form in your friendship the third!”

THE DIVER.

A BALLAD.

“What knight or what vassal will be so bold
As to plunge in the gulf below?
See! I hurl in its depths a goblet of gold,
Already the waters over it flow.
Tho man who can bring back the goblet to me,
May keep it henceforward,—his own it shall be.

Thus speaks the King, and he hurls from the height
Of the cliffs that, rugged and steep,
Hang over the boundless sea, with strong night,
Tho goblet afar in the bellowing deep.
“And who’ll be so daring,—I ask it onco more,—
As to plunge in these billows that wildly roar?”

And the vassals and knights of high degree
Hear his words, but silent remain.
They cast their eyes on the raging sea,

And none will attempt the goblet to gain.
 And a third time the question is ask'd by the King,
 "Is there none that will dare in the gulf now to spring?"

Yet all as before in silence stand,
 When a page, with a modest pride,
 Steps out of the timorous, squirely band,
 And his girdle and mantle soon throws aside.
 And all the knights, and the ladies too,
 The noble stripling with wonderment view.

And when he draws nigh to the rocky brow,
 And looks in the gulf so black,
 The waters that she had swallow'd but now,
 The howling Charybdis is giving back;
 And, with distant thunder's dull sound,
 From her gloomy womb they all-foaming rebound.

And it boils and it roars, and it hisses and seethes,
 As when water and fire first blend;
 To the sky spurts the foam in steam-laden wreaths,
 And wave presses hard upon wave without end.
 And the ocean will never exhausted be,
 As if striving to bring forth another sea.

But at length the wild tumult seems pacified,
 And blackly amid the white swell
 A gaping chasm its jaws opens wide,
 As if leading down to the depths of Hell:
 And the howling billows are seen by each eye
 Down the whirling funnel all madly to fly.

Then quickly, before the breakers rebound,
 The stripling commends him to Heaven,
 And—a scream of horror—is heard around,—
 And now by the whirlpool away he is driven,
 And secretly over the swimmer brave
 Close the jaws, and he vanishes 'neath the dark wave.

O'er the watery gulf, dread silence now lies,
 But the deep sends up a dull yell,
 And from mouth to mouth thus trembling it flies:
 "Courageous stripling, oh fare thee well!"
 And duller and duller the howls recommence,
 While they pause in anxious and fearful suspense.

"If even thy crown in the gulf thou shouldst fling,
 And shouldst say, 'He who brings 't to me
 Shall wear it henceforward, and be the king,'
 'Thou could'st tempt me not e'en with that precious fee;
 What under the howling deep is conceal'd
 To no happy living soul is reveal'd."

Full many a ship, by the whirlpool held fast,
 Shoots straightway beneath the mad wave,
 And, dash'd to pieces, the hull and the mast
 Emerge from the all-devouring grave,—
 And the roaring approaches still nearer and nearer,
 Like the howl of the tempest, still clearer and clearer.

And it boils and it roars, and it husses and seethes,
 As when water and fire first blend;
 To the sky spurts the foam in steam-laden wreaths,
 And wave presses hard upon wave without end.
 And, with the distant thunder's dull sound
 From the ocean-womb they all-bellowing bound.

And lo! from the darkly flowing tide
 Comes a vision white as a swan,
 And an arm and a glistening neck are descried,
 With might and with active zeal steering on;
 And 'tis he, and behold! his left hand on high
 Waves the goblet, while beaming with joy is his eye.

Then breathes he deeply, then breathes he long,
 And blesses the light of the day;
 While gladly exclaim to each other the throng:
 "He lives! he is here! Ho is not the sea's prey
 From the tomb, from the eddying waters' control,
 The brave one has rescued his living soul!"

And he comes, and they joyously round him stand
 At the feet of the monarch he falls,—
 The goblet he, kneeling, puts in his hand,
 And the King to his beauteous daughter calls,
 Who fills it with sparkling wine to the brim;
 The youth turns to the monarch, and speaks thus to him:—

"Long life to the King! Let all these be glad
 Who breathe in the light of the sky!
 For below all is fearful, of mement sad;
 Let not man to tempt the immortals e'er try,
 Let him never desire the thing to see
 That with terror and night they veil graciously.

"I was torn below with the speed of light.
 When out of a cavern of "ice"
 Rush'd towards me a spring with furious might;
 I was seiz'd by the twofold torrent's wild shock,
 And like a top, with a whirl and a bound,
 Despite all resistance, was whirl'd around.

"Then God pointed out,—for to Him I cried
 In that terrible moment of need.—
 A craggy reef in the gulf's dark side.
 I seiz'd it in haste, and from death was then freed
 And there, on sharp corals, was hanging the cup,—
 The fathomless pit had also swallowed it up.

For under me lay it, still mountain-deep,
 In a darkness of purple-tinged dye,
 And though to the ear all might seem then asleep
 With shuddering awe 'twas seen by the eye
 How the salamanders' and dragons' dread forms
 Fill'd those terrible jaws of hell with their swarms.

"There crowded, in union fearful and black,
 In a horrible mass entwin'd,
 The rock-fish, the ray with the thorny back,
 And the hammer-fish's mis-shapen kind,
 And the shark, the hyena dread of the sea,
 With his angry teeth, grinn'd fiercely on me

"There hung I, by fulness of terror possess'd,
 Where all human aid was unknown,
 Amongst phantoms, the only sensitive breast,
 In that fearful solitude all alone,
 Where the voice of mankind could not reach to mine
 ear,
 Mid the monsters foul of that wilderness arear

“Thus shudd’ring methought—when a Something crawled near,
 And a hundred limbs it out-flung.
 And at me it snapp’d ;—in my mortal fear,
 I left hold of the coral to which I had clung ;
 Then the whirlpool seiz’d on me with madden’d roar,
 Yet ’twas well, for it brought me to light once more.”

The story, in wonderment hears the King,
 And he says, “The cup is thine own,
 And I purpose also to give thee this ring,
 Adorn’d with a costly, a priceless stone,
 If thou’lt try once again, and bring word to me
 What thou saw’st in the nethermost depths of the sea.”

His daughter hears this with emotions soft,
 And with flattering accent prays she :
 “That fearful sport, father, attempt not too oft !
 What none other would dare, he hath ventur’d for
 thee ;
 If thy heart’s wild longings thou canst not tame,
 Let the knights, if they can, put the squire to shame.”

The King then seizes the goblet in haste,
 In the gulf he hurls it with might :
 “When the goblet once more in my hands thou has placed,
 Thou shalt rank at my court as the noblest knight,
 And her as a bride thou shalt clasp e’en to-day,
 Who for thee with tender compassion doth pray.”

Then a force, as from Heaven, descends on him there,
 And lightning gleams in his eye,
 And blushes he sees on her features so fair,
 And he sees her turn pale, and swooning lie ;
 Then eager the precious guerdon to win,
 For life or for death, lo ! he plunges in !

The breakers they hear, and the breakers return,
 Proclaimed by a thundering sound ;
 They bend o’er the gulf with glances that yearn,
 And the waters are pouring in fast around :
 Though upwards and downwards they rush and they rave,
 The youth is brought back by no kindly wave.

THE KNIGHT OF TOGGENBURG

A BALLAD.

"I CAN love thee well, believe me,
 As a sister true ;
 Other love, Sir Knight, would grieve me,
 Sore my heart would rue,
 Calmly would I see thee going,
 Calmly, too, appear ;
 For those tears in silence flowing
 Find no answer here."

Thus she speaks,—he hears her sadly,—
 How his heartstrings bleed !—
 In his arms he clasps her madly,
 Then he mounts his steed.
 From the Switzer land collects he
 All his warriors brave ;—
 Cross on breast, their course directs he
 To the Holy Grave.

In triumphant march advancing,
 Onward moves the host,
 While their morion plumes are dancing
 Where the foes are most.
 Mortal terror strikes the Paynim
 At the chieftain's name ;
 But the knight's sad thoughts enchain him,—
 Grief consumes his frame.

Twelve long months, with courage daring,
 Peace he strives to find ;
 Then at last, of rest despairing,
 Leaves the host behind ;
 Sees a ship, whose sails are swelling,
 Lie on Joppa's strand ;
 Ships him homeward for her dwelling,
 In his own lov'd land.

Now behold the pilgrim weary
 At her castle gate !
 But, alas ! these accents dreary
 Seal his mournful fate ;—

She thou seek'st, her troth hath plighted
To all-gracious Heaven ;
To her God she was united Yesterday at even! "

To his father's home for ever
Bids he now adieu ;
Sees no more his arms and beaver,
Nor his steed so true.
Then descends he sadly, slowly,—
None suspect the sight,—
For a garb of penance lowly
Wears the noble knight.

Soon he now, the tempest braving,
Builds a humble shed,
Where, o'er lime-trees darkly waving,
Peeps the convent's head.
From the orb of day's first gleaming,
Till his race has run,
Hope in ev'ry feature beaming,
There he sits alone.

Tow'rd the convent straining over
His unwearied eyes,—
From her casement looking never
Till it open flies,
Till the lov'd one, soft advancing,
Shows her gentlo face,
O'er the vale her sweet eye glancing,
Full of angel-grace.

Then he seeks his bed of rushes,
Still'd all grief and pain,
Slumbering calm, till morning's blushes
Waken life again.
Days and years fleet on, yet never
Breathes he plaint or sighs,
On her casement gazing ever,
Till it open flies.

Till the lov'd one, soft advancing,
Shows her gentle face,
O'er the vale her sweet eye glancing,
Full of angel-grace.

But, at length the morn returning,
 Finds him dead and chill,—
 Pale and wan, his gaze, with yearning,
 Seeks her casement still !

THE FIGHT WITH THE DRAGON

Why run the crowd ? What means the throng
 That rushes fast the streets along ?
 Can Rhodes a prey to flames, then, be ?
 In crowds they gather hastily,
 And, on his steed, a noble knight
 Amid the rabble, meets my sight ;
 Behind him—prodigy unknown !—
 A monster fierce they're drawing on ;
 A dragon seems it by its shape,
 With wide and crocodile-like jaw,
 And on the knight and dragon gape,
 In turns, the people, fill'd with awe.

And thousand voices shout with glee :—
 "The fiery dragon come and see,
 Who hind and flock tore limb from limb !
 The hero see, who vanquish'd him !
 Full many a one before him went,
 To dare the fearful combat bent,
 But none returned home from the fight ;
 Honor ye, then, the noble knight !"
 And toward the convent move they all,
 Whilo met in hasty council there
 The brave knights of the Hospital,
 St. John the Baptist's Order, were.

Up to the noble Master sped
 The youth, with firm but modest tread ;
 The people follow'd with wild shout,
 And stood the landing-place about,
 While thus outspoke that Daring One :—
 "My knightly duty I have done,
 The dragon that laid waste the land
 Has fallen 'neath my conquering hand.
 The way is to the wanderer free,
 The shepherd o'er the plains may rove :
 Across the mountains joyfully
 The pilgrim to the shrine may move."

But stercorally look'd the prince, and said :
 "The hero's part thou well hast play'd ;
 By courage is the true knight known,—
 A dauntless spirit thou hast shown.
 Yet speak ! What duty first should he Regard, who would Christ's champion be,
 Who wears the emblem of the Cross ?"
 And all turned pale at his discourse.
 Yet he replied, with noble grace,
     While blushing he bent him low :
 "That he deserves so proud a place
Obedience best of all can show."

"My son," the Master answering spoke,
 "Thy daring act this duty broke.
 The conflict that the law forbade
 Thou hast with impious mind essay'd."—
 "Lord, judge when all to thee is known."
 The other spake, in steadfast tone,—
 "For I the law's commands and will Purpos'd with honor to fulfil,
 I went not out with heedless thought,
     Hoping the monster dread to find :
 To conquer in the fight I sought
     By cunning, and a prudent mind.

"Five of our noble Order, then (Our faith could boast no better men),
 Had by their daring lost their life,
 When thou forbade'st us the strife.
 And yet my heart I felt a prey
 To gloom, and panted for the fray ;
 Ay, even in the stilly night,
 In vision gasp'd I in the fight ;
 And when the glimm'ring morning came,
     And of fresh troubles knowledge gave,
 A raging grief consum'd my frame,
     And I resolv'd the thing to brave.

"And to myself I thus began :
 'What is't adorns the youth, the man ?
 What actions of the heroes bold,
 Of whom in ancient song we're told,
 Blind heathendom rais'd up on high
 To godlike fame and dignity ?

The world, by deeds known far and wide,
 From monsters fierce they purified;
 The lion in the fight they met,
 And wrestled with the Minotaur,
 Unhappy victims free to set,
 And were not sparing of their gore.

“ ‘Are none but Saracens to feel
 The prowess of the Christian steel?
 False idols only shall he brave?
 His mission is the world to save:
 To free it, by his sturdy arm,
 From ev’ry hurt, from ev’ry harm;
 Yet wisdom must his courage bend,
 And cunning must with strength contend.
 Thus spake I oft, and went alone
 The monster’s traces to espy;
 When on my mind a bright light shone,—
 ‘I have it!’ was my joyful cry.

‘To thee I went, and thus I spake:
 ‘My homeward journey I would take.’
 ‘Thou, lord, didst grant my prayer to me,—
 ‘Then safely traversed I the sea;
 And, when I reached my native strand,
 I caus’d a skillful artist’s hand
 To make a dragon’s image, true
 To his that now so well I knew.
 On feet of measure short was plac’d
 Its lengthy body’s heavy load;
 A scaly coat of mail embrac’d
 The back, on which it fiercely show’d.

“ Its stretching neck appear’d to swell,
 And, ghastly as a gate of hell,
 Its fearful jaws were open wide,
 As if to seize the prey it tried;
 And in its black mouth, rang’d about,
 Its teeth in prickly rows stood out;
 Its tongue was like a sharp-edged sword,
 And lightning from its small eyes pour’d;
 A serpent’s tail of many a fold
 Ended its body’s monstrous span,
 And round itself with fierceness roll’d,
 So as to clasp both steed and man.

"I form'd the whole to nature true,
 In skin of grey and hideous hue;
 Part dragon it appear'd, part snake,
 Engender'd in the poisonous lake.
 And, when the figure was complete,
 A pair of dogs I chose me, fleet,
 Of mighty strength, of nimble pace,
 Inur'd the savage boar to chase;
 The dragon, then, I made them bait.
     Inflaming them to fury dread,
 With their sharp teeth to seize it straight,
 And with my voice their motions led.

"And, where the belly's tender skin
 Allow'd the tooth to enter in,
 I taught them how to seize it thero,
 And, with their fangs the part to tear.
 I mounted, then, my Arab steed,
 The offspring of a noble breed;
 My hand a dart on high held forth,
 And, when I had inflam'd his wrath,
 I stuck my sharp spurs in his side,
     And urg'd him on as quick as thought,
 And hurl'd my dart in circles wide,
     As if to pierce the beast I sought.

"And though my steed rear'd high in pain,
 And champ'd and foam'd beneath the rein,
 And though the dogs howl'd fearfully,
 Till they were calmed ne'er rested I.
 This plan I ceaselessly pursued,
 Till thrice the moon had been renew'd;
 And when they had been duly taught,
 In swift ships here I had them brought;
 And since my foot these shores has press'd,
     Flown has three morning's narrow span;
 I scarce allow'd my limbs to rest
     Ere I the mighty task began.

"For hotly was my bosom stirr'd
 When of the land's fresh grief I heard;
 Shepherds of late had been his prey,
 When in the marsh they went astray.
 I form'd my plans then hastily,—
 My heart was all that counsel'd me.

My squires instructing to proceed,
 I sprang upon my well-train'd steed,
 And, follow'd by my noble pair
 Of dogs, by secret pathways rode,
 Where not an eye could witness bear,
 To find the monster's fell abode.

Then, lord, must know the chapel well,
 Pitch'd on a rocky pinnacle,
 That overlooks the distant isle ;
 A daring mind 'twas rais'd the pile.
 Though humble, mean, and small it shows
 Its walls a miracle enclose,—
 The Virgin and her Infant Son,
 Vow'd by the Three Kings of Cologne,
 By three times thirty steps is led
 The pilgrim to the giddy height ;
 Yet, when he gains it with bold tread,
 He's quicken'd by his Saviour's sight.

“ Deep in the rock to which it clings,
 A cavern dark its arms outillings,
 Mist with the neighboring moorland's dew,
 Where heaven's bright rays can ne'er pierce thro'
 There dwelt the monster, there he lay,
 His spoil awaiting, night and day ;
 Like the hell-dragon, thus he kept
 Watch near the shrine, and never slept ;
 And if a hapless pilgrim chanced
 To enter on that fatal way,
 From out his ambush quick advanced
 The foe, and seiz'd him as his prey.

“ I mounted now the rocky height,
 Ere I commenced the fearful fight,
 There knelt I to the Infant Lord.
 And pardon for my sins implor'd.
 Then in the holy fane I placed
 My shining armor round my waist,
 My right hand grasp'd my javelin,—
 The fight then went I to begin ;
 Instructions gave my squires among,
 Commanding them to tarry there ;
 Then on my steed I nimbly sprung,
 And gave my spirit to God's care.

"Soon as I reach'd the level plain,
 My dogs found out the scent again;
 My frighten'd horse soon rear'd on high,-
 His fear I could not pacify,
 For, coil'd up in a circle, lo!
 There lay the fierce and hideous foe,
 Sunning himself upon the ground.
 Straight at him rush'd each lim'd hound;
 Yet thence they turn'd dismay'd and fast,
     When he his gaping jaws op'd wide,
 Vomited forth his poisonous blast,
     And like the howling jackal cried.

"But soon their courage I restor'd;
 They seized with rage the foe abhorr'd,
 While I against the beast's loins threw
 My spear with sturdy arm and true:
 But, powerless as a bulrush frail,
 It bounded from his coat of mail;
 And ere I could repeat the throw,
 My horse reel'd wildly to and fro
 Before his basilisk-like look,
     And at his poison-teeming breath,—
 Sprung backward, and with terror shook.
     While I seem'd doom'd to certain death,

"Then from my steed I nimbly sprung,
 My sharp-edged sword with vigor swung;
 Yet all in vain my strokes I plied,—
 I could not pierce his rock-like hide.
 His tail with fury lashing round,
 Sudden he bore me to the ground
 His jaws then opening fearfully,
 With angry teeth he struck at me;
 But now my dogs, with wrath new-born,
     Rush'd on his belly with fierce bite,
 So that, by dreadful anguish torn,
     He howling stood before my sight.

"And ere he from their teeth was free,
 I rais'd myself up hastily,
 The weak place of the foe explor'd,
 And in his entrails plunged my sword,
 Sinking it even to the hilt;
 Black-gushing forth, his blood was spilt.

Down sank he, burying in his fall
 Me with his body's giant ball,
 So that my senses quickly fled ;
 And when I woke with strength renew'd,
 The dragon in his blood lay dead,
 While, round me group'd my squires all stood,

The joyous shouts, so long suppress'd,
 Now burst from ev'ry hearer's breast,
 Soon as the knight these words had spoken ;
 And ten times 'gainst the high vault broken,
 The sound of mingled voices rang
 Re-echoing back with hollow clang.
 The Order's sons demand, in haste,
 That with a crown his brow be graced,
 And gratefully in triumph now
 The mob the youth would bear along—
 When, lo ! the Master knit his brow,
 And called for silence 'mongst the throng.

And said, "The dragon that this land
 Laid waste, thou slew'st with daring hand ;
 "Although the people's idle thou,
 The Order's foe I deem thee now.
 Thy breast has to a fiend more base
 Than e'en this dragon given place.
 The serpent that the heart most stings,
 And hatred and destruction brings,
 That spirit is, which stubborn lies,
 And impiously casts off the rein,
 Despising order's sacred ties ;
 'Tis that destroys the world amain.

"The Mameluko makes of conrage boast,
 Obedience decks the Christian most ;
 For where our great and blessed Lord
 As a mere servant walk'd abroad,
 The Fathers, on that holy ground,
 This famous Order chose to found,
 That arduous duty to fulfill,
 To overcome one's own self-will !
 'Twas Idle glory mov'd thee there :
 So take thee hence from out my sight !
 For who the Lord's yoke cannot bear,
 To wear his cross can have no right."

A furious shout now raise the crowd,
 The place is filled with onteries loud ;
 The Brethren all for pardon ery ;
 The youth in silence droops his eye—
 Mutely his garment from him throws,
 Kisses the Master's hand, and—goes.
 But he pursues him with his gaze,
 Recalls him lovingly, and says :
 “Let me embrace thee now, my son !
 The harder fight is gain'd by thee.
 Take, then, this cross—the guerdon won
 By self-snbdued humility.”

FRIDOLIN ;

OR,

THE WALK TO THE IRON FOUNDRY.

A GENTLE page was Fridolin,
 And he his mistress dear,
 Savern's fair Countess, honor'd in
 All truth and godly fear.
 She was so meek, and, ah ! so good !
 Yet each wish of her wayward mood,
 He would have studied to fulfil,
 To please his God, with earnest will.

From the first hour when daylight shone
 Till rang the vesper-chime,
 He liv'd but for her will alone,
 And deem'd e'en that scarce time.
 And if she said, “Less anxious be !”
 His eye then glisten'd tearfully,
 Thinking that he in duty fail'd,
 And so before no toil he quail'd.

And so, before her serving train,
 The Countess lov'd to raise him ;
 While her fair mouth, in endless strain,
 Was ever wont to praise him.

She never held him as her slave,
 Her heart a child's rights to him gave;
 Her clear eye hung in fond delight
 Upon his well-form'd features bright.

Soon in the huntsman Robert's breast
 Was poisonous anger fir'd;
 His black soul, long by lust possess'd,
 With malice was inspir'd;
 He sought the Count, whom, quick indeed,
 A traitor might with ease mislead,
 As once from hunting home they rode,
 And in his heart suspicion sow'd.

"Happy art thou, great Count, in truth,"
 Thus cunningly he spoke;
 "For ne'er mistrust's everom'd tooth
 Thy golden slumbers broke;
 A noble wife thy love rewards,
 And modesty her person guards.
 The Tempter will be able ne'er
 Her true fidelity to snare."

A gloomy scowl the Count's eye fill'd;
 "What's this thou say'st to me?
 Shall I on woman's virtue build,
 Inconstant as the sea?
 Tho' flatterer's mouth with ease may lure;
 My trust is plac'd on ground more sure.
 No one, methinks, dare ever lure
 To tempt the wife of Count Savern."

The other spoke: "Thou sayest it well;
 The fool deserves thy scorn
 Who ventures on such thoughts to dwell,
 A mere retainer born,—
 Who to the lady he obeys
 Fears not his wishes' lust to raise."
 "What!" tremblingly the Count began,
 "Dost speak, then, of a living man?"—

"Is, then, the thing, to all reveal'd,
 Hid from my master's view?
 Yet, since with care from thee conceal'd,
 I'd fain conceal it too"—

'Speak quickly, villain! speak or die!'
Eachin'd the other fearfully.

"Who dares to look on Cunigond?"

"'Tis the fair page that is so fond."

"He's not ill-shap'd in form, I wot,"

He craftily went on;

The Count meanwhile felt cold and hot,

By turns in ev'ry bone.

"Is't possible thou beest not, sir,

How he has eyes for none but her?—

At table ne'er attends to thee,

But sighs behind her ceaselessly?

"Behold the rhymes that from him came

His passion to confess"—

"Confess!"—"And for an answering flame,—

The impious knave!—to press.

My gracious lady, soft and meek,

'Through pity, doubtless, fear'd to speak;

'That it has 'scap'd me, sore I rue;

What, lord, caust thou to help it do?"

Into the neighboring wood then rode

The Count, inflam'd with wrath,

Where, in his iron-foundry, glow'd

The ore, and bubbled forth.

The workmen here, with busy hand,

The fire both late and early fam'd.

The sparks fly out, the bellows ply,

As if the rock to liquefy.

The fire and water's might twofold

Are here united found;

The mill-wheel, by the flood seiz'd hold,

Is whirling round and round;

The works are clatt'ring night and day,

With measur'd stroke the hammers play,

And, yielding to the mighty blows,

The very iron plastic grows.

Then to two workmen beckons he,
 And speaks thus in his ire :
 "The first who's hither sent by me
 Thus of ye to inquire :
 'Have ye ob'y'd my lord's word well?
 Him cast ye into yonder hell,
 That into ashes he may fly,
 And ne'er again torment mine eye !"

'Th' inhuman pair were overjoy'd,
 With devilish glee possess'd :
 For as the iron, feeling void,
 Their heart was in their breast.
 And brisker with the bellows' blast,
 The foundry's womb now heat they fast,
 And with a murderous mind prepare
 To offer up the victim there.

Then Robert to his comrade spake,
 With false hypocrisy :
 "Up, comrade, up ! no tarrying make !
 Our lord has need of thee."
 The lord to Fridolin then said :
 "The pathway tow'rd the foundry tread,
 And of the workmen there inquire,
 If they have done their lord's desire."

The other answer'd, "Be it so !"
 But o'er him came this thought,
 When he was all-prepar'd to go,
 "Will she command me aught ?"
 So to the Countess straight he went :
 "I'm to the iron-foundry sent ;
 Then say, can I do aught for thee?
 For thou 'tis who commandest me."

To this the Lady of Savern
 Replied in gentle tone :
 'To hear the holy mass I yearn,
 For sick now lies my son ;
 So go, my child, and when thou'rt there,
 Utter for me a humble prayer,
 And of thy sins think ruefully,
 That graco may also fall on me."

And in this welcome duty glad,
 He quickly left the place ;
 But ere the villago bounds he had
 Attain'd with rapid pace,
 The sound of bells struck on his ear,
 From tho high belfry ringing clear,
 And ev'ry sinner, mercy-sent,
 Inviting to the sacrament.

"Never from praising God refrain Where'er by thee He's found !"
 He spoke, and stepp'd into the fane,
 But there he heard no sound ;
 For 'twas the harvest time, and now
 Glow'd in the fields tho reaper's brew ;
 No choristers were gather'd there,
 The duties of the mass to share.

The matter paus'd he not to weigh,
 But took the sexton's part ;
 "That thing," he said, "makes no delay
 Which heav'nward guides the heart."
 Upon the priest, with helping hand,
 He placed the stole and sacred band,
 The vessels he prepar'd beside,
 That for the mass were sanctified.

And when his duties here were o'er,
 Holding the mass-book, he,
 Minist'ring to the priest, before
 The altar bow'd his knee,
 And knelt him left, and knelt him right,
 While not a look escap'd his sight,
 And when the holy SANCTUS came,
 The bell thrice rang he at the name.

And when the priest, bow'd humbly too,
 In hand uplifted high,
 Facing the altar, show'd to view
 The Present Deity,
 The saeristan proclaim'd it well,
 Sounding the clearly-tinkling bell,
 While all knelt down, and beat the breast,
 And with a cross the Host confess'd.

The rites thus serv'd he, leaving none,
 With cunct and ready wit;
 Each thing that in God's house is done,
 He also practis'd it.
 Unweariedly he labor'd thus,
 Till the Venerable DOMINUS,
 When tow'rd the people turn'd the priest,
 Bless'd them,—and so the service ceas'd.

Then he dispos'd each thing again,
 In fair and due array;
 First purified the holy fane,
 And then he went his way,
 And gladly, with a mind at rest,
 On to the iron-foundry press'd,
 Saying the while, complete to be,
 Twelve paternosters silently.

And when he saw the furnace smoke,
 And saw the workmen stand,
 "Have ye, ye fellows," thus he spoke,
 "Obey'd the Count's command?"
 Grinning they ope the orifice,
 And point into the fell abyss:
 "He's ear'd for—all is at an end!
 The Count his servants will commend."

The answer to his lord he brought,
 Returning hastily,
 Who, when his form his notice caught,
 Could scarcely trust his eye:
 "Unhappy one! whence comest thou?"—
 "Back from the foundry."—"Strange, I vow!
 Hast in thy journey, then, delay'd?"—
 "'Twas only, lord, till I had pray'd."

"For when I from thy presence went (Oh pardon me!), to-day,
 As duty bid, my steps I bent
 To her whom I obey.
 She told me, lord, the mass to hear,
 I gladly to her wish gave ear,
 And told four rosaries at the shrine,
 For her salvation and for thine."

In wonder deep the Count now fell,
 And, shudd'ring, thus spake he :
 " And, at the foundry, quickly tell,
 What answer gave they thee ? "
 " Obscure the words they answer'd in,— Showing the furnace with a grin :
 ' He's car'd for—all is at an end !
 The Count his servants will commend.' "

" And Robert ? " interrupted he,
 While deadly pale he stood,—
 " Did he not, then, fall in with thee ?
 I sent him to the wood."—
 " Lord, neither in the wood nor field
 Was trace of Robert's foot reveal'd."—
 " Then," cried the Count, with awe-struck mien,
 " Great God in heav'n his judge hath been ! "

With kindness he before ne'er prov'd,
 He led him by the hand
 Up to the Countess,—deeply mov'd,—
 Who naught could understand.
 " ' This child, let him be dear to thee,
 No angel is so pure as he !
 Though we may have been counsel'd ill,
 God and His hosts watch o'er him still." "

THE COUNT OF HAPSBURG.*

A BALLAD.

At Aix-la-Chapelle, in imperial array,
 In its halls renown'd in old story,
 At the coronation banquet so gay
 King Rudolf was sitting in glory.
 The meats were serv'd up by the Palsgrave of Rhine,

---

* The somewhat irregular metre of the original has been preserved in this ballad, as in other poems; although the perfect anapestic metre is perhaps more familiar to the English ear.

The Bohemian pour'd out the bright sparkling wine,
 And all the Electors, the seven,
 Stood waiting around the world-governing One,
 As the chorns of stars encircle the sun,
 That honor might duly be given.

And the people the lofty balcony round
 In a throng exulting were filling;
 While loudly were blending the trumpets' glad sound,
 And the multitude's voices so thrilling;
 For the monarchless period, with horror rife,
 Has ended now, after long baneful strife,
 And the earth had a lord to possess her.
 No longer rul'd blindly the iron-bound spear,
 And the weak and the peaceful no longer need fear
 Being crush'd by the cruel oppressor.

And the Emperor speaks with a smile in his eye,
 While the golden goblet he seizes :
 " With this banquet in glory none other can vie,
 And my regal heart well it pleases ;
 Yet the minstrel, the bringer of joy, is not here,
 Whose melodious strains to my heart are so dear,
 And whose words heav'nly wisdom inspire ;
 Since the days of my youth it had been my delight,
 And that which I ever have lov'd as a knight,
 As a monarch I also require."

And behold ! 'mongst the princes who stand round the throne
 Steps the bard, in his robe long and streaming,
 While, bleach'd by the years that have over him flown,
 His silver locks brightly are gleaming ;
 " Sweet harmony sleeps in the golden strings,
 The minstrel of true love reward ever sings,
 And adores what to virtue has tended,—
 What the bosom may wish, what the senses hold dear ;
 But say, what is worthy the Emperor's ear
 At this, of all feasts the most splendid ?"

" No restraint would I place on the minstrel's own choice,"

Speaks the monarch, a smile on each feature ;
 " He obeys the swift hour's imperious voice,
 Of a far greater lord is the creature.
 For, as through the air the storm-wind on speeds,—

One knows not from whence its wild roaring proceeds—
As the spring from hid sources up-leaping,
So the lay of the bard from the inner heart breaks,—
While the might of sensations unknown it awakes,
That within us were wondrously sleeping."

Then the bard swept the chords with a finger of might,
Evoking their magical sighing :
"To the chase once rode forth a valorous knight,
In pursuit of the antelope flying.
His hunting-spear bearing, there came in his train
His squire ; and when o'er a wide-spreading plain
On his stately steed he was riding,
He heard in the distance a bell tinkling clear,
And a priest, with the Host, he saw soon drawing near,
While before him the sexton was striding.

"And low to the earth the Count then inclin'd,
Bared his head in humble submission,
To honor, with trusting and Christian-like mind,
What had sav'd the whole world from perdition.
But a brook o'er the plain was pursuing its course,
That, swell'd by the mountain streams, headlong force,
Barr'd the wanderer's steps with its current :
So the priest on one side the blest sacrament put,
And his sandal with nimbleness drew from his foot,
That he safely might pass through the torrent.

"What wouldst thou ?" the Count to him thus began,
His wondering look tow'rd him turning :
'My journey is, lord, to a dying man,
Who for heavenly diet is yearning ;
But when to the bridge o'er the brook I came nigh,
In the whirl of the stream, as it madly rush'd by
With furious might, 'twas uprooted.
And so, that the sick the salvation may find
That he pants for, I hasten with resolute mind
To wade through the waters barefooted.'

"Then the Count made him mount on his stately steed,
And the reins to his hands he confided,
That he duly might comfort the sick in his need,
And that each holy rite be provided.
And himself, on the back of the steed of his squire,

THE COUNT OF HAPSBERG.

Went after the chase to his heart's full desire,
 While the priest on his journey was speeding :
 And the following morning, with thankful look,
 To the Count once again his charger he took,
 Its bridle with modesty leading.

" God forbid that in chase or in battle," then cried
 'The Count with humility lowly,
 'The steed I henceforward should dare to bestride
 That hath borne my Creator so holy !
 And if, as a guerdon, he may not be thine,
 He devoted shall be to the service divine,
 Proclaiming His infinite merit,
 From whom I each honor and earthly good
 Have received in fee, and my body and blood,
 And my breath, and my life, and my spirit.'

"Then may God, the sure rock, whom no time can o'er move,
 And who lists to the weak's supplication,
 For the honor thou pay'st Him, permit thee to prove Honor here, and hereafter salvation !
 'Thou'rt a powerful Count, and thy knightly command
 Hath biazon'd thy fame thro' the Switzer's broad land ;
 'Thou art blest with six daughters admir'd ;
 May they each in thy house introduce a bright crown,
 Filling ages unborn with their glorious renown,—
 Thus exclaim'd he in accents inspir'd."

And the Emperor sat there all-thoughtfully,
 While the dream of the past stood before him ;
 And when on the minstrel he turn'd his eye,
 His words' laden meaning stole o'er him ;
 For seeing the traits of the priest there reveal'd,
 In the folds of his purple-dyed robe he conceal'd
 His tears as they swiftly cours'd down.
 And all on the Emperor wond'ringly gaz'd,
 And the blest dispensations of Providence prais'd,
 For the Count and the Cæsar were one.

THE GLOVE.

A TALE.

BEFORE his lion-court,
 Impatient for the sport,
     King Francis sat one day ;
 The peers of his realm sat around,
 And in balcony high from the ground
     Sat the ladies in beauteous array.

And when with his finger he beckon'd,
 The gate open'd wide in a second,—
 And in, with deliberate tread,
 Enters a lion dread,
 And looks around
 Yet utters no sound ;
 Then long he yawns
     And shakes his mane,
 And, stretching each limb,
     Down lies he again.

Again signs the king,—
     The next gate open flies,
 And, lo ! with wild spring,
     A tiger out hies.
 When the lion he sees, loudly roars he about,
 And a terrible circle his tail traces out.
 Protruding his tongue, past the lion he walks,
 And, snarling with rage, round him warily stalks
 Then, growling anew,
 On one side lies down too.

Again signs the king,—
     And two gates open fly,
 And, lo ! with one spring,
     Two leopards out hie.
 On the tiger they rush, for the fight nothing loth,
 But he with his paws seizes hold of them both.
 And the lion, with roaring, gets up,—then all's still ;
 The fierce beasts stalk around, madly thirsting to kill

THE VEILED STATUE AT SAIS.

From the balcony rais'd high above
A fair hand lets fall now a glove
Into the lists, where 'tis seen
The lion and tiger between.

To the knight, Sir Dehorze, in tone of jest,
Then speaks young Camigund fair;
"Sir Knight, if the love that thou feel'st in thy breast
Is so warm as thou'lt wait at each moment to sweet;
Pick up, I pray thee, the glove that lies there!"
And the knight, in a moment, with dauntless tread,
Jumps into the lists, nor seeks to linger,
And, from out the midst of those monsters dread,
Picks up the glove with a daring finger.

And the knights and ladies of high degree
With wonder and horror the action see.
While he quietly brings in his hand the glove.
The praise of his courage each mouth employs;
Meanwhile, with a tender look of love,
The promise to him of coming joys,
Fair Camigund welcomes him back to his pier:
But he threw the glove point-blank in her face:
"Lady, no thanks from thee I'll receive!"
And that selfsame hour he took his leave.

THE VEILED STATUE AT SAIS.

A youth, impell'd by burning thirst for knowledge
To roam to Sais, in fair Egypt's land,
The priesthood's secret learning to explore,
Had pass'd thro' many a grade with eager haste,
And still was hurrying on with fond impatience.
Scarcely could the Hierophant impose a rein
Upon his headlong efforts. "What avails
A part without the whole?" the youth exclaim'd;
"Can there be here a lesser or a greater?"

The truth thou speak'st of, like mere earthly dross,
 Is't but a sum that can be held by man
 In larger or in smaller quantity?
 Surely, 'tis changeless, indivisible;
 Deprive a harmony of but one note,
 Deprive the rainbow of one single color,
 And all that will remain is naught, so long
 As that one color, that one note, is wanting."

While thus they converse held, they chanced to stand
 Within the precincts of a lonely temple,
 Where a veil'd statue of gigantic size
 The youth's attention caught. In wonderment
 He turn'd him tow'rd his guide, and ask'd him, saying,
 "What form is that conceal'd beneath yon veil?"
 "Truth!" was the answer. "What!" the young man
 cried,
 "When I am striving after Truth alone,
 Seek'st thou to hide that very Truth from me?"

"The Godhead's self alone can answer thee," Replied the Hierophant. "'Let no rash mortal
 Disturb this veil,' said he, 'till rais'd by me;
 For he who dares with sacrilegious hand
 To move the sacred mystic covering,
 He'—said the Godhead—"Well?" "will see the Truth."

"Strangely oracular, indeed! And thou Hast never ventur'd, then, to raise the veil?"
 "I? Truly not! I never even felt
 The least desire."—"Is't possible? If I
 Were sever'd from the Truth by nothing else
 Than this thin gauze—" "And a divine decree,"
 His guide broke in. "Far heavier than thou think'st
 Is this thin gauze, my son. Light to thy hand
 It may be—but most weighty to thy conscience."

The youth now sought his home, absorb'd in thought;
 His burning wish to solve the mystery
 Banish'd all sleep; upon his couch he lay,
 Tossing his feverish limbs. When midnight came,

THE VEILED STATUE AT SAIS.

He rose, and tow'rd the temple timidly,
 Led by a mighty impulse, bent his way.
 The walls he scal'd, and soon one active spring
 Landed the daring boy beneath the dome.

Behold him now, in utter solitude,
 Welcom'd by naught save fearful, deathlike silence,—
 A silence which the echo of his steps
 Alone disturbs, as through the vaults he paces.
 Piercing an opening in the enopla,
 The moon cast down her pale and silv'ry beams,
 And, awful as a present deity,
 Glitt'ring amid the darkness of the pile,
 In it's long veil conceal'd, the statue stands.

With hesitating step he now draws near—
 His impious hand would fain remove the veil—
 Sudden a burning chill assails his bones,
 And then an unseen arm repulses him.
 "Unhappy one, what wouldst thou do?" Thus cries
 A faithful voice within his trembling breast.
 "Wouldst thou profanely violate the All-Holy?"—
 "'Tis true the oracle declar'd, 'Let none Venture to raise the veil till rais'd by me.'
 But did the oracle itself not add,
 That he who did so would behold the Truth?
 Whate'er is hid behind, I'll raise the veil."
 And then he shouted: "Yes! I will behold it!"
 "Behold it!"
 Repeats in mocking tone the distant echo.

He speaks, and, with the word, lifts up the veil
 Would you inquire what form there met his eye?
 I know not,—but, when day appear'd, the priests
 Found him extended senseless, pale as death,
 Before the pedestal of Isis' statue.
 What had been seen and heard by him when there,
 He never would disclose, but from that hour
 His happiness in life had fled for ever,
 And his deep sorrow soon conducted him
 To an untimely grave. "Woe to that man,"
 He, warning, said to ev'ry questioner,
 "Woe to that man who wins the Truth by guilt,
 For truth so gain'd will ne'er reward its owner."

THE DIVISION OF THE EARTH.

‘TAKE the world!’ Zens exclaim’d from his throne in the skies

To the children of man—“take the world I now give”
It shall ever remain as your heirloom and prize.
So divide it as brothers, and happily live.”

Then all who had hands sought their share to obtain,
The young and the aged made haste to appear;
The husbandman seiz’d on the fruits of the plain,
The youth thro’ the forest pursued the fleet deer.

The merchant took all that his warehouse could hold,
The abbot selected the last year’s best wine,
The king barr’d the bridges,—the highways controll’d,
And said, “Now remember, the tithes shall be mine!”

But when the division long settled had been,
The poet drew nigh from a far distant land;
But alas! not a remnant was now to be seen,
Each thing on the earth own’d a master’s command.

“Alas! shall then I, of thy sons the most true,— Shall I, ’mongst them all, be forgotten alone?”
Thus loudly he cried in his anguish, and threw Himself in despair before Jupiter’s throne.

“If thou in the region of dreams didst delay,
Complain not of me,” the Immortal replied;
“When the world was apportion’d, where then wert thou, pray?”
“I was,” said the poet, “I was—by thy side!”

“Mine eye was then fix’d on thy features so bright,
Mine ear was entranced by thy harmony’s power;
Oh, pardon the spirit that, aw’d by thy light,
All things of the earth could forget in that hour!”

“What to do?” Zeus exclaim’d,—“for the world has been given;
The harvest, the market, the chase, are not free;
But if thou with me wilt abide in my heaven,
Whenever thou com’st, ’twill be open to thee!”

THE UNKNOWN MAIDEN.

In a deep vale, 'mongst simple swains,
 Appear'd with each returning spring,
 Soon as the lark began his strains,
 A maid, of beauty ravishing.

That vale was not her native place,
 And where she came from, none could tell;
 Yet of her steps was left no trace
 Soon as the maiden said farewell.

Each heart was glad when she was seen,
 With nobler aspirations fir'd;
 And yet her grace, her lofty mien
 With silent awe each breast inspir'd.

She with her brought both flowers and fruit,
 But ripen'd in far distant plains,
 Where warmer far the sunbeams shoot,
 Where a more bounteous nature reigns.

Her gifts among them all she shar'd,—
 To some gave fruit, gave flowers to some.
 The youth, the old man silver-hair'd,
 Alike rewarded sought their home.

To her was welcome every guest;
 Yet if approach'd a loving pair,
 To them she ever gave her best,
 The flowers her store contain'd most fair.

THE IDEAL AND LIFE.

Smooth and ever-clear and crystal-bright
 Flows existence, zephyr-light,
 In Olympus, where the blest recline,
 Moons revolve, and ages pass away;
 Changelessly 'mid ever-rife decay

Bloom the roses of their youth divine.
 Man has but a sad choico left him now,
 Sensual bliss and soul-repose between ;
 But, upon the grea Colestial's brow,
 Wedded is their lustre seen.

Wouldst thou here be like a deity,
 In the realm of death be free,
 Never seek to pluck its garden's fruit !
 On its beauty thou may'st feast thine eye ;
 Soen wild longing's impulses will fly.
 And enjoyment's transient bliss pollute,
 E'en the Styx, that nine times flows around,
 Ceres' child's return could not delay ;
 But she grasped the apple,—and was bound
 Evermore by Orcus' sway.

Bodies only yonder powers can bind
 By whom gloomy fate is twin'd ;
 But, set free from each restraint of time,
 Blissful Nature's playmate, Fear, so bright,
 Roams forever o'er the plains of light,
 'Mongst the Deities, herself sublime.
 Wouldst thou on her pinions soar on high,
 Far away each earthly sorrow throw !
 To the ideal realm for refuge fly
 From this narrow life below !

Free from earthly stain, and ever young,
 Blest Perfection's rays among,
 There humanity's fair form is view'd,
 As life's silent phantoms brightly gleam
 While they wander near the Stygian stream,
 Or, as in the heav'nly fields they stood,
 Ere the great Immortal went its way
 Down to the sarcophagus so drear.
 If in life the conflict-scales still sway
 Doubtfully, the triumph's here.

Not to free the weary limbs from strife,
 Not to give the faint new life,
 Blooms tho fragrant wreath of victory.
 'Tho' thy nerves may rest, yet fierce and strong,
 In its stream life bears thee still along,
 In its whirling dance Time hurries thee.

But should courage' daring wing not brook
 Sad confinement's painful sense to bear,
 Then the soaring Ann with joy may look
 Down from Beauty's hill so fair.

If 'tis good to govern and defend,
 Wrestlers bravely to contend
 On the path of fortune or renown,—
 Then let boldness wreak itself in force,
 And the chariots on the dust-strown course
 Blend together, as they thunder down.
 Courage only here the prize can find
 Of the victor in the Hippodrome,—
 'Tis the strong alone who Fate can bind
 When the weak are overcome.

But although, when rocks its bed inclose,
 Wildly foaming on it flows,
 Softly, smoothly runs life's gentle stream
 Over Beauty's silent shadow-land,
 While, upon its silvery waters' strand,
 Hesper and Aurora paint each beam.
 Melted into soft and mutual love,
 Blended in the happy bond of grace,
 Fiery impulses here cease to move,
 And the foe has fled the place.

If to animate what erst was dead,
 If with matter now to wed,
 Active genius kindles into flame,
 Let then industry strain ev'ry nerve,
 Let tho' thought's courageous wrestling serve
 E'en tho' hostile element to tame.
 Truth's deep-buried spring can only flow
 To the steadfast will, that wearies no'er ;
 Only to the chisel's heavy blow
 Yields the brittle marblo e'er.

Piercing even into Beauty's sphere,
 In tho' dust still lingers here
 Gravitation, with the world it sways :
 Not from out the mass, with labor wrung,
 Light and graceful, as from nothing sprung.

Stands the image to the ravish'd gaze.
 None is ev'ry struggle, ev'ry doubt,
 In the certain glow of victory ;
 While each witness hence is driven out
 Of frail man's necessity.

When thou seest the mighty precept plac'd
 In Humanity's sad waste,
 Or when to the Holy, guilt draws nigh,
 Then thy virtue well may pallid be
 In the rays of truth,—despondingly
 From the Ideal shamefaced action fly.
 Naught created e'er surmounted this,
 Not a bark, no bridge's span can bear
 Safely o'er that terrible abyss,
 And no anchor catches there.

But, by fleeing from the sense confin'd
 To the freedom of the mind,
 Ev'ry dream of fear thou'lt find thence flown,
 And the endless depth itself will fill ;
 If thou tak'st the Godhead in thy will,
 'Twill soar upwards from its earthly throne.
 Servile minds alone, that scorn its sway,
 Are subdued by precept's rigid rod ;
 With the man's resistance dies away
 E'en the glory of the God.

When thou art weigh'd down by human care.
 When the son of Priam there
 Strives against the snakes with speechless pain,
 Then let man revolt ! Then let his cry
 To the canopy of heaven mount high,—
 Let thy feeling heart be rent in twain !
 Let the radiant cheek of joy turn pale,
 Nature's fearful voice triumphant be,
 And let holy sympathy prevail
 O'er thine immortality !

But in yonder blissful realms afar,
 Where the forms unsullied are,
 Sorrow's mournful tempests cease to rave.
 There reflection cannot pierce the soul,
 Tears of anguish there no longer roll,

PARABLES AND RIDDLES.

Naught remains but mind's resistance brave,
 Beauteous e'en as Iris' color'd bow
 On the thunder-cloud's soft vaporous dew,
 Glimm'ring through the dusky veil of woo
 There is seen Rest's radiant blue.

Great Alcides erst in endless strife
 Frod the weary path of life,

Humbled e'en the coward's slave to be,— Rugg'd the lion, and the hydra fought;
 Into Charon's bark, he, dreading naught,
 Plunged alive, that he his friend might free.
 All the heavy loads that earth brings forth,
 On the shoulders of the hated one,
 By the Goddess are heap'd up in wrath,
 Till at length his race is run.

Till the god soars hence like some bright flame,
 Casting off his earthly frame,
 And the ether's balmy incense drinks.
 In his new unwonted pinions glad,
 Upward flies he, and the vision sad
 Life had fashion'd, sinks, and sinks, and sinks
 Harmony, that of Olympus speaks,
 Hails the blest one where Kronion lives,
 And the Goddess with the rosy cheeks
 Smilingly the chalice gives.

 PARABLES AND RIDDLES.

I.

A BRIDGE of pearls its form uprears
 High o'er a grey and misty sea;
 E'en in a moment it appears,
 And rises upwards giddily.

Beneath its arch can find a road
 The loftiest vessel's mast most high,
 Itself hath never born a load,
 And seems, when thou draw'st near, to

It comes first with the stream, and goes
Soon as the wat'ry flood is dried.
Where may be found this bridge, disclose,
And who its beauteous form supplied !

II.

It bears thee many a mile away,
And yet its place it changes ne'er ;
It has no pinions to display,
And yet conducts thee through the air.

It is the bark of swiftest motion
That every weary wanderer bore ;
With speed of thought the greatest ocean
It carries thee in safety o'er ;
One moment wafts thee to the shore.

III.

Upon a spacious meadow play
Thousands of sheep, of silv'ry hue ;
And as we see them move to-day,
The man most aged saw them too.

They ne'er grow old, and, from a rill
That never dries, their life is drawn ;
A shepherd watches o'er them still,
With curv'd and beauteous silver horn.

He drives them out through gates of gold,
And ev'ry night their number counts ;
Yet ne'er has lost, of all his fold,
One lamb, though oft that path he mounts.

A hound attends him faithfully,
A nimble ram precedes the way ;
Canst thou point out that flock to me,
And who the shepherd, canst thou say ?

IV.

There stands a dwelling, vast and tall,
On unseen columns fair;
No wanderer treads or leaves its hall,
And none can linger there.

Its wondrous structure first was planned
With art no mortal knows;
It lights the lamps with its own hand
'Mongst which it brightly glows.

It has a roof, as crystal bright,
Form'd of one gem of dazzling light;
Yet mortal eye has ne'er
Seen Him who placed it there.

V.

Within a well two buckets lie
One mounts, and one descends;
When one is full, and rises high,
The other downward wends.

They wander ever to and fro—
Now empty are, now overflow.
If to the mouth thou liftest this,
That hangs within the dark abyss.
In the same moment they can ne'er
Refresh thee with their treasures fair.

VI.

Know'st thou the form on tender ground?
It gives itself its glow, its light;
And though each moment changing found,
Is ever whole and ever bright.
In narrow compass 'tis confin'd,
Within the smallest frame it lies;
Yet all things great that move thy mind,
That form alone to thee supplies.

And canst thou, too, the crystal name ?
 No gem can equal it in worth ;
 It gleams, yet kindles ne'er to flame,
 It sucks in even all the earth.
 Within its bright and wondrous ring
 Is pictur'd forth the glow of heaven,
 And yet it mirrors back each thing
 Far fairer than to it 'twas given.

VII.

For ages an edifice hero has been found,
 It is not a dwelling, it is not a fane ;
 A horseman for hundreds of days may ride round,
 Yet the end of his journey he ne'er can attain.

Full many a century o'er it has pass'd,
 The might of the storm and of time it defies ;
 'Neath the rainbow of Heaven stands free to the last,—
 In the ocean it dips, and scours up to the skies.
 It was not vain glory that bade its erection,
 It serves as a refuge, a shield, a protection ;
 Its like on the earth never yet has been known
 And yet by man's hand it is fashion'd alone.

VIII.

Amongst all serpents there is one,
 Born of no earthly breed ;
 In fury wild it stands alone,
 And in its matchless speed.

With fearful voice and headlong force
 It rushes on its prey,
 And sweeps the rider and his horse
 In one fell swoop away.

The highest point it loves to gain ;
 And neither bar nor lock
 Its fiery onslaught can restrain ;
 And arms,—invite its shock.

It tears in twain like tender grass,
 'The strongest forest-tree;
 It grinds to dust the harden'd brass,
 'Though stout and firm it be.

And yet this beast, that none can tame,
 Its threat ne'er twice fulfils;
 It dies in its self-kindled flame,
 And dies e'en when it kills.

IX.

We children six our being had
 From a most strange and wondrous pair,—
 Our mother ever grave and sad,
 Our father ever free from care.

Our virtues we from both receive,— Meekness from her, from him our light;
 And so in endless youth we weave
 Round thee a circling figure bright.

We ever shun the caverns black,
 And revel in the glowing day;
 'Tis we who light the world's dark track,
 With our life's clear and magic ray.

Spring's joyful harbingers are we,
 And her inspiring strains we swell;
 And so the house of death we flee,
 For life alone must round us dwell.

Without us is no perfect bliss,
 When man is glad, we, too, attend,
 And when a monarch worshiped is,
 To him our majesty we lend.

X.

What is the thing esteem'd by few?
 The monarch's hand it decks with pride,
 Yet it is made to injure too,
 And to the sword is most allied.

No blood it sheds, yet many a wound
Inflicts,—gives wealth, yet takes from none—
Has vanquish'd e'en the earth's wide round,
And makes life's current smoothly run.

'The greatest kingdoms it has fram'd,
The oldest cities rear'd from dust,
Yet war's fierce torch has ne'er inflam'd ;
Happy are they who in it trust !

XI.

I live within a dwelling of stone,
'There buried in slumber I dally ;
Yet, arm'd with a weapon of iron alone,
The foe to encounter I sally.
At first I'm invisible, feeble, and mean,
And o'er me thy breath has dominion ;
I'm easi'y drown'd in a rain-drop e'en,
Yet in victory waxes my pinion.
When my sister, all-powerful, gives me her hand,
To the terrible lord of the world I expand.

XII.

Upon a disk my course I trace,
'There restlessly forever flit ;
Small is the circuit I embrace,
Two hands suffice to cover it.
Yet ere that field I traverse, I
Full many a thousand mile must go,
E'en though with tempest-speed I fly,
Swifter than arrow from a bow.

XIII.

A bird it is, whose rapid motion
With eagle's flight divides the air ;
A fish it is, and parts the ocean,
That bore a greater monster ne'er ;
An elephant it is, whose rider,
On his broad back a tower has put :

'Tis like the reptile base, the spider,
 Whenever it extends its foot;
 And when, with iron tooth projecting,
 It seeks its own life-blood to drain,
 On footing firm, itself erecting,
 It braves the raging hurricane.

THE WALK.*

Hail to thee, mountain belov'd, with thy glittering purple-dyed summit!
 Hail to thee also far sun, looking so lovingly on!
 Thee, too, I hail, thou smiling plain, and ye murmuring lindens,
 Ay, and the chorus so glad, cradled on yonder high boughs;
 Thee, too, peaceable azure, in infinite measure extending Round the dusky-hued mount, over the forest so green,—
 Round about me, who now from my chamber's confinement escaping,
 And from vain frivolous talk, gladly seek refuge with
 thee.
 Through me to quicken me runs the balsamic stream of thy breezes,
 While the energetical light freshens the gaze as it thirsts.
 Bright o'er the blooming meadow the changeable colors
 are gleaming,
 But the strife, full of charms, in its own grace melts
 away.
 Freely the plain receives me, with carpet far away reaching,
 Over its friendly green wanders the pathway along.
 Round me is humming the busy bee, and with pinion uncertain
 Hovers the butterfly gay over the trefoil's red flow'r.
 Fiercely the darts of the sun fall on me,—the zephyr is silent,
 Only the song of the lark echoes athwart the clear air.

---

* In this, as in all the rest of Schiller's Elegiacs, the original metre has been retained. (See Preface.)

Now from the neighboring copse comes a roar, and the tops of the alders

Bend low down,—in the wind dances the silvery grass ;
Night ambrosial circles me round ; in the coolness so fragrant

Greets me a beauteous roof, form'd by the beeches'
sweet shade.

In the depths of the wood the landscape suddenly leaves
me,

And a serpentine path guides up my footsteps on high.
Only by stealth can the light through the leafy trellis of branches

Sparingly pierce, and the blue smilingly peeps through the boughs.

But in a moment the veil is rent, and the opening forest Suddenly gives back the day's glittering brightness to
me !

Boundlessly seems the distance before my gaze to be stretching,

And in a purple-tinged hill terminates sweetly the world.

Deep at the foot of the mountain, that under me falls away steeply,

Wanders the greenish-hued stream, looking like glass
as it flows.

Endlessly under me see I the Æther, and endlessly o'er
me,—

Giddily look I above, shudd'ringly look I below.

But between the infinite height and the infinite hollow

Safely the wanderer moves over a well-guarded path.
Smilingly past me are flying the banks all-teeming with riches,

And the valley so bright boasts of its industry glad.

See how yonder hedgerows that sever the farmer's possessions

Have by Demeter been work'd into the tapestried plain !

Kindly decree of the law, of the Deity mortal-sustaining
Since from the brazen world Love vanish'd for ever away.

But in freer windings the measur'd pastures are travers'd (Now swallow'd up in the wood, now climbing up to the hills)
 By a glimmering streak, the highway that knits lands
 together;
 Over the smooth-flowing stream, quietly glide on the rafts.

Ofttimes resound the bells of the flocks in the fields that seem living,
 And the shepherd's lone song wakens the echo again.

Joyous villages crown the stream, in the copse others
 vanish,
 While from the back of the mount, others plunge wildly below.

Man still lives with the land in neighborly friendship
 united,
 And round his sheltering roof calmly repose still his fields;

Trustingly climbs the vine high over the low-reaching window,
 While round the cottage the tree circles its far-stretching boughs.

Happy race of the plain! Not yet awaken'd to freedom,
 'Thou and thy pastures with joy share in the limited

law;
 Bounded thy wishes all are by the harvest's peaceable circuit,
 And thy lifetime is spent o'en as the task of the day!

But what suddenly hides the beauteous view? a strange spirit

Over the still-stranger plain spreads itself quickly afar—

Cov'ly separates now, what scarce had lovingly mingled,
 And 'tis the like that alone joins itself on to the like.
 Orders I see depicted; the haughty tribes of the poplars

Marshaled in regular pomp, stately and beauteous appear.

All give token of rule and choice, and all has its meaning,—

'Tis this uniform plan points out the Ruler to me.
 Brightly the glittering domes in far-away distance proclaim him.

Out of the kernel of rocks rises the city's high wall.
 Into the desert without, the Fauns of the forest are driven,

But by devotion is lent life more sublime to the stone.
 Man is brought into nearer union with man, and round
 him

Closer, more actively wakes, swifter moves in him the world.

See! the emulous forces in fiery conflict are kindled,
 Much they effect when they strive, more they effect
 when they join.

Thousands of hands by one spirit are mov'd, yet in thousands of bosoms

Beats one heart all alone, by but one feeling inspir'd—
 Beats for their native land, and glows for their ancestors' precepts;

Here on the well-belov'd spot, rest now their time-honored bones.

Down from the heavens descend the blessed troop of immortals,

In the bright circle divine making their festal abode;
 Granting glorious gifts, they appear: and first of all,
 Ceres

Offers the gift of the plough, Hermes the anchor brings next,

Bacchus the grape, and Minerva the verdant olive-tree's
 branches,

Even his charger of war brings there Poseidon a well.

Mother Cybele yokes to the pole of her chariot the lions,
 And through the wide-open door comes as a citizen in.
 Sacred stones! 'Tis from ye that proceed Humanity's founders,

Morals and arts ye sent forth, e'en to the ocean's far isles.

'Twas at these friendly gates that the law was spoken by sages;

In their Penates' defence, heroes rushed out to the fray.

On the high walls appear'd the mothers, embracing their infants,

Looking after the march, till in the distance 'twas lost.

Then in prayer they threw themselves down at the Deities' altars,
 Praying for triumph and fame, praying for your safe return.

Honor and triumph were yours, but naught return'd
 save your glory,
 And by a heart-touching stone, told are your valorous deeds.

"Traveler! when thou com'st to Sparta, proclaim to the people
 That thou hast seen us lie here, as by the law we were bid."

Slumber calmly, ye lov'd ones! for sprin'g'd o'er by your life-blood,
 Flourish the olive-trees there, joyously sprouts the good seed.

In its possessions exulting, industry gladly is kindled,
 And from the sedgo of the stream smilingly signs the blue God.

Crushingly falls the ax on the tree, the Dryad sighs
 sadly;

Down from the crest of the mount plunges the thundering load.

Wing'd by the lever, the stone from the rocky crevice is loos'n'd ;
 Into the mountain's abyss boldly the miner descends, Mulciber's anvil resounds with the measur'd stroke of the hammer ;

Under the fist's nerveur blows spurt out the sparks of the steel.

Brilliantly twines the golden flax round the swift-whirling spindles,
 Through the strings of the yarn whizzes the shuttle
 away.

Far in the roads the pilot calls, and the vessels are waiting,

That to the foreigner's land carry the produce of home ;

Others gladly approach with the treasures of far, distant regions,

High on the mast's lofty head flutters the garland of mirth.

See how you markets, those centres of life and of gladness, are swarming !

Strange confusion of tongues sounds in the wondering
ear.

On to the pile the wealth of the earth is heap'd by the merchant,

All that the sun's scorching rays bring forth on Africa's soil,

All that Arabia prepares, that the uttermost Thule produces,

High with heart-gladdening stores fills Amalthea her horn.

Fortuno wedded to Talent gives birth there to children
immortal,

Suckled in Liberty's arms, flourish the Arts thero of joy.

With the image of life the eyes by the sculptor are ravish'd,

And by the chisel inspir'd, speaks e'en the sensitive stone.

Skies artificial repose on slender Ionian columns,

And a Pantheon includes all that Olympus contains.

Light as the rainbow's spring through the air, as the dart from the bowstring,

Leaps the yoke of the bridge ever the boisterous
stream.

But in his silent chamber the thoughtful sage is projecting

Magical circles, and steals e'en on the spirit that forms,

Proves the force of matter, the hatreds and loves of the magnet,

Follows the tune through the air, follows through æther the ray,

Seeks the familiar law in chance's miracles dreaded,

Looks for the ne'er-changing pole in the phenomena's flight.

Bodies and voices are lent by writing to thought ever
silent,

Over the centuries' stream bears it the eloquent page.

Then to the wondering gaze dissolves the cloud of the fancy,

And the vain phantoms of night yield to the dawning
of day.

Man now breaks through his fetters, the happy One!

Oh, let him never

Break from the bridle of shame, when from fear's fetters he breaks!
 Freedom! is Reason's cry,—ay, Freedom! The wild raging passions
 Eagerly cast off the bonds nature divine had impos'd.

Ah! in the tempest the anchors break loose, that warn-ingly held him
 On to the shore, and the stream tears him along in its flood,—

Into infinity whirls him,—the coasts soon vanish before
 him,

High on the mountainous waves rocks all dismasted
 the bark;

Under the clouds are hid the steadfast stars of the chariot;
 Naught now remains,—in the breast even the God goes astray.

Truth disappears from language, from life all faith and all honor

Vanish, and even the oath is but a lie on the lips.
 Into the heart's most trusty bond, and into love's secrets, Presses the sycophant base, tearing the friend from the friend.

Treason on Innocence leers, with looks that seek to devour,

And the fell slanderer's tooth kills with its poisonous bite.

In the dishonored bosom, thought is now venal, and love, too,

Scatters abroad to the winds, feelings once God-like and free.

All thy holy symbols, O Truth, Deceit has adopted,
 And has e'en dar'd to pollute Nature's own voices so fair,

That the craving heart in the tumult of gladness discovers;

True sensations are now mute and can scarcely be heard.

Justice boasts at the tribune, and Harmony vaunts in the cottage,

While the ghost of the law stands at the throne of the king.

Years together, ay, centuries long, may the mummy continue,

And the deception endure, aping the fulness of life.
Until Nature awakes, and with hands all brazen and heavy
'Gainst the hollow form'd pile Time and Necessity strikes.

Like a tigress, who, bursting the massive grating of iron,

Of her Numidian wood suddenly, fearfully thinks,—
So with the fury of crime and anguish, humanity rises
Hoping nature, long lost, in the town's ashes to find.
Oh then open, ye walls, and set the captive at freedom!

To the long desolate plains let him in safety return!

But where am I? The path is now hid, declivities rugged

Bar, with their wide yawning gulf, progress before and behind.
Now far behind me is left the gardens' and hedges' sure escort,

Every trace of man's hand also remains far behind.
Only the matter I see piled up whence life has its issue,

And the raw mass of basalt waits for a fashioning
hand.
Down through its channel of rock the torrent roaringly
rushes,

Angrily forcing a path under the roots of the trees.
All is here wild and fearfully desolate. Naught but the eagle

Hangs in the lone realms of air, knitting the world to the clouds.

Not one zephyr on soaring pinion conveys to my hearing

Echoes, however remote, marking man's pleasures and pains.

Am I in truth, then, alone? Within thine arms on thy bosom,

Nature, I lie once again!—Ah, and 'twas only a dream

That assail'd me with horrors so fearful; with life's dreaded phantom,

And with the down-rushing vale, vanished the gloomy
one too.

THE SONG OF THE BELL.

Purer my life I receive again from thine dear unsullied,—

Purer receive the bright glow felt by my youth's hopeful days.

Ever the will is changing its aim and its rule, while for ever

In a still varying form, actions revolve round themselves.

But in enduring youth, in beauty ever renewing.

Kindly Nature, with grace thou dost revere the old law!

Ever the same for the man in thy faithful hands thou
preservest

That which the child in its sport, that which the youth
lent to thee;

At the same breast thou dost suckle the ceaselessly-
varying ages;

Under the same azure vault, over the same verdant
earth,

Races, near and remote, in harmony wander together,— See, even Homer's own sun looks on us, too, with a smile!

THE SONG OF THE BELL.

VIVOS VOCO. MORTUOS PLANGO. FULGURA FRANGO.

WALL'D securely in the ground,
Stands the mould of well-bak'd clay:

Comrades, at your task be found!
We must cast the Bell to-day!

From the burning brow
Sweat must run, I trow,

Would we have our work commended—
Blessings must be heaven-descended.

A solemn word may well befit
The task we solemnly prepare;

When goodly converso hallows it.
The labor flows on gladly there.

Let us observe with careful eyes
What thro' deficient strength escapes,

The thoughtless man we must despise,
 Who disregards the thing he shapes,
 This forms a man's chief attribute,
 And Reason is to him assign'd,
 That what his hand may execute,
 Within his heart, too, he should find

Heap ye up the pinewood first,
 Yet full dry it needs must be,
 That the smother'd flame may burst
 Fiercely through the cavity !
 Let the copper brew !
 Quick the tin add too,
 That the tough bell-metal may
 Ense there in the proper way !

The Bell that in the dam's deep hole
 Our hands with help of fire prepare,
 From the high belfry-tower will toll,
 And witness of us loudly bear.
 'Twill there endure till distant days,
 On many an ear its sounds will dwell,
 Sad wailings with the mourner raise,—
 The chorus of devotion swell.
 Whatever changeful fate may bring
 To be man's portion here below,
 Against its metal crown will ring,
 And through the nations echoing go.

Bubbles white I see ascend ;
 Good ! the heap dissolves at last ;
 Let the potash with it blend,
 Urging on the fusion fast.
 Foam and bubble-free
 Must the mixture be,
 That from metal void of stain
 Pure and full may rise the strain.

For in a song with gladness rise,
 The cherish'd child it loves to greet,
 When first he treads the path of life,
 Wrapt in the arms of slumbers sweet ;

THE SONG OF THE BELL

His coming fate of joy or gloom
 Lies buried in the future's womb;
 The tender cares that mothers prove
 His golden morning guard with love:
 The years with arrowy swiftness fleet,
 The proud boy bids the maid adieu,
 And into life with wildness flies,
 The world on pilgrim's-staff reams through -
 Then as a stranger homeward hies;
 And gracefully, in beauty's pride,
 Like to some heav'nly image fair,
 Her modest cheeks with blushes dyed,
 He sees the maiden standing there.
 A nameless yearning now appears
 And fills his heart; alone he strays,
 His eyes are ever moist with tears,
 He shuns his brothers' noisy plays;
 Her steps he blushing pursues.
 And by her greeting is made blest,
 Gathers the flow'rs of fairest hues,
 With which to deck his true love's breast.
 Oh, tender yearning, blissful hope,
 Thou golden time of love's young day!
 Heav'n seems before the eye to open,
 The heart in rapture melts away.
 Oh may it ever verdant prove,
 That radiant time of early love!

Dusky-hued becomes each pipe!
 Let me plunge this rod in here:
 All for casting will be ripe
 When we see it glaz'd appear.
 Comrades stand ye by!
 Now the mixture try,
 If the brittle will combine
 With the soft propitious sign!

For there is heard a joyous sound
 Where sternness is with softness bound,
 Where joins the gentle with the strong
 Who binds himself for ever, ho
 Should prove if heart and heart agree:
 The dream is short, repentance long.

Through the bride's fair locks so dear
 Twines the virgin chaplet bright,
 When the church-bells, ringing clear,
 To the jeyous feast invite.
 Ah ! life's happiest festival
 Needs must end life's happy May ;
 With the vail and girdle, all
 Those sweet visio : fade away.

Though passion may fly,
 Yet love must remain ;
 Though the flow'ret may die,
 Yet the fruit scents the plain.
 Man must gird for his race
 Thre' the stern paths of life,
 Midst turmoil and strife,
 Must plant and must form,
 Gain by cunning or storm ;
 Must wager and dare,
 Would he reach fortune o'er.
 Then wealt' without ending upon him soon pours,
 His granaries all overflow with rich stores ;
 The rooms is enlarged, and his house grows apace ;
 And o'er it is ruling
 The housewife so modest,
 His children's dear mother ;
 And wisely she governs
 The circle of home.

The maidens she trains,
 And the boys she restrains,
 Keeps plying for ever
 Her hands that flag never,
 And wealth helps to raise
 With her orderly ways,
 The sweet-scented presses with treasures piled high,
 Bids the thread round the fast-whirling spindle to fly ;
 The cleanly and bright polish'd chest she heaves a bell
 With the flax white as snow, and the glittering wool ;
 All glitter and splendor ordains for the best
 And takes no rest.

And the father, with rapturous gaze,
 From the far-seeing roof of his dwelling;
 Ail his blossoming riches surveys;
 Sees each projecting pillar and post,
 Sees his barns, that of wealth seem to boast;
 Sees each storehouse, by blessings down-borne,
 And the billow-like waving corn,—
 Cries with exalting face:
 "Firm as the earth's firm base,
 Gainst all misfortune's powers
 Proudly my house now towers!"—
 But with mighty destiny
 Union sure there ne'er can be:
 Woo advances rapidly.

Let the easting be begun!
 Traced already is the breach;
 Yet before we let it run,
 Heaven's protecting aid beseech!
 Let the plug now fly!
 May God's help be nigh!
 In the mould all-smoking rush
 Fire-brown billows with fierce gush.

Beneficent tho' might of flame,
 When 'tis by man watch'd o'er, made tame;
 For to this heav'nly power he owes
 All his creative genius knows;
 Yet terrible that power will be,
 When from its fetters it breaks free,
 Treads its own path with passion wild,
 As nature's free and reckless child.
 Woo, if it casts off its chains,
 And, without resistance, growing,
 Through the crowded streets and lanes
 Spreads the blaze, all fiercely glowing!
 For the elements still hate
 All that mortal hands create.
 From the clouds all blessings rill,
 'Tis the clouds that rain distill;
 From the clouds, with quivering beams,
 Lightning gleams.

---

* There is no rhyme to this line in the original.

From yon tower the wailing sound
Spreads the fire alarm around !
Blood-red, lo !

Are the skies !

But 'tis not the day's clear glow !

Smoke up-flies !

Loud the shout

Round about !

High the fiery column glows,
Through the streets' far-stretching rows
On with lightning speed it goes.

Hot as from an oven's womb,
Burns the air, while beams consume,

Windows rattle, pillars fall,

Children wail and mothers call.

Beasts are groaning,

Underneath the ruins moaning.

All their safety seek in flight,

Day-clear lighted is the night.

Through the hands' extended chain

Flies the bucket on amain ;

Floods of water high are thrown ;

Howling comes the tempest on,

Roaring in the flames' pursuit.

Crackling on the wither'd fruit

Falls it,—on the granary,

On the rafters' timber dry,

And, as if earth's heavy weight

Seeking in its flight to bear,

Monstrous it, as a giant great,

Wildly thro' the realms of air.

Man now loses hope at length,

Yielding to immortal strength ;

Idly, and with wond'ring gaze,

All the wreck he now surveys.

Burnt to ashes is the stead,
Now the wild storm's rugged bed.
In the empty window-panes
Shudd'ring horror now remains,
And the clouds of heaven above
Peep in, as they onward move.

Upon the grave where buried lies
 His earthly wealth, his longing eyes
 The man one hugging moment throws,
 Then, as a pilgrim, gladly goes,
 Whate'er the fierce flames may destroy,
 One consolation sweet is left;
 His lov'd one's hands he counts, —and, Joy!
 He is not e'en of one bereft!
 In the earth it now has pour'd,
 And the mould has fill'd aright;
 Skill and labor to reward,
 Will it beauteous come to light?
 If the mould should crack?
 If the casting lack?
 While we hope, e'en now, alas,
 Mischief may have come to pass!

To the dark womb of holy earth
 We trust what issues from our hand,
 As trusts the sower to the land
 His seed, in hope 'twill have its birth
 To bless us, true to Heaven's command.
 Seed still in the precious womb
 Of earth we trusting hide, and wait
 In hope that even from the tomb
 'Twill blossom to a happier fate.

Sad and heavy from the dome
 Hark! the Bell's death-wailings come.
 Solemnly the strains, with sorrow fraught,
 On her way a pilgrim now escort.

For a mother tolls the Bell!
 For a fond wife sounds the knell!
 Death, regardless of her charms,
 Tears her from her husband's arms,
 From her children tears her too,
 Offspring of affection true,
 Whom she cherish'd with the love
 None but mothers ere can prove.
 All the ties their hearts uniting
 Are dissolv'd forevermore;
 She whose smile that home was lighting
 Wanders on oblivion's shore.

Who will now avert each danger?
 Who will now each care dispel?
 In her seat will sit a stranger—
She can never love so well!
 Tell the Bell 'as e'er 'd aright,
 Let the arduous labor rest;
 As the bird must for shade bright
 Flutters, each mite thus be blest.
 When the daylight wanes,
 Free from duty's chains
 Workmen hear the vesper chime;
 Masters have for rest no time.

Gladly hies the wanderer fast,
 Through the forest-glades so deep,
 Tow'rd his own lov'd cot at last,
 Bleating homeward go the sheep;
 Broad-brow'd, smooth skin'd cattle, all
 Bellowing come, and fill each stall.
 Home returns the heavy wain,
 Stag'ring 'neath its load of grain.
 Many-lued, the garlan's ho
 On the sheaves, while girlish fly
 To the dance the reaper-boys,—
 Hush'd each street and market noise,
 Round the candle's social light
 All the household now unite.
 Creakingly the town gates close,
 Darkness its black mantle throws
 O'er the earth; but yet the night,
 Though it fills the land with awe,
 Gives the townsman no affright,
 For he trusts the wakeful law.

Holy Order, blessing life,
 Heaven's own child, by whom in life
 Equal joys and are its end,
 And whose task 'tis to save and to defend—
 Who the wandering stranger led
 From the plains he used to tread.

Enter'd the rude huts of men,
Softening their wild habits then,
And who wove that dearest band,—
Love for home and fatherland!

Thousand busy hands are plying,
Into loving union thrown,
And, in fiery motion vying,
All the forces here are known.
Under freedom's shelter holy
Man and master now unite,
Love their stations, high or lowly,
And defy the scorner's might.
Blessings are our labor's guerdon,
Work adorns the townsman most;
Honor is a king's chief burden,
We in hands industrious boast.

Peace all-lovely!
Blissful concord!
Linger, linger
Kindly over this our town!
May we ne'er the sad day witness
When the hordes of cruel warriors
Wildly tread this silent valley;
When the heavens,
That the eye's bright colors blending
Softly gild
With the light of flames ascending,
From the burning towns are fill'd!

Let us now the mould destroy,
Well it has fulfill'd its part,
That the beauteous shape with joy
May inspire both eye and heart.
Wield the hammer, wield,
Till the mantle yield!
Would we raise the Bell on high,
Must the mould to atoms fly.
The founder may destroy the mould
With cunning hand, if time it be;
But woe, if raging uncontrol'd,
The glowing bronze itself should free!

Blind-raging, like the crashing thunder,
 It bursts its tenement asunder,
 And, as from open jaws of hell,
 Around it spews destruction fell.
 Where forces rule with senseless might,
 No structure there can come to light ;
 When mobs themselves for freedom strive,
 True happiness can never thrive.

Woe, when within a city's walls,
 Where firebrands secretly are pil'd,
 The people, bursting from their thralls,
 Tread their own path with fury wild !
 Sedition then the Bell surrounds,
 And bids it yield a howling tone ;
 And, meant for none but peaceful sounds,
 The signal to the fray spurs on.

"Freedom? Equality!" they shout ;
 The peaceful townsman grasps his arms.
 Mobs stand the streets and halls about,
 The place with bands of murderers swarm.
 Into hyenas women grow,
 From horrors their amusement draw ;
 The heart, still quivering, of the foe
 With panther's teeth they fiercely gnaw.
 All that is holy is effaced,
 Rent are the bonds of modesty ;
 The good is by the bad replaced,
 And crime from all restraint is free.
 Death-fraught the tiger's tooth appears,
 To wake the lion madness seems ;
 Yet the most fearful of all fears
 Is man obeying his wild dreams.
 Woe be to him who, to the blind,
 The heav'nly torch of light conveys !
 It throws no radiance on his mind,
 But land and town in ashes lays.*

God hath hearken'd to my vow !
 See, how like a star of gold
 Peels the metal kernel now,
 Smooth and glistening from the mould !

THE SONG OF THE BELL

Even from crown to base
 Sunlike gleams its face,
 While the scutcheons, fairly plann'd,
 Praise the skilful artist's hand.

Now let us gather round the frame!
 The ring let ev'ry workman swell,
 That we may consecrate the Bell!
 Concordia be henceforth its name,
 Assembling all the loving throng
 In harmony and union throng!

And this be the vocation fit
 For which the founder fashion'd it!
 High, high above earth's life, earth's labor,
 Even to the heav'n's' blue vault to soar,
 To hover as the thunder's neighbor,
 The very firmament explore;
 To be a voice as from above,
 Like yonder stars so bright and clear,
 That praise their Maker as they move
 And usher in the circling year.
 Tis'd be its metal mouth alone
 To things eternal and sublime,
 And, as the swift-winged hours speed on,
 May it record the flight of time!
 Its tongues to Fate it well may lend;
 Heartless itself, and feeling naught,
 May with its warning notes attend
 On human life, with change so fraught.
 And, as the strains die on the ear
 That it peals forth with tuneful might,
 So let it teach that naught lasts here,
 That all things earthly take their flight!

Now then, with the rope so strong,
 From the vault the Bell upweigh,
 That it gains the realms of song,
 And the heav'nly light of day!
 All hands nimbly ply!
 Now it mounts on high:
 To this city Jor reveals,—
 PEACE be the first strain it peals!

THE POWER OF SONG.

The foaming stream from out the rock
 With thunder roar begins to rush,—
 The oak falls prostrate at the shock,
 And mountain wrecks attend the gush,
 With rapturous awe, in wonder lost,
 The wanderer hearkens to the sound
 From cliff to cliff he hears it toss'd,
 Yet knows not whither it is bound :
 'Tis thus that song's bright waters pour
 From sources never known before.

In union with those dreaded ones
 That spin life's thread all-silently, —
 Who can resist the singer's tones ?
 Who from his magic set him free ?
 With wand like that the Gods bestow,
 He guides the heaving bosom's chords,
 He steeps it in the realms below,
 He bears it, wondering, heavenwards,
 And rocks it, 'twixt the grave and gay,
 On Feeling's scales that trembling sway.

As when, before the startled eyes
 Of some glad throng, mysteriously,
 With giant-step, in spirit-guise,
 Appears a wondrous Deity,
 Then bows each greatness of the earth
 Before the stranger, heaven-born,
 Mute are the thoughtless sounds of mirth,
 While from each face the mask is torn,
 And from the truth's triumphant might
 Each work of falsehood takes to flight :

So, from each idle burden free,
 When summon'd by the voice of song,
 Man soars to spirit-dignity,
 Receiving force divinely strong :
 Among the Gods is now his home,
 Naught earthly ventures to approach—
 All other powers must now be dumb,
 No fate can on his realms encroach ;
 Care's gloomy wrinkles disappear,
 Whilst Music's charms still linger here.

As, after long and hopeless yearning,
 And separation's bitter smart,
 A child, with tears repentant burning,
 Clings fondly to his mother's heart—
 So to his youthful happy dwelling,
 To rapture pure and free from stain,
 All strange and false conceits expelling,
 Song guides the wanderer back again,
 In faithful Nature's loving arm.
 From chilling precepts to grow warm.

THE PRAISE OF WOMAN.

ALL honor to women!—they soften and leaven
 The cares of the world with the roses of Heaven—
 The ravishing fetters of love they entwine;
 Their charms from the world's eye modestly veiling,
 They foster and nourish, with care never failing,
 The fire eternal of feelings divine.

Man's wild force, in constant motion,
 Spurns the bounds by truth assign'd;
 And, on passion's stormy ocean,
 To and fro is toss'd his mind.
 Peace his bosom visits never,
 As he heaps up scheme on scheme,
 And through space pursues for ever
 Each vain phantom of his dream.

But with her sweet look, so soft and enchainning,
 Woman, the fugitive gently restraining,
 Summons him back to the regions of earth;
 The daughter of Nature, with meekness unshaken,
 The home of her mother has never forsaken—
 Has ever been true to the place of her birth.

Man, the torrent sternly breasting,
 Spends his days in ceaseless strife;
 Never pausing, never resting,
 While he treads the paths of life.
 All his plans to ruin bringing,
 No'er his changing wish grows cold,
 When destroy'd, again up-springing,
 Like the Hydra's heads of old.

But in a gentler sphere passing her hours,
 Woman plucks ever the moment's sweet flowers,
 Lovingly tends them with fostering care ;
 Freer than man, though less wide her dominion,
 Soaring above him on wisdom's bright pinion,
 Glitt'ring in poesy's circle so fair.

Selfishness and pride combining,
 Man's cold bosom ne'er can prove,
 Round a fond heart fondly twining,
 All the heav'ly bliss of love.
 Soul communion never feeling,
 Tears to him no balm impart,
 Life's hard conflicts only steeling
 Sterner still his rugged heart.

But as when softly to Zephyr replying,
 Æolus' harp gently breathes forth its sighing,
 The soft soul of woman its sighs breathes forth too ;
 At the sad tale of misery tenderly grieving,
 See we her bosom with sympathy heaving,
 Her melting eye sparkling with heavenly dew.

Man, imperious, stern, insulting,
 Knows no law save that of might ;
 Scythians wave their swords exulting,—
 Persians tremble in affright.
 Furious passions raging wildly
 Fiercely struggle day by day ;
 And, where Charis govern'd mildly,
 Eris now asserts her sway.

HOPE.

Of better and brighter days to come
 Man is talking and dreaming ever ;
 To gain a happy, a golden home,
 His efforts he ceases never :
 The world decays, and again revives,
 But man for improvement ever strives.

'Tis Hope first shows him the light of day,
 Though infancy hovers before him,
 Enchants him in youth with her magic ray,
 Survives, when the grave closes o'er him ;
 For when in the tomb ends his weary race,
 E'en there still see we her smiling face !

'Tis no vain flattering vision of youth,
 On the fool's dull brain descending :
 To the heart it ever proclaims this glad truth :
 Tow'rd a happier life we are tending :
 And the promise the voice within us hath spoken
 Shall ne'er to the hoping soul be broken.

THE GERMAN MUSE.

No Augustan century,
 No propitious Medici
 Smil'd on German art when young
 Glory nourish'd not her powers,
 She unfolded not her flowers
 Princes' fav'ring rays among.

From the mighty Fred'rick's throne
 Germany's most glorious son,—
 Went she forth, defenceless, spurn'd ;
 Proudly Germans may repeat,
 While their hearts more gladly beat,—
 They themselves their crown have earn'd.

THE SOWER.

Therefore mounts with nobler pride,
 Therefore with a fuller tide
 Pours the stream of German birds ;—
 With his own abundance swells, —
 From the inmost bosom wells, —
 Chains of method disregards.

---

THE SOWER.

SEEK with a heart full of hope, to the earth golden seed
 thou entrustest,
 And with joy in the Spring, waitest to see it appear Art thou mindful to strew in the furrows of Time worthy actions,
 Which for Eternity bloom, calmly by wisdom's hand sown ?

THE MERCHANT.

WHITHER is sailing the Ship ? It bears the people of Sidon
 From the cold realms of the North, bringing the amber and tin.
 Bear it up gently, O Neptune ! and peacefully rest it,
 ye zephyrs :—
 Let it in sheltering bay find the refreshment it needs is to you, ye Gods, that the Merchant belongs. Seek ing riches,
 does he,—yet to his ship that which is good ever clings.

ODYSSEUS.

SEEKING to find his home, Odysseus crosses each water ;
 Through Charybdis so dread ; ay, and through Scylla
 in's wild yells,
 Through the alarms of the raging sea, the alarms of the land too,—

CARTHAGE.

E'en to the kingdom of Hell leads him his wandering
 course;
 And at length, as he sleeps, to Ithaca's coast Fato conducts him;
 There he awakes, and, with grief, knows not his fatherland now.

---

CARTHAGE.

Oh thou degenerate child of the great and glorious mother.
 Who with the Romans' strong might couplest the 'Tyrians' deceit!
 But those ever govern'd with vigor the earth they had conquer'd,—
These instructed the world that they with cunning had won.
 Say! what renown does history grant thee? Thou:
 Roman-like, gain'dst
 That with the steel, which with gold, Tyrian-like, then thou didst rule!

THE KNIGHTS OF MALTA.

NOBLY, in truth, ye are cloth'd by the Cross's equipment so dreaded,
 When ye, the lions in fight, Accon and Rhodus protect,—
 When through the Syrian deserts ye guide the sorrowing pilgrim,
 And, with the Cherubim's sword, stand o'er the Saviour's blest tomb
 But a glory still nobler surrounds ye,—the garb of the nurser,

When ye, the lions in fight, sons of the race so re-nown'd,
 Serve at the bed of the sick, refreshment prepare for the thirsty, —
 When ye perform the mean rites Christian-like mercy
 enjoins.
 Glorious Faith of the Cross! thou only in one wreath
 unitest
 Those two flourishing palms, Meekness and Valor, at once!

GERMAN FAITH.*

ONCE for the sceptre of Germany, fought with Bavarian
 Louis
 Fred'rick of Hapsburg descent, both being call'd to the throne.
 But the envious fortune of war deliver'd the Austrian
 Into the hands of the foe, who overcame him in fight.
 With the throne he purchas'd his freedom, pledging his honor
 For the victor to draw 'gainst his own people his sword;
 But what he vow'd when in chains, when free he could not accomplish,
 So, of his own free accord, put on his fetters again, Deeply mov'd his foe embraced him,—and from thence-forward
 As a friend with a friend, pledg'd they the cup at the feast;
 Arm-in-arm, the princes on one couch slumber'd together,
 While a still bloodier hate sever'd the nations apart.
 'Gainst the army of Fred'rick, Louis now went, and behind him
 Left the foe he had fought, over Bavaria to watch.
 "Ay, it is true! 'Tis really true! I have it in writing!"
 Thus did the Pontifex ery, when he first heard of the news.

COLUMBUS.

O, thou sailor undamned! Though shallow wittings deride thee,
 And though the steersman his hand carelessly drops
 from the helm.
 On, still on, tow'rd the West! 'Tis there that the coast
 will first greet thee,
 For to thy reason it lies clear and distinct even now.
 Trust to the guiding God, and follow the world's silent ocean!
 And though as yet never seen, lo! it ascends from the flood!
 With the intellect Nature standeth in union eternal;
 And what is promis'd by one, that will the other fulfil.

POMPEII AND HERCULANEUM.

What strange wonder is this? Our prayer to thee was for water.
 Earth! What is this that thou now send'st from thy womb in reply?
 In the abyss is there life? Or hidden under the lava Dwelleth some race now unknown? Does what hath fled e'er return?
 Greeks and Romans, oh come! Oh, see the ancient Pompeii
 Here is discover'd again,—Hercules' town is rebuilt!
 Gable on gable arises, the roomy portico opens Wide its halls, so make haste,—haste ye to fill it with life!
 Open, too, stands the spacious theatre, let, then, the people,
 Like a resistless flood, pour through its sevenfold mouths!
 Mimes, where are ye? Advance! Let Atrides finish
 the rites now
 He had begun,—let the dread chorus Orestes pursue!
 Whither leads yon triumphal arch? Perceive ye the forum?
 What are those figures that sit on the Curulian chair?

Lietors ! precede with your fasees,—and let the Prætor in judgment
 Sit,—let tho witness come forth ! let the accuser appear !
 Cleanly streets spread around, and with a loftier pavement
 Does the contracted path wind close to the houses'
     long row ;
 While, to protect them, the roofs protrude,—and the handsome apartments
 Round the now desolate court peacefully, fondly are ranged,
 Hasten to open the shops, and the gateways that long have been chok'd up,
 And let the bright light of day fall on the desolate
     night !
 See how around the edge extend the benches so graceful,
     And how the floor rises up, glitt'ring with many-hued
     stone !
 Freshly still shines the wall with colors burning and glowing !
 Where is the artist ? His brush he has but now laid aside.
 Teeming with swelling fruits, and flowers dispos'd in fair order,
 Chases the brilliant festoon ravishing images there.
Here, with a basket full-laden, a Cupid gaily is dancing,
 Genie industrious there tread out the purple-dyed wine.
 High there the Bacchanal dances and here she calmly is sleeping,
 While the listening Faun has not yet sated his eyes ;
 Here sho puts to flight the swift-footed Centaur, suspended
 On one knee, and, the while, goads with the Thyrsus his steps.

 Boys, why tarry ye ? Quick ! The beauteous vessels still stand there ;
 Hasten, ye maidens, and pour into the Etrurian jar !
 Does not tho tripod stand here, on sphinxes graceful and winged ?
 Stir up the fire, ye slaves ! Haste to make ready the hearth !

Go and buy ; Here is money that's coined by Titus the Mighty ;
 Still are the scales lying here ; not e'en one weight has been lost.
 Place the burning lights in the branches so gracefully
 fashion'd,
 And with the bright-shining oil see that the lamp is supplied !
 What does this casket contain ? Oh, see what the bridegroom has sent thee !
 Maiden ! 'Tis buckles of gold ; glittering gems for thy dress.
 Lead the bride to the odorous bath,—here still are the unguents ;
 Paints, too, are still lying here, filling the hollow-shap'd vase.

But where tarry the men ? the elders ? In noble museum
 Still lies a heap of strange rolls, treasures of infinite worth !
 Styles, too, are here, and tablets of wax, all ready for writing ;
 Nothing is lost, for, with faith, earth has protected the whole.
 E'en the Penates are present, and all the glorious Im-
 mortals
 Meet here again, and of all, none, save the priests, are not here.
 Hermes, whose feet are grac'd with wings, his Caduceus is waving,
 And from the grasp of his hand victory lightly escapes.
 Still are the altars standing here,—oh come, then, and kindle,—
 Long hath the God been away,—kindle the incense to Him !

THE ILLAD.

TEAR for ever the garland of Homer, and number the fathers
 Of the immortal work, that through all time will survive !

Yet it has but one mother, and bears that mother's own
 features,
 'Tis thy features it bears,—Nature,—thy features
 eterno !

ZEUS TO HERCULES.*

'Twas not by means of my nectar, that thou hast made thee immortal ;
 Naught but thine own god-like strength conquer'd that nectar for thee.

THE ANTIQUE TO THE NORTHERN WANDERER.

Thou hast cross'd over torrents, and swum through wide-spreading oceans,—
 Over the chain of the Alps dizzily bore thee the bridge,
 That thou might'st see me from near, and learn to value
 my beauty,
 Which the voice of renown spreads through the wondering world.
 And now before me thou standest,—canst touch my altar
 so holy,—
 But art thou nearer to me, or am I nearer to thee ?

THE BARDS OF OLDEN TIME.

Say, where is now that glorious race, where now are the singers
 Who, with the accents of life, listening nations enthrall'd,
 Sung down from heaven the gods, and sung mankind up to heaven,

---

* It is curious to see how often Schiller mixes up the Greek and Latin Deities. In Seneca, for instance, he uses Zeus and Jupiter indistinctly.

And wile the spirit bore up high on the pinions of song?
 Ah! the singers still live; the actions only are wanting,
 And to wake the glad harp, only a welcoming ear.
 Happy bards of a happy world! Your life-teeming accents
 Flew round from month unto month, gladdening every race.
 With the devotion with which the Gods were receiv'd,
 each one welcom'd
 That which the genius for him, plastic and breathing,
 then form'd.
 With the glow of the song were inflam'd the listener's
 senses,
 And with the listener's sense, nourish'd the singer the glow,— Nourish'd and cleans'd it,—fortunate one! for whom is the voice
 Of the people still clear echoed the soul of the song,
 And to whom from without appear'd, in life, the great Godhead,
 Whom the bard of these days scarcely can feel in his breast!

THE ANTIQUES AT PARIS.

THAT which Grecian art created,
 Let the Frank, with joy elated,
 Bear to Seine's triumphant strand,
 And in his museums glorious
 Show the trophies all-victorious
 To his wond'ring fatherland.

They to him are silent ever,
 Into life's fresh circle never
 From their pedestals come down.
 To alone e'er holds the muses
 Through whose breast their power diffuses,—
 To the Vandal they're but stone!

THEKLA.

· A SPIRIT-VOICE.

WHITHER was it that my spirit wended
 When from thee my fleeting shadow mov'd?
 Is not now each earthly conflict ended?
 Say,—have I not liv'd,—have I not lov'd?

Art thou for the nightingales inquiring
 Who entranc'd thee in the early year
 With their melody so joy-inspiring?
 Only whilst they lov'd, they lingered here.

Is the lost one lost to me for ever?
 Trust me, with him joyfully I stray
 There, where naught united souls can sever,
 And where ev'ry tear is wiped away.

And thou, too, wilt find us in yon heaven,
 When thy love with our love can compare?
 There my father dwells, his sins forgiven,—
 Murder foul can never reach him there.

And he feels that him no vision cheated
 When he gaz'd upon the stars on high;*
 For, as each one metes, to him 'tis meted;
 Who believes it, hath the Holy nigh.

Faith is kept in those blest regions yonder
 With the feelings true that ne'er decay.
 Venture thou to dream, then, and to wander:
 Noblest thoughts oft lie in childlike play.

THE MAID OF ORLEANS.

HUMANITY'S bright image to impair,
 Scorn laid thee prostrate in the dearest dust;
 Wit wages ceaseless war on all that's fair,—
 In Angel and in God it puts no trust;
 The bosom's treasures it would make its prey,—
 Besieges Fancy,—duns e'en Faith's pure ray.

Yet, issuing like thyself from humble line,
 Like thee a gentle shepherdess is she,—
 Sweet idosy affords her rights divine,
 And to the stars eternal soars with thee.
 Around thy brow a glory she hath thrown;
 The heart 'twas form'd thee,—ever thou'lt live on!

The world delights whate'er is bright to stain,
 And in the dust to lay the glorious low;
 Yet fear not! noble bosoms still remain,
 That for the Lefty, for the Radiant glow.
 Let Momus serve to fill the booth with mirth;
 A nobler mind loves forms of nobler worth.

---

NÆNIA

Even the beauteous must die! This vanquishes Men and Immortals;
 But of the Stygian God moves not the bosom of steel.
 Once and once only could Love prevail on the Ruler of Shadows,
 And on the threshold e'en then, sternly his gift he re-call'd.
 Venus could never heal the wounds of the beauteous
 stripling,
 That the terrible boar made in his delicate skin;
 Nor could his mother immortal preserve the hero so god-like,
 When, at the west gate of 'Troy, falling, his fate he fulfill'd.
 But she arose from the ocean with all the daughters of Nereus,
 And o'er her glorified son rais'd the loud accents of woe.

See! where all the gods and goddesses yonder are weeping,
 That the Beauteous must fade, and that the Perfect must die.
 Even a woe-song to be in the mouth of the lov'd ones is glorious,
 For what is vulgar descends mutely to Orcus' dark shades.

---

THE PLAYING CHILD.

PLAY, fair child, in thy mother's lap! In that island
 so holy,
 Withering grief cannot come, desolate ears not approach.
 O'er the abyss the arms of thy mother lovingly hold
 thee.
 Into the watery grave smilest thou guilelessly do Play, sweet innocent, still! Areadia yet dwells around
 thee,
 Nature, as yet unrestrain'd, follows the impulse of joy.
 Still does luxuriant vigor raise up its barriers poetic—
 Duty and object as yet guide not thy tractable soul.
 Play, then! for soon will labor approach thee, haggard
 and solemn,
 And even duty's command, pleasure and mind disobey.

---

THE SEXES.

SEE in the tender child two beauteous fig'ures
 united!
 Maiden and youth are both now hid in the bud from the eye.
 Gently loosens the band, the natures with softness are parted,
 And from the modest-face'd shame, severs the fiery might.
 Suffer the boy to play, with raging passions to bluster
 Sated vigor alone turns into beauty again.

From the bud begins the twofold flow'ret to issue,—
Both are precious, but yet, neither thy yearning heart

calms.
Ravishing fulfils swells the blooming limbs of the maiden,

But, like her girdle, her pride watches with care o'er her charms.

Shy as the trembling roe, whom the hunter pursues
through the forest,

Flies he from man as a foe,—hates him, because she loves not.

Boldly, " proudly looks the youth from beneath his dark eyebrow,

And, girded up for the fight, strains to the utmost his nerve.

Far, in the turmoil of spears, and on the race-course so dusty,

Hurries him fame's craving thirst, bears him his boisterous mind.

Now, great Nature, protect thy work! What seeks itself
ever,

Flies, if thou rivet it not, ever in anger apart.

Mighty one! thou already art there; from the wildest of conflicts

Thou dost call forth into life harmony's concord divine.

Sudden is hush'd the sound of the chase; the day's busy echo

Dies on the ear, and the stars gently sink down to their rest.

Sighing whispers the reed,—soft-murmuring glides on the streamlet,

And her melodious song Philomel trills through the grove.

What is it forces a sigh from the heaving breast of the maiden?

Youth, what is it that bids tears to mount up to thine eye?

Ah! she seeks in vain for a something all-gently to cling to,

And the o'er ripe fruit bends to the ground with its weight.

Restlessly-striving, the youth in his self-lighted flame is consuming;

Ah ! o'er that fierce-burning glow breathes not a softening wind,
 See, at length they meet,—'tis Cupid has brought them
 together,
 And to the deity wing'd, victory wing'd soon succeeds.
 Love divine, 'tis thou that joinest mortality's flowers !
 Parted for ever, by thee are they for evermore link'd !

---

THE POWER OF WOMAN.

MIGHTY art thou, because of the peaceful charms of thy presence ;
 That which the silent does not, never the boastful
 can do.
 Vigor in man I expect, the law in its honors maintaining,
 But, through the graces alone, woman e'er rules or should rule.
 Many, indeed, have ru'd through the might of the spirit and action,
 But then, thou noblest of crowns, they were deficient
 in thee.
 No real queen exists but the womanly beauty of woman ;
 Where it appears, it must rule ; ruling because it appears !

---

THE DANCE.

SEE, how like billows the couples with hovering motion are whirling !
 Scarce does the swift-winged foot seem to alight on the earth.
 See I fugitive shadows set free from the weight of the body ?
 Weave, in the light of the moon, elves their ethereal dance ?
 As when, rock'd by the zephyr, the weightless vapor
 flies upwards,
 As on the silvery flood lightly is balanc'd the bark,
 So on the tuneful billows of Time is the docile foot moving ;

Murmuring tones from the chorals wafting the body
 through air.
 Now, as if seeking with might to burst through the
 dance's strong fetters,
 There, where the throng is most dense, boldly a couple whirl round.
 Quickly before them arises a path, disappearing behind them;

As with a magical hand, opens and closes the way.
 See! now they vanish from sight; in wild entanglement blended,

Falls the edifice proud, built of this movable world.
 No, there it rises again exulting, the knot is un-
 ravel'd;

While the old rule is restor'd, with but a new form of charm.
 Ever demolish'd, the whirling creation renews itself
 ever,

And, by a law that is made, each transformation is led.
 Say, how is it that, ever renew'd the figures are,
 hovering,

While repose is not found, save in the changeable
 form?
 How is each one at freedom to follow the will of his bosom,

And to find out the solo path, as he pursues his swift
 course?
 Wouldst thou know how it is? 'Tis Harmony's powerful godhead,

Changing the boisterous leap into the sociable dance,
 That, like Nemesis, links to the golden bridle of rhythm

Every violent lust, taming each thing that was wild.
 Is't then in vain that the universe breathes its harmonious numbers?

Does not the music divine bear thee away in its
 stream?
 Feelest thou not the inspiring time that all creatures are beating?

Not the swift-whirling dance that through the wide realms of space
 Brandishes glittering suns, in paths intertwining with boldness?

Honoring Measure in sport, thou dost avoid it in deed.

FORTUNE.

BLEST is the man whom the merciful gods, ere he came into being,
 Cherish'd, and whom, as a child, Venus then rock'd
 in her arms ;
 And whose eyes by Phoebus, whose lips by Hermes
 were open'd,
 And on whose forehead great Zens stamp'd the impression of might !
 Truly, a glorious lot is his,—ay ! e'en a divine one,
 For, ere the contest begins, wreath'd with a crown is his brow ;
 Ere he has liv'd it, the fulness of life as his portion is meted,
 Ere he has labor endur'd, he has to Charis attain'd.
 Great I must call the man, who, his own creator and sculptor,
 Vanquishes even the Fates, by his strong virtue alone ;
 Fortune, alas ! he ne'er can o'ercome, and what Charis refuses Grudgingly, ne'er can he reach, strive with what courage he may.
 Thou canst defend thee with resolute will from what is unworthy ;
 All that is nobler the gods freely send down from above.
 As thou art lov'd by the lov'd one, so fall the gifts
 granted by Heaven ;
 Yonder in Jupiter's realm, Favor is lord, as in Lovo's.
 Gods by affection are govern'd—the curly locks of green childhood
 Lovo they full well, for the glad ever by rapture are led.
 'Tis not they who can see that are ever made blest by their presence,—
 No one save he who is blind views their bright glory
 reveal'd.
 Gladly they chooso for themselves simplicity's innocent
 spirit,
 And in the vessel so meek, that which is Godlike enclose.
 All unforeseen they come, deceiving each proud expectation,

No anathema's might forest the free ones from high.
Down to the men whom he loves, the Father of men
and immortals

Bids his eagle descend, bearing him then to the skies.
'Mongst the multitude ever pursues he his self-will'd researches,

And, when well pleas'd with a head, round it he wreathes with kind hand
Now the laurel, and now the fillet dominion-bestowing,—
Favoring fortune alone e'er can the god himself crown.

Phœbus, the Pythian victor, precedes the happy one's footsteps,

And the subdner of hearts, Amor, the sweet-smiling
god.

Neptune makes level the ocean before him, the keel of the vessel

Glides softly on, as it bears Caesar and Cæsar's great fate.

Down at his feet sinks the roaring lion, the blustering dolphin

Mounts from the deep, and his back offers with meekness to Him.

Envy the happy one not, if an easy triumph the Immor-tals

Grant him, or from the fight Venus her darling preserves.

Him whom that smiling one rescues, the favor'd of Heaven, I envy,

Not the man o'er whose eyes she a dark covering throws.
Should Achilles be reckon'd less glorious, in that Hephaestus

Fashion'd his buckler himself, fashion'd his terrible
sword,

In that around him when dying the whole of Olympus was gather'd?

Great was his glory, in truth, in that the gods lov'd
him well;

In that they honor'd his wrath, and to give renown to their fav'rite,

Hurl'd the best of the Greeks down to the darkness of hell.

Envy not beauty because she shines like the lily's sweet calyx

Owing to Venus's gift, void of all merit herself.
Let her the happy one be ; if thou seest her, thou, then,
art the blest one !

As without merit she shines, so thou art joy'd by her charms.

Be thou glad that the gift of song descends from the heavens,

And that thou hear'st from the bard what he has learn'd from the muse !

Since by the god he's inspir'd, a god he becomes to the hearer ;

Since he the happy one is, thou canst the blissful one be.

In the busy market let Themis appear with her balance, Let the reward mete itself, strictly proportion'd to toil ;

Only a god can tinge the cheeks of a mortal with rapture,—

Where no miracle is, there can no blest one be found.
All that is human must first be born, must grow, and must ripen,

And from shapeless to shape, fashioning Time leads it
on ;

But thou seest not the blissful, the beautiful, come into being,

Since the beginning of time, perfect they ever have been.

Every Venus of earth, like the first one of heaven, arises
Only an ill-defin'd form, out of the infinite sea ;

But, like the first Minerva, proceeds, with the ægis provided,

Every lightning-like thought out of the thunderer's brain.

GENIUS.

“Do I believe,” sayest thou, “what the masters of wisdom would teach me,
And what their followers' band boldly and readily swear ?
Cannot I ever attain to true peace, excepting through knowledge,

Or is the system upheld only by fortune and law?
 Must I distrust the gently-warning impulse, the precept
 That thou, Nature, thyself hast in my bosom impress'd, Till the schools have affix'd to the writ eternal their signet,

Till a mere formula's chain binds down the fugitive soul?

Answer me, then! for thou hast down into these deeps e'en descended,—

Out of the mouldering grave thou didst uninjur'd ro-
 turn.

Is't to thee known what within the tomb of obscure works is hidden,

Whether, yon mummies amid, life's consolations can dwell?

Must I travel the darksome road? The thought makes me tremble;

Yet I will travel that road, if 'tis to truth and to right."

Friend, hast thou heard of the golden age? Full many a story

Poets have sung in its praise, simply and touchingly sung—

Of the time when the holy still wander'd over life's pathways,—

When with a maidenly shame ev'ry sensation was veil'd,—

When the mighty law that governs the sun in his orbit,
 And that, conceal'd in the bud, teaches the point how to move,

When necessity's silent law, the steadfast, the changeless,

Stirr'd up billows more free, o'en in the bosom of man,—

When the sense, merrying, and true as the hand of the dial,

Pointed only to truth, only to what was eternal?—

Then no profane one was seen, then no Initiate was met with,

And what as living was felt, was not then sought
 'mongst the dead;

Equally clear to every breast was the precept eternal,

Equally hidden the source whence it to gladden us sprang ;
 But that happy period has vanish'd ! And self-will'd presumption

Nature's godlike repose now has for ever destroy'd.
 Feelings polluted the voice of the deities echo no longer,

In the dishonored breast now is the oracle dumb.
 Save in the silenter self, the listening soul cannot find it,

There does the mystical word watch o'er the meaning
 divine ;

There does the searcher conjure it, descending with bosom unsullied ;

There does the nature long-lost give him back wisdom
 again.

If thou, happy one, never hast lost the angel that guards
 thee,

Forfeited never the kind warnings that instinct holds forth ;

If in thy modest eye the truth is still purely depicted ;
 If in thine innocent breast clearly still echoes its call ;
 If in thy tranquil mind the struggles of doubt still are
 silent,

If they will surely remain silent for ever, as now ;
 If by the conflict of feelings a judge will ne'er be required ;

If in its malice thy heart dims not the reason so clear,
 Oh, then, go thy way in all thy innocence precious !
 Knowledgo can teach thee in naught ; thou canst instruct her in much !

Yonder law, that with brazen staff is directing the struggling,

Naught is to thee. What thou dost, what thou may'st will, is thy law,

And to every race a godlike authority issues.

What thou with holy hand form'st, what thou with holy mouth speak'st,

Will with omnipotent power impel the wondering senses ;
 Thou but observ'st not the God ruling within thine
 own breast,

Not the might of the signet that bows all spirits before
 thee ;

Simple and silent thou go'st through the wide world
 thou hast won.

THE PHILOSOPHICAL EGOTIST.

Hast thou e'er watch'd the infant, who, feeling not yet
 the affection
 Wherewith he's cradled and warm'd, tosses in sleep in the arm,
 Till as a youth he awakes, obeying the impulse of passion,
 And till his conscience's light, dawning, first shows him
 the world?
 Hast thou e'er watch'd the mother, procuring sweet rest for her darling
 At the expense of her own,—tending the babe as it dreams,—
 With her own life supporting and feeding the flame as it trembles,—
 And in her own care itself, meeting that care's own reward?
 And great Nature thou slanderest, who, now child, and now mother,
 Now receives and now gives, but through necessity lasts?
 Self-sufficient, wilt thou from the beauteous link dis-
 enchain thee,
 Which, in an intimate bond, creature to creature
 unites?
 Frail one! wilt thou stand, then, alone, in thee only relying,
 When by the forces' exchange even the Infinite stands?

THE WORDS OF FAITH.

THREE words of mighty moment I'll name, .
 From mouth unto mouth they fly ever,
 Yet the heart can alone their great value proclaim,
 For their source from without rises never.
 No virtue, no merit, man's footsteps e'er guides,
 When in those three words he no longer confides

For LIBERTY, man is created,—is free,
 Though fetters around him be chinking;
 Let the cry of the mob never terrify thee,

Nor the scorn of the doltard unthinking !
 Fear not the bold slave when he breaks from his chains,
 Nor the man who in freedom enduring remains !

And virtue is more than a mere empty sound,
 His practice through life man may make it ;
 And though oft, ere he yet the divine one has found,
 He may stumble, he still may o'ertake it.
 And that which the wise in his wisdom ne'er knew,
 Can be done by the mind that is childlike and true.

And a God, too, there is, with a purpose sublime,
 Though frail may be reason's dominion ;
 High over the regions of space and of time
 The noblest of thoughts waves its pinion ;
 And tho' all things in ceaseless succession may roll,
 Yet constant forever remains a calm soul.

Preserve, then, the three mighty words I have nam'd ;
 From mouth unto mouth spread them ever,
 By thy heart will their infinite worth be proclaim'd,
 Though their source from without rises never.
 Forget not that virtue man's footsteps still guides,
 While in those three words he with firmness confides.

---

THE WORDS OF ERROR.

In the mouth of the good and the noble are found
 Three words of an import momentous ;
 Yet vain is their echo and empty their sound,
 They ne'er can console or content us.
 The fruit that life yields is but lost to mankind,
 As long as he seeks these vain shadows to find.

As long as he trusts in the golden age,
 Where the right and the good conquer ever,—
 The right and the good an eternal strife wage,
 And the foe will succumb to them never,—
 Unless in the air thou caust crush him to death,
 For contact with earth but restores his lost breath.

As long as he trusts that fortune's rays
 With the noble can ever be blended—
 She follows the bad with loving gaze;
 For the good is the earth not intended.
 A stranger he is, and his fate is to roam,
 And seek an enduring, a ne'er changing home.

As long as he trusts that the truth will e'er stand
 Reveal'd to the reason unstable—
 Her veil can be rais'd by no mortal hand;
 But to guess and surmise, 'tis all he
 In a word of mere sound, the enchainment the soul;
 But the free one defies e'en the tempest's control.

From that error, then, Spirit of Light, set thee free,—
 In thy breast be a true faith victorious!
 What no ear could e'er hear, what no eye could e'er see,
 Remains still the truthful, the glorious!
 It is not without, for the fool seeks it there;
Within thee it flourishes, constant and fair.

PROVERBS OF CONFUCIUS.

I.

THREEFOLD is the march of TIME :
 While the future slow advances,
 Like a dart the present glances,
 Silent stands the past sublime.
 No impatience e'er can speed him
 On his course, if he delay ;
 No alarm, no doubts impedes him
 If he keep his onward way ;
 No regrets, no magic numbers
 Wake the trance'd one from his slumbers.

Wouldst then wisely, and with pleasure,
 Pass the days of life's short measure,
 From the slow one counsel take,
 But a tool of him ne'er make ;
 Ne'er as friend the swift one know,
 Nor the constant one as foe !

II.

Threefold is the form of SPACE :
Length, with ever restless motion,
 Seeks eternity's wide ocean ;
Breadth with boundless sway extends ;
Depth to unknown realms descends.

All as types to thee are given :
 Thou must onward strive for heaven,
 Never still or weary be Wouldst thou perfect glory see ;
 Far must thy researches go
 Wouldst thou learn the world to know ;
 Thou must tempt the dark abyss
 Wouldst thou prove what Being is.

Naught but firmness gains the prize,—
 Naught but fulness makes us wise,—
 Buried deep, truth ever lies !

---

 LIGHT AND WARMTH.

THE world, a man of noble mind
 With glad reliance enters ;
 Around him spread, he hopes to find
 What in his bosom centres ;
 And dedicates, with ardor warm,
 To truth's good cause his trusty arm.

That all is mean and small, ere long Experience shows him ever ;
 Himself to guard amid the throng
 Is now his sole endeavor.
 His heart, in calm and proud repose,
 Soon e'en to love begins to close.

Alas ! truth's clear and brilliant rays
 Are not for ever glowing ;
 How blest is he whose heart ne'er pays
 For gift from knowledge flowing !
 So thou the worldling's gaze shouldst bind
 To the enthusiast's steadfast mind !

BREADTH AND DEPTH.

FELL many in the world we find
 To whom nothing seems o'er a mystery;
 And when aught pleases or charms the mind,
 They're able to give all its history.
 To hear them speak, one could ne'er have denied
 That they had won the long-wished-for bride.

In silence, however, they quit the earth,
 Their life leaves behind it no traces:—
 Let him who to something that's great would give birth,—
 To something that time ne'er effaces,—
 With patience collect, and unweariedly,
 In the smallest point, boundless energy.

The stalk the region around it fills
 With branches luxuriant and slender;
 The foliage glitters, and balms distils,
 But fruit it can never engender.
 The kernel alone, in its narrow space,
 The pride of the forest, the tree, can embrace.

 THE GUIDES OF LIFE.*

Two kinds of genie there are, through life's mazy path—ways to guide thee;
 Happy art thou if they stand, join'd into one by thy side!
 One with his gladdening sport beguileth thy tedious journey,—
 Duty, and fate become light, when thou'rt upheld by his arm.
 Laughing and talking the while, he on to the chasm conducts thee,

---

* Originally entitled 'The Beautiful and the Sublime.'

Where, on eternity's sea, trembling mortality stands.
 There does the Other receive thee, with solemn resolve and in silence,
 And with his giant-like arm bears thee across the abyss.
 Ne'er to one only devote thee! Thine honor ne'er think of confiding
 Into the hands of the first, nor to the other thy bliss!

ARCHIMEDES AND THE STUDENT.

To Archimedes once came a youth, who for knowledge
 was thirsting,
 Saying, "Initiate me into the science divine,
 Which for my country has borne forth fruit of such wonderful value,
 And which the walls of the town 'gainst the Samirca* protects."

"Call'st thou the science divine? It is so," the wise man responded;

"But it was so, my son, ere it avail'd for the town.
 Wouldst thou have fruit from her only, e'en mortals
 with that can provide thee;

Wouldst thou the goddess obtain, seek not the woman in Her!"

---

HUMAN KNOWLEDGE.

SINCE thou readest in her what thou thyself hast there written,

And, to gladden the eye, placest her wonders in groups;—

Since o'er her boundless expanses thy cords to extend thou art able,

Thou dost think that thy mind wonderful Nature can grasp.

 against Syracuse.

THE TWO PATHS OF VIRTUE.

Thus the astronomer draws his figures over the
 heavens,
 So that he may with more ease traverse the infinite space,
 Knitting together o'en suns that by Sirius-distance are
 parted,
 Making them join in the swan and in the horns of the bull.
 But because the firmament shows him its glorious surface,
 Can he the spheres mystic dance therefore decipher aright?

---

THE TWO PATHS OF VIRTUE.

Two are the pathways by which mankind can to virtue mount upward;
 If thou shouldst find the one barr'd, open the other will lie.
 'Tis by exertion the Happy obtain her, the Suffering by patience.
 Blest is the man whose kind fate guides him along upon both!

---

HONORS.

As the column of light in the waves of the brook is reflected,
 Bright as from its own glow, flameth the border with
 gold;
 But by the stream are the waves hurried on,—through the glittering pathway
 Each thrusts the other along, swift, as the former, to fly,—
 So is a mortal that perishes lighted by splendor of honors,—
 Not himself, but the place, through which he wan-dereth, shines,

ZENITH AND NADIR.

Wheresoever thou wand'rest in space, thy Zenith and Nadir

Unto the heaven knit thou, unto the axis of earth, Howsoever thou artest, let heav'n be mov'd by thy purpose,

Let the aim of thy deeds traverse the axis of earth!

---

DEPARTURE FROM LIFE.

Two are the roads that before thee lie open from life to conduct thee;

To the Ideal one leads thee, the other to Death.

See that while yet thou art free, on the first thou com-
mencest thy journey,

Ere by the merciless Fates on to the other thou'rt led!

---

THE CHILD IN THE CRADLE.

HAPPY infant! to thee an infinite space is the cradle.

When to man's age thou shalt come, narrow thou'lt think the wide world!

---

THE IMMUTABLE.

TIME incessantly hasteneth on—he seeks for perfection.

If thou art true, thou canst cast fetters eternal on him.

---

THEOPHANIA.

WHEN the happy appear, I forget the Gods in the
heavens;

But before me they stand, when I the suffering see.

THE HIGHEST.

Seek'st thou the Highest, the Greatest? In that the plant can instruct thee;
 What it unwittingly is, be thou of thine own free will!

---

IMMORTALITY.

Dread'st thou the aspect of Death! Thou wishest to live on for ever?
 Live in the Whole, and when long thou shalt have gone, 'twill remain!

---

VOTIVE TABLETS.

That which I learn'd from the Deity,—that which through lifetime hath help'd me, Meekly and gratefully now, here I suspend in his shrine.

---

DIFFERENT DESTINIES.

MILLIONS busily toil, that the human race may continue;
 But by only a few is propagated our kind.
 Thousands of seeds by the autumn are scatter'd, yet fruit is engender'd
 Only by few, for the most back to the element go.
 But if one only can blossom, that one is able to scatter
 Even a bright living world, fill'd with creations eterne.

THE ANIMATING PRINCIPLE.

NOWHERE in the organic or sensitive world ever kindles
 Novelty, save in the flow'r, noblest creation of life.

TWO DESCRIPTIONS OF ACTION.

Do what is good, and Humanity's godlike plant thou wilt nourish;
 Plan what is fair, and thou'lt strow seeds of the god-
 like around,

DIFFERENCE OF STATION.

EVEN the moral world its nobility boasts—vulgar natures
 Reckon by that which they do; noble by that which they are.

WORTH AND THE WORTHY.

If thou anything hast, let me have it,—I'll pay what is proper;
 If thou anything art, let us our spirits exchange.

THE MORAL FORCE.

If thou feel'st not the beautiful, still thou with reason
 canst will it;
 And as a spirit canst do, that which as man thou canst not.

PARTICIPATION.

E'EN by the hand of the wicked can truth be working with vigor;
 But the vessel is fill'd by what is beauteous alone.

TO *

TELL me all that thou knowest, and I will thankfully hear it!
 But wouldst thou give me thyself,—let me, my friend,
 be excus'd!

TO * *

WOULDEST thou teach me the truth? Don't take the trouble! I wish not,
 Through thee, the thing to observe,—but to see thine
 through the thing.

TO * * *

THEE would I chooso as my teacher and friend. Thy living example
 Teaches me,—thy teaching word wakens my heart unto life.

VOTIVE TABLETS.

THE PRESENT GENERATION.

Was it always as now? This race I truly can't fathom.
Nothing is young but old age; youth, alas! only is old.

TO THE MUSE.

What I had been without thee, I know not—yet, to my sorrow,
See I what, without thee, hundreds and thousands now
are.

THE LEARNED WORKMAN.

N<sup>o</sup> er does he taste the fruit of the tree that he rais'<sup>d</sup>
with such trouble;
Nothing but taste e'er enjoys that which by learning is rear'<sup>d</sup>.

THE DUTY OF ALL.

Even strive for the whole; and if no whole thou canst
make thee,
Join, then, thyself to some whole, as a subservient limb!

A PROBLEM.

Let none resemble another; let each resemble the highest!
How can that happen? let each be all complete in itself.

THE PECULIAR IDEAL.

What thou thinkest, belongs to all; what thou feel'st,
is thine only.
Wouldst thou make him thine own, feel thou the God whom thou think'st!

TO MYSTICS.

That is the only true secret, which in the presence of all men
Lies, and surrounds thee for aye, but which is witness'<sup>d</sup> by none.

THE KEY.

WOULDST thou know thyself, observe the actions of others.
Wouldst thou other men know, look thou within thine own heart.

THE OBSERVER.

STERN as my conscience, thou seest the points wherein I'm deficient ;
Therefore I've always lov'd thee, as my own conscience
I've lov'd.

WISDOM AND PRUDENCE.

WOULDST thou, my friend, mount up to the highest summit of wisdom,
-Be not deterr'd by the fear, prudence thy course may
deride :
That short-sighted one sees but the bank that from thee
is flying,
Not the one which ere long thou wilt attain with bold
flight

THE AGREEMENT.

BOTH of us seek for truth—in the world without thou
dost seek it,
I in the bosom within ; both of us therefore succeed.
If the eye be healthy, it sees from without the Creator ;
And if the heart, then within doubtless it mirrors the world.

POLITICAL PRECEPT.

ALL that thou doest is right ; but, friend, don't carry this precept
On too far,—be content, all that is right to effect.
It is enough to true zeal, if what is existing be perfect ;
False zeal always would find finish'd perfection at once.

VOIIVE TABLETS.
MAJESTAS POPULI.

MAJESTY of the nature of man! In crowds shall I seek
the
'Tis with only a few that thou hast made thine abode.
Only a few ever count; the rest are but blanks of no value,
And the prizes are hid 'neath the vain stir that they make.

TO A WORLD-REFORMER.

"I HAVE sacrific'd all," thou sayest, "that Man I might succor;
Vain the attempt; my reward was persecution and hate."
Shall I tell thee, my friend, how I to humor him manage?
Trust the proverb! I no'er have been deceiv'd by it yet.

Thou canst not sufficiently prize Humanity's value;
Let it be coin'd in deed as it exists in thy breast.
E'en to the man whom thou chancest to meet in life's narrow pathway,
If he should ask it of thee, hold forth a succoring
hand.
But for rain and for dew, for the general welfare of
mortals,
Leave thou Heaven to care, friend, as before, so e'en
now.

MY ANTIPATHY.

I have a heartfelt aversion for crime,—a two-fold aver-
sion,
Since 'tis the reason why man prates about virtue so much.
"What! thou hatest, then, virtue?"—I would that by all it were practis'd,
So that, God willing, no man ever need speak of it
more.

VOTIVE TABLETS.

TO ASTRONOMERS.

PRATE not to me so much of suns and of nebulous bodies;
Think ye nature but great, in that she gives thee to count?
Though your object may be the sublimest that space
holds within it,
Yet, my good friends, the sublime dwells not in regions of space.

ASTRONOMICAL WRITINGS.

OH, how infinite, how unspeakably great, are the heavens!
Yet by frivolity's hand downwards the heavens are pull'd!

THE BEST STATE.

"How can I know the best state?" In the way that thou know'st the best woman;
Namely, my friend, that the world ever is silent of both.

MY FAITH.

WHICH religion do I acknowledge? None that thou namest.
"None that I name? And why so?"—Why, for reli-gion's own sake!

INSIDE AND OUTSIDE.

"God alone sees the heart"—and therefore, since He alone sees it,
Be it our care that we, too, something that's worthy may see.

FRIEND AND FOE.

DEARLY I love a friend; yet a foe I may turn to my profit;
Friends show me that which I can: foes teach me that which I should.

LIGHT AND COLOR.

THOU that art ever the same, with the Changeless One take up thy dwelling!
Color, thou changeable one, kindly descend upon man!

VOTIVE TABLETS

BEAUTIFUL INDIVIDUALITY.

THOU in truth shouldst be one, yet not with the whole shouldst thou be so.
 'Tis through the reason thou'rt one,—art so with it through the heart.
 Voice of the whole is thy reason, but thou thine own heart must be ever ;
 If in thy heart reason dwells, evermore happy art thou.

VANITY.

MANY are good and wise ; yet all for one only reckon,
 For 'tis conception, alas, rules them, and not a fond heart.
 Sad is the sway of conception,—from thousandfold varying figures,
 Needy and empty but one it is e'er able to bring.
 But where creative beauty is ruling, there life and enjoyment
 Dwell ; to the ne'er-changing One, thousands of new forms she gives.

THE THREE AGES OF NATURE.

LIFE she receiv'd from fable ; the schools deprived her of being,
 Life creative again she has from reason receiv'd.

GENIUS.

UNDERSTANDING, indeed, can repeat what already existed,—
 That which Nature has built after her she, too, can build.
 Over Nature can Reason build, but in vacancy only :
 But thou Genius, alone, Nature in Nature canst
 form.

THE IMITATOR.

GOOD from the good,—to the reason this is not hard of conception ;
 But the genius has pow'r good from the bad to evoke.
 'Tis the conceiv'd alone, that thou, Imitator, canst practise ;
 Food the conceiv'd never is, save to the mind that conceives.

GENIALITY.

How does the genius make itself known? In the way that in nature
 Shows the Creator Himself,—e'en in the infinite
 whole.
 Clear is the æther, and yet of depth that ne'er can be fathom'd ;
 Seen by the eye, it remains evermore clos'd to the sense.

THE INQUIRERS.

MEN now seek to explore each thing from within and without too ;
 How canst thou make thy escape, Truth, from their eager pursuit ?
 That they may catch thee, with nets and poles extended
 they seek thee ;
 But with a spirit-like tread, glidest thou out of the throng.

THE DIFFICULT UNION.

Why are taste and genius so seldom met with united ?
 Taste of strength is afraid,—genius despises the rein.

CORRECTNESS.

FREE from blemish to be, is the lowest of steps, and the highest ;
 Weakness and greatness alone ever arrive at this point.

THE LAW OF NATURE.

It has ever been so, my friend, and will ever remain so :
 Weakness has rules for itself,—vigor is crown'd with success.

CHOICE.

If thou canst not give pleasure to all by thy deeds and thy knowledge,
 Give it then, unto the few ; many to please is but vain.

SCIENCE OF MUSIC.

LET the creative art breathe life, and the bard furnish
 spirit ;
 But the soul is expressed by Polyhymnia alone.

VOTIVE TABLETS.

LANGUAGE.

Why can the living spirit be never seen by the spirit?
 Soon as the soul 'gins to speak, then can the soul speak no more!

TO THE POET.

Let thy speech be to thee what the body is to the loving;
 Beings it only can part,—beings it only can join.

THE MASTER.

Other masters one always can tell by the words that they utter;
 'That which he wisely omits, shows me the master of style.

THE GIRDLE.

APHRODITE preserves her beauty conceal'd by her girdle;
 'That which lends her her charms, is what she covers—her shame.

THE DILETTANTE.

MENELY because thou hast made a good verse in a language poetic,
 One which composes for thee, thou art a poet, forsooth!

THE BABBLER OF ART.

Dost thou desire the good in Art? Of the good art thou worthy Waich by a no'er ceasing war 'gainst thee thyself is produced?

THE PHILOSOPHERS.

Which among the philosophies will be enduring? I know not.
 But that philosophy's self ever may last is my hope.

THE FAVOR OF THE MUSES.

FAME with the vulgar expires; but, Muse immortal;
 thou bearest
 'Those whom thou lov'st, who love thee, into Mnemmosyne's arms.

HOMER'S HEAD AS A SEAL.

TRETRY old Homer! to thee I confide the secret so tender;
 For the raptures of love none but the bard should e'er know,

THE BEST STATE-CONSTITUTION.

I CAN recognize only as such, the one that enables Each to think what is right,--but that he thinks so, cares not.

---

TO LAWGIVERS.

EVER take it for granted, that man collectively wishes
'That which is right; but take care, never to think so of one!

---

THE HONORABLE.

EVER honor the whole : individuals only I honor;
In individuals I always discover the whole.

---

FALSE IMPULSE TO STUDY.

OH, how many new foes against truth! My very son bleedeth
When I behold the owl-race now bursting forth to the light.

---

THE FOUNTAIN OF SECOND YOUTH.

TRUST me, 'tis not a mere tale,--the fountain of youth really runneth, Runneth for ever. Thou ask'st, Where? In the poet's sweet art!

---

THE CIRCLE OF NATURE.

ALL, thou gentle one, lies embrac'd in thy kingdom; the greybeard
Back to the days of his youth, childish and childlike, returns.

THE GENIUS WITH THE INVERTED TORCH.

LOVELY he looks, 'tis true, with the light of his torch
now extinguished ;
But remember that death is not æsthetic, my friends !

---

THE VIRTUE OF WOMAN.

MAN of virtue has need ; into life with boldness he plunges,
Ent'ring with fortune more sure into the hazardous strife ;
But to woman one virtue suffices ; it ever is shining Lovingly forth to the heart : so let it shine to the eye !

---

THE FAIREST APPARITION.

If thou never hast gazed upon beauty in moments of sorrow,
Thou canst with truth never boast that thou true beauty hast seen.
If thou never hast gazed upon gladness in beauteous
features,
Thou canst with truth never boast that thou true
gladness hast seen.

THE FORUM OF WOMAN.

WOMAN, never judge man by his individual actions ;
But upon man, as a whole, pass thy decisive decree.

---

FEMALE JUDGMENT.

MAN frames his judgment on reason ; but woman on love
founds her verdict ;
If her judgment loves not, woman already has judg'd.

THE IDEAL OF WOMAN.

WOMAN in everything yields to man ; but in that which is highest,
 Even the manliest man yields to the woman most weak.
 But that highest,—what is it? The gentle radiance of triumph
 As in thy brow upon me, beauteous Amanda, it beams.
 When o'er the bright shining disk the clouds of affliction are fleeting,
 Fairer the image appears, seen through the vapor of
 gold.
 Man may think himself free ! thou art so,—for thou never knowest
 What is the meaning of choice,—know'st not necessity's name.
 That which thou givest, thou always giv'st wholly ; but one art thou ever,
 Even thy tenderest sound is thine harmonious self.
 Youth everlasting dwells here, with fullness that never is exhausted,
 And with the flower at once pluck'st thou the ripe
 golden fruit.

---

EXPECTATION AND FULLFILLMENT.

Into life's ocean the youth with a thousand masts daringly launches ;
 Afloat, in a boat sav'd from wreck, enters the greybeard
 the port.

---

THE COMMON FATE.

SEE how we hate, how we quarrel, how thought and how feeling divide us !
 But thy locks, friend, like mine meanwhile are bleaching fast.

HUMAN ACTION.

When the pathway begins, eternity seems to lie open
 Yet at the narrowest point even the wisest man stops.

---

THE FATHER.

Work as much as thou wilt, alone thou'lt be standing for ever,
 'Till by nature thou'rt joined forcibly on to the Whole.

---

LOVE AND DESIRE.

Rightly said, Schlosser ! Man loves what he has ; what he has not, desireth ;
 None but the wealthy minds love ; poor minds desire alone.

GOODNESS AND GREATNESS.

Only two virtues exist. Oh, would they were ever united !
 Ever the good with the great, over the great with the good !

---

THE IMPULSES.

FEAR with his iron staff may urge the slave onward forever ;
 Rapture, do thou lead me on ever in roseate chains !

---

NATURALISTS AND TRANSCENDENTAL PHILOSOPHERS.

ENMITY be between ye ! Your union too soon is cemented ;
 Ye will but learn to know truth, when ye divide
 in the search.

GERMAN GENIUS.

STRIVE, O German, for Roman-like strength and for Grecian-like beauty !
Thou art successful in both ; ne'er has the Gaul had success.

---

TRIFLES

THE EPIC HEXAMETER.

GIDDILY onward it bears thee with resistless impetuous billows ;
Naught but the ocean and air seest thou before or behind.

THE DISTICH.

IN the Hexameter rises the fountain's watery column,
In the Pentameter sweet falling in melody down.

THE EIGHT-LINE STANZA.

STANZA, by love thou'rt created,—by love all-tender and yearning ;
Thrice dost thou bashfully fly, thrice dost with longing return.

THE OBELISK.

ON a pedestal lofty the sculptor in triumph has rais'd
me.
“Stand thou,” spake he,—and I stand proudly and joyfully here.

THE TRIUMPHAL ARCH.

“FEAR not,” the builder exclaim'd, “the rainbow that stands in the heavens ;
I will extend thee like it, into infinity far !”

GERMANY AND HER PRINCES.

THE BEAUTIFUL BRIDGE.

Under me, over me, hasten the waters, the chariots, my builder
 Kindly has suffer'd e'en me, over myself, too, to go!

THE GATE.

Let the gate open stand, to allure the savage to precepts;
 Let it the citizen lead into free nature with joy.

ST. PETER'S.

If thou seekest to find Immensity here, thou'rt mistaken;
 For my greatness is meant greater to make thee thyself!

GERMANY AND HER PRINCES.

Thou hast produced mighty monarchs, of whom thou art not unworthy,
 For the obedient alone make him who governs them great.
 But, O Germany, try if thou for thy rulers canst make it Harder as kings to be great,—easier, though, to bement

TO PROSELYTISERS.

"Give me only a fragment of earth beyond the earth's limits,"—
 So the godlike man said,—"and I will move it with ease."
 Only give me permission to leave myself for one moment,
 And without any delay I will engage to be years.

THE CONNECTING MEDIUM.

How does nature proceed to unite the high and the lowly
 In mankind? She commands vacuity 'tween them to stand!

THE MOMENT.

DOUBTLESS an epoch important has with the century risen ;
 - But the moment, so great, finds but a race of small worth.

---

GERMAN COMEDY.

FOOLS we may have in plenty, and simpletons, too,
 by the dozen ;
 But for comedy these never make use of themselves.

---

BOOKSELLER'S ANNOUNCEMENT.

NAUGHT is for man so important as rightly to know
 his own purpose ;
 For but twelve groschen, hard cash, 'tis to be bought at my shop !

---

DANGEROUS CONSEQUENCES.

DEEPER and bolder truths be careful, my friends, of avowing ;
 For as soon as ye do, all the world on ye will fall.

---

GREEKISM.

SCARCE has the fever so chilly of galomania departed,
 When a more burning attack in Greeomania breaks out.
 Greekism,—what did it mean ?—"Twas harmony, reason and clearness !
 Patience, good gentlemen, pray, ere ye of Greekism speak !
 'Tis for an excellent cause ye are fighting, and all that I ask for
 Is that with reason it ne'er may be a laughing-stock made.

THE SUNDAY CHILDREN.

YEARS has the master been lab'ring, but always without satisfaction ;

To an ingenious rascal, 'twould be in vision conferred,
What they yesterday learnt, to-day they fain would be teaching :
Small compassion, alas, in by those gentlemen shown!

THE PHILOSOPHERS.

PUPIL.

I am rejoic'd, worthy sirs, to find you in pleno assembled :
For I have come down below, seeking the one needful thing.

ARISTOTLE.

Quick to the point, my good friend ! For the Jena
Gazette comes to hand here.
Even in hell,—so we know all that is passing above.

PUPIL.

So much the better ! So give me (I will not depart
hence without it,
Some good principle now,—one that will always avail !

FIRST PHILOSOPHER.

Cogito, ergo sum. I have thought, and therefore
I have existence !
If the first be but true, then is the second one sure.

PUPIL.

As I think, I exist. 'Tis good ! But who always is Thinking ?
Oft I've existed 'e'en when I have been thinking of naught.

SECOND PHILOSOPHER.

Since there are things that exist, a thing of all things
 There must needs be;
 In the thing of all things dabble we, just as we are.

THIRD PHILOSOPHER.

Just the reverse, say I. Besides myself there is nothing;
 Ev'rything else that there is, is but a bubble to me.

FOURTH PHILOSOPHER.

Two kinds of things I allow to exist,—the world and the spirit;
 Naught of others I know; even these signify one.

FIFTH PHILOSOPHER.

I know naught of the thing, and know still less of the spirit;
 Both but appear unto me; yet no appearance they are.

SIXTH PHILOSOPHER.

I am I, and settle myself,—and if I then settle Nothing to be, well and good—there's a nonentity form'd.

SEVENTH PHILOSOPHER.

There is conception at least! A thing conceiv'd there is, therefore;
 And a conceiver as well,—which, with conception,
 make three.

PUPIL.

All this nonsense, good sirs, won't answer my purpose
 a tittle;
 I a real principle need,—one by which something is fix'd.

THE PHILOSOPHERS.

EIGHTH PHILOSOPHER.

Nothing is now to be found in the theoretical province;
 Practical principles hold, such as: thou exist, for thou shouldst.

PUPIL.

If I but thought so! When people know no more sensible answer,
 Into the conscience at once plung, they with desperate haste,

DAVID HUME.

Don't converse with those fellows! That Kant has turn'd them all crazy;
 Speak to me, for in hell I am the same that I was.

LAW POINT.

I have made use of my nose for years together to smell
 with;
 Have I a right to my nose that can be legally prov'd?

PUFFENDORF.

Truly a delicate point! Yet the first possession appeareth
 In thy favor to tell; therefore make use of it still!

SCRUPLE OF CONSCIENCE.

Willingly servo I my friends; but, alas, I do it with pleasure;
 Therefore I often am vex'd, that no true virtue I have.

DECISION.

As there is no other means, thou hadst better begin to despise them;
 And with aversion, then, do that which thy duty commands.

G. G.

EACH one, when seen by himself, is passably wise and judicious ;
 When they in corpore are, naught but a blockhead is seen.

---

THE HOMERIDES.

WHO is the bard of the Iliad among you ? For since he likes puddings,
 Heyne begs he'll accept these that from Gottingen come.
 "Givo them to me ! The kings' quarrel I sang !"—
 "I the fight near the vessels !"—
 "Hand me the puddings ! I sang what upon Ida took place !"
 Gently ! Don't tear me to pieces ! The puddings will not be sufficient ;
 He by whom they are sent destin'd them only for one.

---

THE MORAL POET.

MAN is in truth a poor creature,—I know it,—and fain
 would forget it ;
 Therefore (how sorry I am !) came I, alas, unto to thee !

---

THE DANAIDES.

INTO the sieve we've been pouring for years,—o'er the stone we've been brooding ;
 But the stone never warms,—nor does the sieve ever fill.

THE SUBLIME SUBJECT.

'Tis thy Muse's delight to sing God's pity to mortals;
But, that they pitiful are,—is it a matter for song?

---

THE ARTIFICE.

Wouldst thou give pleasure at once to the children of earth and the righteous?
Draw the image of lust—adding the devil as well!

---

JEREMIADS.

All, both in 'prose and in verse, in Germany fast is
decaying;
Far behind us, alas, lieth the golden age now!
For by philosophers spoil'd is our language—our logic
by poets,
And no more common sênsè governs our passage
through life.
From the æsthetic, to which she belongs, now virtue is driven,
And into politics forced, where she's a troublesome
guest.
Where are we hastening now? If natural, dull we are voted,
And if we put on constraint, then the world calls us absurd.
Où, then joyous artlessness 'mongst the poor maidens
of Leipzig,
Witty simplicity come,—come, then, to glad us
again!
Comedy, oh repeat thy weekly visits so precious,
Sigismund, lover so sweet,—Mascarill, valet jocosé!
Tragedy, full of salt and pungency epigrammatic,—
And thou, minuet-step of our old buskin preserv'd!
Philosophic romance, thou mannikin waiting with
patience,
When, 'gainst the pruner's attack, nature defendeth herself!

Ancient prose, oh return,—so richly and boldly expressing
 All that thou think'st and best thought,—and what the reader thinks too!
 All, both in prose and in verse, in Germany fast is
 decaying;
 Far behind us, alas, lieth the golden age now!

---

KNOWLEDGE.

KNOWLEDGE to one is a goddess both heav'nly and high,—to another
 Only an excellent cow, yielding the butter he wants.

---

KANT AND HIS COMMENTATORS.

SEE how a single rich man gives a living to numbers of beggars!
 'Tis when sovereigns build, carters are kept in employ.

---

SHAKESPEARE'S GHOST.

A PARODY.

I, too, at length discern'd great Hercules' energy
 mighty,—
 Saw his shade. He himself was not, alas, to be seen.
 Round him were heard, like the screaming of birds, the screams of tragedians,
 And, with the baying of dogs, bark'd dramaturgists
 around.
 There stood the giant in all his terrors; his bow was extended,
 And the bolt, fix'd on the string, steadily aim'd at the heart.
 "What still hardier action, Unhappy One, dost thou now venture,

Thus to descend to the grave of the departed souls here?"—

"'Tis to see Tiresias I come, to ask of the prophet Where I the huskin of old, that now has vanish'd, may find?"

"If they believe not in Nature, nor in the old Grecian but vainly Wilt thou convey up from hence that dramaticky to them."

"Oh, as for Nature, once more to tread our stage she has ventur'd, Ay, and stark-maked besides, so that each rib we can count."

"What? Is the huskin of old to be seen in truth on your stage, then, Which even I came to fetch, out of mid-Tartarus' gloom?"

"There is now no more of that tragic bustle, for scarcely Once in a year on the boards moves thy great soul, harness clad."

"Doubtless 'tis well! Philosophy now has refin'd your sensations,

And from the humor so bright fly the affections so black."

"Ay, there is nothing that beats a jest that is stolid and barren,

But then e'en sorrow can please, if 'tis sufficiently moist."

"But do ye also exhibit the graceful dance of Thalia, Join'd to the solemn step with which Melpomene moves?"

"Neither! For naught we love but what is Christian and moral;

And what is popular too, homely, domestic, and plain."

"What? Does no Caesar, does no Achilles, appear on your stage now,

Not an Andromacho e'en, not an Orestes, my friend?"

"No! There is naught to be seen there but parsons, and syndics of commerce, Secretaries perchance, ensigns and majors of horse."

"But my good friend, pray tell me, what can such people e'er meet with

That can be truly call'd great?—what that is great can they do?"—

- "What? Why they form eabals, they lend upon mortgage, they pocket Silver spoons, and fear not e'en in the stocks to be placed."
- "Whence do ye, then, derive the destiny, great and gigantic,
Which raises man up on high, e'en when it grinds him to dust?"
- "All mere nonsense! Ourselves, our worthy acquaintances also,
And our sorrows and wants, seek we and find we, too, here."
- "But all this ye possess at home both apter and better,— Wherefore, then, fly from yourselves, if 'tis yourselves that ye seek?"
- "Be not offended, great hero, for that is a different question; Ever is destiny blind,—ever is righteous tho bard."
- "Then one meets on your stage your own contemptible nature, Whilo 'tis in vain one seeks there naturo enduring and great?"
- "There tho poet is host and act the fifth is the reek'ning;
And, when crime becomes siek, virtue sits down to the feast!"

THE RIVERS.

RHINE.

TRUE, as becometh a Switzer, I watch over Germany's borders;
But the light-footed Gaul jumps o'er the suffering stream.

RHINE AND MOSELLE.

Many a year have I elasp'd in my arms the Lorrainian maiden;
But our union as yet ne'er has been blest with a son.

THE RIVERS.

DANUBE IN ———

Round me are dwelling the falcon-ey'd race, the Phœacian
 people;
 Sunday with them never ends; ceaselessly moves round the spit.

MARK.

Ay, it is true that my castles are crumbling; yet, to my comfort,
 Have I for centuries past seen my old race still endure.

SAALIC.

Short is my course, during which I salute many princes and nations;
 Yet the princes are good—ay! and the nations are free.

ELM.

Poor are my banks, it is true; but yet my soft-flowing waters
 Many immortal lays hear, borne by the current along.

PLEISSE.

Flat is my shore and shallow my current; alas, all my writers,
 Both in prose and in verse, drink far too deep of its stream!

ELBE.

All ye others speak only a jargon; 'mongst Germany's rivers
 None speak German but me; I but in Misnia alone.

SPREE.

Ramler once gave me language,—my Caesar a subject;
 and therefore
 I had my mouth then stuff'd full; but I've been silent since that.

WESER.

Nothing, alas, can be said about me; I really can't furnish
Matter enough to the Muse e'en for an epigram small.

MINERAL WATERS AT —.

Singular country! what excellent taste in its fountains and rivers!
In its people alone none have I ever yet found!

PEGLITZ.

I for a long time have been a hypochondriacal subject;
I but flow on because it has my habit been long.

THE — RIVERS.

We would gladly remain in the lands that own — as their masters;
Soft their yoke ever is, and all their burdens are light.

SALZACH.

I, to salt the archbishopric, come from Juvavias mountains;
Then to Bavaria turn, where they have great need of salt!

THE ANONYMOUS RIVER.

Lenten food for the pious bishop's table to furnish,
By my Creator I'm pour'd over the famishing land.

LES FLEUVES INDISCRETS.

Pray be silent, ye rivers! One see: ye have no more discretion
Than, in a caso we could name, Diderot's favorites had.

THE METAPHYSICIAN.

"How far beneath me seems the curdled ball!
 The pigmy race below I scarce can see;
 How does my art, the noblest art of all,
 Bear me close up to heaven's bright canopy!"
 So cries the slater from his tower's high top,
 And so the little world-be-mighty man,
 Hans Metaphysicus, from out his critic-shop
 Explains, thou little world-be-mighty man!
 The tower from which thy looks the world survey
 Whereof,—whereon is it erected, pray?
 How didst thou mount it? Of what use to thee
 Its naked heights, save o'er the vale to see?

THE PHILOSOPHERS.

For principle by which each thing
 Tow'rd strength and shape first tended—
 The pulley whereon Zeus the ring
 Of earth, that loosely us'd to swing,
 With cautiousness suspended,—
 He is a clever man, I vow,
 Who its real name can tell me now,
 Unless to help him I consent—
 'Tis, ten and twelve are different!

Fire burns, 'tis chilly when it snows,
 Man always is two-footed,—
 The sun across the heavens goes,—
 'Tis he who naught of logic knows
 Finds to his reason suited,
 Yet he who metaphysics learns,
 Knows that naught freezes when it burns—
 Knows that what's wet is never dry,—
 And that what's bright attracts the eye.

Old Homer sings his noble lays,
 The hero goes through dangers ;
 The brave man duty's call obeys,
 And did so, even in the days
 When sages yet were strangers—
 But heart and genius now have taught
 What Locke and what Descartes ne'er thought ;
 By them immediately is shown
 That which is possible alone.

In life, avails the right of force.
 The bold the timid worries ;
 Who rules not, is a slave of course,
 Without design each thing across
 Earth's stage for ever hurries.
 Yet what would happen if the plan
 Which guides the world now first began,
 Within the moral system lies
 Disclos'd with clearness to our eyes.

" When man would seek his destiny,
 Man's help must then be given ;
 Save for the whole, ne'er labors be,—
 Of many drops is form'd the sea,—
 By water mills are driven ;
 Therefore the wolf's wild species flies,—
 Knit are the state's enduring ties."
 Thus Puffendorf and Feder, each
 Is ex cathedra wont to teach.

Yet if what such professors say,
 Each brain to enter durst not,
 Nature exerts her mother-sway,
 Provides that ne'er the chain gives way,
 And that the ripe fruits burst not.
 Meanwhile, until earth's structure vast Philosophy can bind at last,
 'Tis she that bids its pinion move,
 By means of hunger and of love !

PEGASUS IN HARNESS.

Once to a horse-fair,—it may perhaps have been
Where other things are bought and sold,—I mean
At the Haymarket,—there the muses' horse
A hungry poet brought—to sell, of course.

The hippogriff neigh'd shrilly, loudly,
And rear'd upon its hind-legs proudly;
In utter wonderment each stood and cried:
"The noble regal beast! But, woe betide!
Two hideous wings in slender form deface,
The finest team he else would not disgrace."
"The breed," said they, "is doubtless rare,
But who would travel through the air?"—
Not one of them would risk his gold.
At length a farmer grew more bold:
"As for his wings, I of no use should find them,
But then how easy 'tis to clip or bind them!
The horse for drawing may be useful found,—
So, friend, I don't mind giving twenty pound!"
The other, glad to sell his merchandise,
Cried "Done!"—And Hans rode off upon his prize.

The noble creature was, ere long, put-to,
But scarcely felt the unaccustom'd load,
Than, panting to soar upward, off he flew,
And, fill'd with honest anger, overthrew
The cart where an abyss just met the road.
"Ho! ho!" thought Hans: "No cart to this mad beast
I'll trust. Experience makes one wise at least.
To drive the coach to-morrow now my course is,
And he as leader in the team shall go.
The lively fellow'll save me full two horses;
As years pass on, he'll doubtless tamer grow."

All went on well at first. The nimble steed
His partners rous'd,—like lightning was their speed.
What happen'd next? Tow'rd heaven was turn'd his eye,—
Unus'd across the solid ground to fly,
He quitted soon the safe and beaten course,
And true to nature's strong resistless force,

Ran over bog and moor, o'er hedge, and pasture till'd ;
 An equal madness soon the other horses fill'd,—
 No reins could hold them in, no help was near,
 'Till—only picture the poor travelers' fear!—
 The coach, well shaken, and completely wreck'd,
 Upon a hill's steep top at length was check'd.

"If this is always sure to be the case,"
 Hans cried, and cut a very sorry face,
 "He'll never do to draw a coach or wagon ;
 Let's see if we can't tame the fiery dragon
 By means of heavy work and little food."
 And so the plan was tried.—But what ensued ?
 The handsome beast, before three days had past,
 Wasted to nothing. "Stay ! I see at last !"
 Cried Hans. "Be quick, you fellows ! yoke him now
 With my most sturdy ox before the plow."

No sooner said than done. In union queer
 Together yok'd were soon wing'd horse and steer.
 The griffin pranced with rage, and his remaining might Exerted to resume his old-accustom'd flight.
 'Twas all in vain—his partner stepp'd with circumspec-
 tion,
 And Phoebus' haughty steed must follow his direction ;
 Until at last, by long resistance spent,
 When strength his limbs no longer was controlling
 The noble creature, with affliction bent,
 Fell to the ground, and in the dust lay rolling.
 "Accursed beast !" at length with fury mad
 Hans shouted, while he soundly plied the lash, —
 "Even for plowing, then, thou art too bad !—
 That fellow was a rogue to sell such trash !"

Ere yet his heavy blows had ceas'd to fly,
 A brisk and merry youth by chance came by.
 A lute was tinkling in his hand,
 And through his light and flowing hair
 Was twin'd with grace a golden band.
 "Whither, my friend, with that strange pair?"

From far he to the peasant cried,
 "A bird and ox to one rope tied—
 Was such a team e'er heard of, pray?
 Thy horse's worth I'd fain essay;
 Just for one moment lend him me,—
 Observe, and thou shalt wonders see!"

The hippogriff was loosen'd from the plow,
 Upon his back the smiling youth leap'd now;
 No sooner did the creature understand
 That he was guided by a master-hand,
 Than 'gainst his bit he champ'd, and upward soar'd
 While lightning from his flaming eyes outpour'd.
 No longer the same being, royally
 A spirit, ay, a god, ascended he,
 Spread in a moment to the stormy wind
 His noble wings, and left the earth behind,
 And, ere the eye could follow him,
 Had vanish'd in the heavens dim.

THE PUPPET-SHOW OF LIFE.

Thou'rt welcome in my box to peep!
 Life's puppet-show, the world in little,
 Thou'lt see depicted to a tittle,—
 But pray at some small distance keep!
 'Tis by the torch of love alone,
 By Cupid's taper, it is shown

See, not a moment void the stage is!
 The child in arms at first they bring,—
 The boy then skips,—the youth now storms and rages,—
 The man contends, and ventures everything!

Each one attempts success to find,
 Yet narrow is the race-course over;
 The chariot rolls, the axles quiver,
 The hero presses on, the coward stays behind,
 The proud man falls with mirth-inspiring fall,
 The wise man overtakes them all!

Thou seest fair woman at the barrier stand,
 With beauteous hands, with smiling eyes,
 To glad the victor with his prize.

TO A YOUNG FRIEND,

ON HIS DEVOTING HIMSELF TO PHILOSOPHY.

MANY an arduous trial the Grecian youth had to suffer
 Ere th' Eleusinian house welcom'd him under its roof.
 Art thou ripe and prepar'd, the holy temple to enter,
 Where her mysterious lore Pallas Athene preserves?
 Know'st thou what there 'tis awaits thee? How dear thy purchase may cost thee?
 That with a gift that is sure, one that is not, thou must buy?
 Feelest thou strength enough to fight that sternest of conflicts
 Where the reason and heart, mind and tho't thought disagree?
 Courage enough with doubt's undying hydra to wrestle,
 And to contend like a man 'gainst the dread foe in thyself?
 With an eye that is sound, with a heart of innocence
 sacred,
 Then to unmask the deceit veil'd in the garments of
 truth?
 Fly, if thou canst not depend on the guide within thine own bosom,
 Fly from the treacherous brink, ere thou art chok'd
 in the gulf!
 Many have sought for light, and only plung'd into darkness;
 'Tis but in twilight alone infancy wanders secure!

 THE POETRY OF LIFE.

"OH, who would feed on dreams for ever fleeing,
 That with a borrow'd lustre clothe the being,
 Deceiving hope with a possession vain?
 The truth uncover'd I would see remain,
 Though with my dream should vanish all my heaven,
 Though the free spirit to whose wings 'twas given
 To scale the Possible's unbounded realm,

The present with strong chains should overwhelm.
 "Twould teach itself then to obey ;

'Twould find, then, duty's sacred call,
 And that of need, most stern of all,
 The more subservient to its sway.

He who would 'scape the gentle rule of truth,
 Can he endure necessity forsooth ?"

My rigid friend, thou dost thou cry and see
 From 'neath experience's safe portal,
 Looking with scorn on what but seems to be.

Soon flies the loving band immortal,
 Stricken with terror by thy solemn word ;—
 The dancing hours stand still, no muse's strains are heard,—

The sister-deities, with beauteous hair,
 Take up their garlands now in mute despair,—
 Apollo breaks his lyre of gold.

His wondrous staff breaks Hermes too,
 While from life's features wan and cold
 Falls the dream's veil of rosy hue.

The world a tomb is,—Venus' son
 The magic band tears from his eyes,—
 His mother in the godlike one

Sees now the mortal,—trembles, flies.
 Ago steals on beauty's youthful form,
 Upon thy lips no more is warm
 The kiss of love,—and ere thy joy has pass'd,
 Into a lifeless stone thou'rt changed at last.

TO GOETHE.

ON HIS PRODUCING VOLTAIRE'S "MAHOMET" ON THE STAGE.

Thou, by whom, freed from rules constrain'd and wrong,

On truth and nature once again we're placed,—
 Who, in the cradle o'en a hero strong,
 Stiflest the serpents round our genius lae'd,—

Thou whom the godlike science has so long
 With her unsullied sacred fillet grac'd,—
 Dost thou on ruin'd altars sacrifice
 To that false muse whom we no longer prize ?

This theatre belongs to native art,
 No foreign idols worship'd here are seen ;
 A laurel we can show, with joyous heart,
 That on the German Pindus has grown green :
 The sciences' most holy, hidden part
 The German genius dares to enter e'en,
 And, following the Briton and the Greek,
 A nobler glory now attempts to seek.

For yonder, where slaves kneel, and despots hold
 The reins,—where spurious greatness lifts its head,
 Art has no power the noble there to mould,
 'Tis by no Lois that its seed is spread ;
 From its own fullness it must needs unfold,
 By earthly majesty 'tis never fed ;
 'Tis with truth only it can e'er unite,
 Its glow free spirits only e'er can light.

'Tis not to bind us in a worn-out chain
 Thou dost this play of clden time recal,—
 'Tis not to seek to lead us back again
 To days when thoughtless childhood rul'd o'er all.
 It were, in truth, an idle risk and vain
 Into the moving wheel of time to fall ;
 The winged hours for ever bear it on,
 The new arrives, and, lo ! the old has gone.

The narrow theatre is now more wide,
 Into its space a universe now steals ;
 In pompons words no longer is our pride,
 Nature we love when she her form reveals ;
 Fashion's falso rules no more are deified ;
 And as a man the hero acts and feels.
 'Tis passion makes the notes of freedom sound,
 And 'tis in truth the beautiful is found.

Weak is the frame of Thespis' chariot fair,
 Resembling much the bark of Acheron,
 That carries naught but shades and forms of air ;
 And if rude life should venture to press on,
 The fragile bark its weight no more can bear,
 For fleeting spirits it can hold alone.
 Appearance ne'er can reach reality,—
 If nature be victorious, art must fly.

NUPTIAL ODE.

For on the stage's boarded scaffold here
A world ideal opens to our eyes,

Nothing is true and genuine save—a tear;
Emotion on no dream of sense relies.

The real Melpomene is still sincere,
Naught as a fable merely she supplies—
By truth profound to charm us is her care;
The false one, truth pretends, but to ensnare.

Now from the scene, Art threatens to retire,
Her kingdom wild maintains still Phantasy;
The stage she like the world would set on fire,
The meanest and the noblest mingles she.

The Frank alone 'tis Art can now inspire,
And yet her archetype can his ne'er be;
In bonds unchangeable confining her,
He holds her fast, and vainly would she stir.

The stage to him is pure and undefil'd;
Clas'd from the regions that to her belong
Are Nature's tones, so careless and so wild,
To him e'en language rises into song;
A realm harmonious 'tis, of beauty mild,
Where limb unites to limb in order strong.
The whole into a solemn temple blends,
And 'tis the dance that grace to motion lends.

And yet the Frank must not be made our guide,
For in his art no living spirit reigns;
The boasting gestures of a spurious pride
That mind which only loves the true disdains.
To nobler ends alone be it applied,
Returning, like some soul's long vanish'd manes,
To render the oft-sullied stage once more
A throne befitting the great muse of yore.

 NUP TIAL ODE.*

Fair bride, attended by our blessing,
Glad Hymen's flowery path 'gin pressing!
We witness'd with enraptur'd eye
The graces of thy soul unfolding,

Thy youthful charms their beauty moulding

---

* Addressed in the original to Mdlle Sievoigt, on her marriage to Dr. Sturm.

To blossom for love's ecstasy.
 A happy fate now hovers round thee,
 And friendship yields without a smart
 To that sweet god whose might hath bound thee ;—
 He needs must have, he hath thy heart !

To duties dear, to troubles tender,
 Thy youthful breast must now surrender,
 Thy garland's summons must obey.
 Each toying infantine sensation,
 Each fleeting sport of youth's creation,
 For evermore hath passed away ;
 And Hymen's sacred bond new chaineth
 Where soft and flutt'ring Love was shrin'd ;
 Yet for a heart, where beauty reigneth,
 Of flowers alone that bond is twin'd.

The secret that can keep for ever
 In verdant links, that nought can sever,
 The bridal garland, wouldst thou find ?
 'Tis purity the heart pervading,
 The blossoms of a grace unfading,
 And yet with modest shame combin'd,
 Which, like the sun's reflection glowing,
 Makes every heart throb blissfully ;—
 'Tis looks with mildness overflowing,
 And self-maintaining dignity !

VERSES WRITTEN IN THE ALBUM OF A FRIEND.

(HERR VON MECHELN OF BASLE.)

NATURE in charms is exhaustless, in beauty ever reviving ;
 And, like nature, fair art is inexhaustible too.

282 VERSES WRITTEN IN THE ALBUM OF A FRIEND.

Hail, thou honor'd old man ! for both in thy heart thou
preservest
Living sensations, and thus ne'er ending youth is thy lot !

VERSES WRITTEN IN THE FOLIO ALBUM
OF A LEARNED FRIEND.

Once wisdom dwelt in tomes of ponderous size,
While friendship from a pocket-book would talk ;
But now that knowledge in small compass lies,
And floats in almanacs, as light as cork,
Courageous man, thou dost not hesitate
To open for thy friends this house so great !
Hast thou no fear, I seriously would ask,
That thou may'st thus their patience overtask ?

THE PRESENT.

Bring and staff, oh to me on a Rhenish flask ye are welcome !
Him a true shepherd I call, who thus gives drink to his sheep.
Draught thrice blest ! It is by the Muse I have won thee,—the Muse too,
Sends thee,—and even the Church places upon thee
her seal.

WILLIAM TELL.*

When hostile elements with rage resound,
And fury blindly fans war's lurid flame,—
When in the strife of party quarrel drown'd,
The voice of justice no regard can claim,—
When crime is free, and impious hands are found
The sacred to pollute, devoid of shame,
And loose the anchor which the State maintains,
No subject there we find for joyous strains.

* These verses were sent by Schiller to the then Electoral High Chancellor, with a copy of his 'William Tell.'

But when a nation, that its flocks still feeds
With calm content, nor other's wealth desires,
Throws off the cruel yoke 'neath which it bleeds,
Yet e'en in wrath, humanity admires,—
And e'en in triumph, moderation heeds,—
That is immortal, and our song requires.
To show thee such an image now is mine;
Thou know'st it well, for all that's great is thine

TO THE HEREDITARY PRINCE OF WEIMAR, ON HIS PROCEEDING TO PARIS.

(SUNG IN A CIRCLE OF FRIENDS.)

With one last bumper let us hail
The wanderer belov'd,
Who takes his leave of this still vale
Wherein in youth he rov'd.

From loving arms, from native home,
He tears himself away,
To yonder city proud to roam,
That makes whole lands its prey.

Dissension flies, all tempests end,
And chain'd is strife abhorr'd;
We in the crater may descend
From whence the lava pour'd.

A gracious fate conduct thee through
Life's wild and mazy track!
A bosom nature gave thee true,—
A bosom true bring back!

Thou'lt visit lands that war's wild train
Had crush'd with careless heed;
Now smiling Peace salutes the plain,
And strews the golden seed.

The hoary Father Rhine thou'lt greet,
 Who thy forefather* blest
 Will think of, whilst his waters fleet
 In ocean's bed to rest.

Do homage to the hero's manes,
 And offer to the Rhine,
 The German frontier who maintains,
 His own-created wine,—

So that thy country's soul thy guide
 May be, when thou hast cross'd
 On the frail bark to yonder side,
 Where German faith is lost!

THE COMMENCEMENT OF THE NEW CENTURY.

TO —

WHERE will a place of refuge, noble friend,
 For peace and freedom ever open lie !
 The century in tempests had its end,
 The new one now begins with murder's cry.

Each land-connecting bond is torn away,
 Each ancient custom hastens to decline ;
 Not e'en the ocean can war's tumult stay.
 Not e'en the Nile-god, not the hoary Rhine,

Two mighty nations strive, with hostile power,
 For undivided mastery of the world ;
 And, by them, each land's freedom to devour,
 The trident brandish'd is—the lightning hurl'd.

---

* Duke Bernard of Weimar, one of the heroes of the Thirty Years' War.

Each country must to them its gold afford,
 And, Brennus-like, upon the fatal day,
 The Frank now throws his heavy iron sword,
 The even scales of justice to o'erweigh.

His merchant-fleets the Briton greedily
 Extends, like Holyp-limbs, on ev'ry side ;
 And the domain of Amphitrite free
 As if his home it were, would fain bestride.

E'en to the south pole's dim, remotest star,
 His restless course moves onward, unrestrain'd ;
 Each isle he tracks,—each coast, however far,
 But Paradise alone he ne'er has gain'd !

Although thine eye may ev'ry map explore,
 Vainly thou'lt seek to find that blissful place,
 Where freedom's garden smiles for evermore,
 And where in youth still blooms the human race.

Before thy gaze the world extended lies,
 The very shipping it can scarce embrace ;
 And yet upon her back, of boundless size,
 E'en for ten happy men there is not space !

Into thy bosom's holy, silent cells,
 Thou needs must fly from life's tumultuous throng !
 Freedom but in the realm of visions dwells,
 And beauty bears no blossoms but in song.

---

FAREWELL TO THE READER.

A MAIDEN blush o'er ev'ry feature straying,
 The Muse her gentlo harp now lays down here,
 And stands before thee, for thy judgment praying,—
 She waits with reverence, but not with fear ;
 Her last farewell for his kind smile delaying.
 Whom splendor dazzles not, who holds truth dear.
 The hand of him alone whose soaring spirit
 Worships the Beautiful, can crown her merit.

These simple lays are only heard resounding,
While feeling hearts are gladden'd by their tone
With brighter phantasies their path surrounding
To nobler aims their footsteps guiding on.
Yet coming ages ne'er will hear them sounding.
'They live but for the present hour alone ;
The passing moment call'd them into being,
And, as the hours dance on, they, too, are fleeing.

The spring returns, and nature then awaking,
Bursts into life across the smiling plain ;
Each shrub its perfume through the air is shaking,
And heaven is fill'd with one sweet choral strain ;
While young and old, their secret haunts forsaking
With raptur'd eye and ear rejoice again,
The spring then flies,—to seed return the flowers,
And night remains to mark the vanish'd hours.

SUPPRESSED POEMS.

DEDICATION

TO

Heath,

MY PRINCIPAL.

—(o)—

Most high and mighty Czar of all flesh, ceaseless reducer of empires, unfathomable glutton in the whole realms of nature.

With the most profound flesh-creeping I take the liberty of kissing the rattling leg-bones of your voracious Majesty, and humbly laying this little book at your dried-up feet. My predecessors have always been accustomed, as if on purpose to annoy you, to transport their goods and chattels to the archives of eternity, directly under your nose, forgetting that, by so doing, they only made your mouth water the more, for the proverb, Stolen bread tastes sweetest, is applicable even to you. No! I prefer to dedicate this work to you, feeling assured that you will—throw it aside.

But, joking apart! methinks we two know each other better than by mere hearsay. Enrolled in the order of Æsculapius, the first-born of Pandora's box, as old as the fall of man, I have stood at your altar,—have sworn nuding hatred to your hereditary foe Nature, as the son of Hamilear to the seven hills of Rome,—have sworn to besiege her with a whole army of medicines,—to throw up barricades round the obstinate soul,—to drive from the field the insolents who cut down your fees and cripple your finances,—and on the Archæan battle-plain to plant your midnight standard.—In return (for one good turn deserves another), you must prepare for me the precious TALISMAN, which can save me from the gulls and the wheel uninjured, and with a whole skin—

Jusque datum sceler!

Come then ! act the generous Mæcenas ; for observe, I should be sorry to fare like my foolhardy colleagues and cousins, who, armed with stiletto and pocket-pistol, hold their court in gloomy ravines, or mix in the subterranean laboratory the wondrous polychrest, which, when taken with proper zeal, tickles our political noses, either too little or too much, with throne vacancies or state-fevers. — D'Amiens and Ravailac !—Ho, ho, ho !—'Tis a good thing for straight limbs !

Perhaps you have been whetting your teeth at Easter and Michaelmas ?—the great book-epidemic times at Leipzig and Frankford ! Hurrah for the waste-paper !—'twill make a royal feast. Your nimble brokers, Gluttony and Lust, bring you whole cargoes from the fair of life. — Even Ambition, your grandpapa—War, Famine, Fire, and Plague, your mighty huntsmen, have provided you with many a jovial man-chase.—Avarice and Covetousness, your sturdy butlers, drink to your health while towns floating in the bubbling cup of the world-ocean. I know a kitchen in Europe where the rarest dishes have been served up in your honor with festive pomp.—And yet—who has ever known you to be satisfied, or to complain of indigestion ?—Your digestive faculties are of iron ; your entrails fathomless !

Pooh—I had many other things to say to you, but I am in a hurry to be off.—You are an ugly brother-in-law—go !—I hear you are calculating on living to see a general coliation, where great and small, globes and lexicons, philosophies and knick-knacks, will fly into your jaws—a good appetite to you, should it come to that.—Yet, ravenous wolf that you are ! take care that you don't over-eat yourself, and have to disgorgo to a hair all that you have swallowed, as a certain Athenian (no particular friend of yours, by-the-by) has prophesied.

PREFACE.

Tobolsk, the 2nd February.

Tam primum radis gelidi includere Trioni.

FLOWERS in Siberia?— Behind this lies a piece of knavery, or the sun must make face against midnight.— And yet—if ye were to exert yourselves! 'Tis really so; we have been hunting sables long enough; let us for once in a way try our luck with flowers. Have not enough Europeans come to us step-sons of the sun, and waded through our hundred-years' snow, to pluck a modest flower? Shame upon our ancestors—we'll gather them ourselves, and frank a whole basketful to Europe.— Do not crush them, ye children of a milder heaven!

But to be serious.—To remove the iron weight of prejudice that broods heavily over the north, requires a stronger lever than the enthusiasm of a few individuals, and a firmer Hypomochlion than the shoulders of two or three patriots. Yet if this Anthology reconciles you squeamish Europeans to us snow-men as little as—let's suppose the case—our 'Muses' Almanac,* which we—let's again suppose the case—might have written, it will at least have the merit of helping its companions through the whole of Germany to give the last neck-stab to expiring taste, as we people of Tobolsko like to word it.

If your Homers talk in their sleep, and your Herculeases kill flies with their clubs,—if every one who knows how to give vent to his portion of sorrow in dreary Alexandrones, interprets that as a call to Helicon, shall wo Northerns be blamed for tinkling the Muses' lyre?—Your matadors claim to have coined silver, when they have stamped their effigy on wretched pewter;—and at Tobolsko, coiners are hanged. 'Tis true that you may often find paper-money amongst us instead of Russian roubles, but war and hard times are an excuse for anything.

Go forth, then, Siberian Anthology!—Go!—thou wilt make many a coxcomb happy, wilt be placed by him on the toilet-table of his sweetheart, and in reward wilt obtain her alabaster, lily-white hand for his tender kiss.—Go!—thou wilt fill up many a weary gulf of ennui in assemblies and city-visits, and, may be, relieve a Circassienne, who has confessed herself weary amidst a shower of calumnies.—Go!—thou wilt be consulted in the kitchens of many critics; they will fly thy light, and, like the screech-owl, retreat into thy shadow!—Ho, ho, ho!—Already I hear the ear-cracking howls in the inhospitable forest, and anxiously conceal myself in my sable.

THE JOURNALISTS AND MINOS.

I chanced the other eve,—
     But how I ne'er will tell,—
 The paper to receive
     That's publish'd down in hell.

In general, one may guess,
     I little care to see
 This free-corps of the press
     Got up so easily ;

But suddenly my eyes
     A side-note chanced to meet,
 And fancy my surpriso
     At reading in the sheet :—

“ For twenty weary springs”
     (The post from Erebus,
 Remark me, always brings Unpleasant news to us)—

“ Through want of water, we Have well-nigh lost our breath ;
 In great perplexity
     Hell came and ask'd for Death ;

“ They can wade through the Styx,
     Catch crabs in Lethæ's flood ;
 Old Charon's in a fix,
     His boat lies in the mud.

“ The dead leap over there,
     The young and old as well ;
 The boatman gets no fare,
     And loudly curses Hell.”

“ King Minos bade his spies
     In all directions go ;
 Tho devils needs must rise,
     And bring him news below.

“Hurrah! The secret’s told!
 They’ve caught the robber’s nest
 A merry feast let’s hold!
 Come, Hell, and join the rest!

“An authors’ countless band,
 Stalk’d round Cacytus’ brink,
 Each bearing in his hand
 A glass for holding ink.

“And into casks they drew
 The water, strange to say,
 As boys suck sweet wine through
 An elder-reed in play.

“Quick! o’er them cast the net,
 Ere they have time to flee!
 Warm welcome ye will get,
 So come to Sans-souci!

“Smelt by the king ere long,
 He sharpen’d up his tooth,
 And thus address’d the throng
 (Full angrily, in truth):

“ ‘The robbers is’t we see?
 What trade? What land, perchance?
 ‘GERMAN NEWS-WRITERS WE!’
 ‘Enough to make us dance!

“ ‘A wish I long have known
 To bid ye stop and dine,
 Ere ye by Death were mown,
 That brother-in-law of mine.

“ ‘Yet now by Styx I swear,
 Whose flood ye would imbibe,
 That torments and despair
 Shall fill your vermin-tribe’

“ ‘The pitcher seeks the well,
 Till broken ’tis one day;
 They who for ink would smell,
 The penalty must pay.

" 'So seize them by their thumbs,
And heave a straight my beast
Even now he licks his gums,
Impatient for the feast.'—

" How quiver'd ev'ry limb
Beneath the bull-dog's jaws
Their honours baited him,
And he allow'd no pause.

" Convulsively they swear,
Still writho the rabble rout,
Engag'd with anxious care
In pumping Lethe out."

Ye Christians, good and meek,
This vision bear in mind;
If journalists ye seek,
Attempt their thumbs to find.

Defects they often hide,
As folks whose hairs are gone
We see with wigs supplied;
Probatum! I have done!

BACCHUS IN THE PILLORY

Twirl him! twirl him! blind and dumb,
Deaf and dumb,
Twirl the curls so troublesome!
Sprigs of fashion by the dozen
Thou dost bring to book, good cousin.
Cousin thou art not in clover;
Many a head that's fill'd with smoke
Thou hast twirl'd and well-nigh broke,
Many a clever one perplex'd,
Many a stomach sorely vex'd,
'Turning it completely over;
Many a hat put on awry,
Many a lamb chas'd cruelly,
Mado streets, houses, edges, trees,
Dance around us fools with ease.

Therefore thou art not in clover,
 Therefore thou, like other folk,
 Hast thy head fill'd full of smoke,
 Therefore thou, too, art perplex'd,
 And thy stomach's sorely vex'd,
 For 'tis turn'd completely over ;
 Therefore thou art not in clover.

Twirl him ! twirl him ! blind and dumb,
 Deaf and dumb,
 Twirl the carle so troublesome !
 Seest thou how our tongues and wits
 Thou hast shiver'd into bits—
 Seest thou this, licentious wight?
 How we're fasten'd to a string,
 Whirl'd around in giddy ring,
 Making all like night appear,
 Filling with strange sounds our ear ;
 Learn it in the stocks aright !

When our ears wild noises shook,
 On the sky we cast no look,
 Neither stock nor stone review'd,
 But were punish'd as we : food.
 Seest thou now, licentious wight?
 That, to us, yon flaring sun
 Is the Heidelbergers' tun ;
 Castles, mountains, trees and towers,
 Seem like chopin-cups of ours.
 Learn'st thou now, licentious wight?
 Learn it in the stocks aright !

Twirl him ! twirl him ! blind and dumb,
 Deaf and dumb,
 Twirl the carle so troublesome !
 Kinsman, once so full of glee,
 Kinsman, where's thy drollery,
 Where thy tricks, thou cunning one?
 All thy tricks are spent and past,
 To the devil gone at last !
 Like a silly fop thou'lt prate,
 Like a washerwoman rate.
 Thou art but a simpleton.
 Now thou may'st—more shame to thee—

Run away, because of me;
 Cupid, that young rogue, may glory
 Learning wisdom from thy story
 Haste, thou sluggard, hence to flee;
 As from glass is cut our wit,
 So, like lightning, 'twill be split;
 If thou won't be chas'd away,
 Let each folly also stay!
 Seest my meaning? Think of me!
 Idle one, away with thee!

SPINOSA.

A mighty oak here ruin'd lies,
 Its top was wont to kiss the skies,
 Why is it now o'erthrown?—
 The peasants needed, so they said,
 Its wood, wherewith to build a shed,
 And so they've cut it down.

EPITAPH.

Hence lies a man cut off by Fate
 Too soon for all good men;
 For sextons he died late—too late
 For those who wield the pen.

TO THE FATES.

Nor in the crowd of masqueraders gay,
 Where coxcombs' wit with wondrous splendor flares,
 And, easier than the Indian's net the prey,
 The virtue of young beauties snares;—

Not at the toilet-table of the fair,
 Where vanity, as if before an idol, bows,
 And often breathes a warmer prayer
 Than when to Heaven it pays its vows;

TO THE FATES.

And not behind the curtain's cunning veil,
 Where the world's eye is hid by cheating night,
 And glowing flames the hearts assail,
 That seem'd but chilly in the light,—

Where wisdom we surprise with shame-dyed lip,
 While Phœbus' rays she boldly drinks,
 Where men, like thievish children, nectar sip.
 And from the spheres e'en Plato sinks—

To ye—to ye, O lonely sister-band,
 Daughters of Destiny, ascend,
 When o'er the lyre all-gently sweeps my hand,
 These strains, where bliss and sadness blend.

You only has no sonnet ever woo'd,
 To win your gold no usurer e'er sigh'd,
 No cockcomb e'er with plaints your steps pursued,
 For you, Arcadian shepherd ne'er has died.

Your gentle fingers ye for ever ply,
 Life's nervous thread with care to twist,
 Till sound the clanging shears, and fruitlessly
 The tender web would then resist.

Since thou my thread of life hast kindly spun,
 Thy hand, O Clotho, I now kiss!
 Since thou hast spar'd that life, whilst scarce begun,
 Receive this nosegay, Lachesis!

Full often thorns upon the thread,
 But oft'ner roses, thou hast strung;
 For thorns and roses there outspread,
 Clotho, to thee this lay be sung!

Oft did tempestuous passions rise,
 And threat to break the thread by force;
 Oft projects of gigantic size
 Have check'd its free, unfetter'd course.

Oft, in sweet hours of heavenly bliss,
 Too fine appear'd the thread to me;
 Still oft'ner when near sorrow's dark abyss,
 Too firm its fabric seem'd to be.

Clotho, for this and other lies,
 Thy pardon I with tears implore;
 Henceforth I'll take whatever prize
 Sage Clotho gives, and ask no more.

But never let the shears cut off a rose—
 Only the thorns.—yet as thou wilt!
 Let, if thou wilt, the death-shears sharply close,
 If thou this single prayer fulfillst!

O, goddess! when, enchain'd to Laura's breath,
 My spirit from its shell breaks free,
 Betraying when, upon the gates of death,
 My youthful life hangs giddily,

Let to infinity the thread extend,
 'Twill wander through the realms of bliss,—
 Then, goddess, let thy cruel shears descend!
 Then let them fall, O Lachesis!

KLOPSTOCK AND WIELAND.

(WHEN THEIR MINIATURES WERE HANGING SIDE BY SIDE.)

Is truth, when I have cross'd dark Lethe's river,
 The man upon the right I'll love for ever,
 For 'twas he first that wrote for me.
 For all the world the left man wrote, full clearly,
 And so we all should love him dearly;
 Come, left man! I must needs kiss thee!

DIALOGUE.

A. HARK, neighbor, for one moment stay!—
 Herr Doctor Scalpel, so they say,
 Has got off safe and sound;
 At Paris I your uncle found
 Fast to a horse's crupper bound,—
 Yet Scalpel made a king his prey.

THE PARALLEL.

- B. Oh, dear me, no! A real misnomer,
The fact is, he has his diploma;
The other one has not.
A. Eh! What? Has a diploma?
In Suabia may such things be got?

THE PARALLEL.

WER likeness Madame Ramler bids me find;
I try to think in vain, to whom or how;
Beath the moon there's nothing of the kind.—
I'll show she's like the moon, I vow!

The moon—she rouges, steals the sun's bright light,
By eating stolen bread her living gets,—
Is also vont to paint her cheeks at night,
While, with untiring ardor, she coquets.

The moon—for this may Herod give her thanks!—
Reserve her best till night may have return'd;
Our lady swallows up by day the franes
That she at night-time may have earn'd.

The moon first swells, and then is once more lean,
As surely as the month comes round;
With Madame Ramler 'tis the same, I ween—
But she to need more time is found!

The moon to love her silver horns is said,
But makes a sorry show;
She likes them on her husband's head,—
She's right to have it so!

THE MUSES' REVENGE.

AN ANECDOTE OF HELICON.

ONCE the Nine all weeping came
To the God of Song
"Oh, papa!" they there exclaim—
"Hear our tale of wrong!"

"Young ink-bellers swarm about
Our dear Helicon;
There they fight, manoeuvre, shout,
Even to thy throne.

"On their steeds they gallop head
To the spring to drink,
Each one calls himself a bard—
Minstrels—only think!

"There they—how the thing to name?
Would our persons treat—
This, without a blush of shame,
We can ne'er repeat;

"One, in front of all, then cries,
'I the army lead!'
Both his fists he wildly plies,
Like a bear indeed!

"Others wakes he in a trice
With his whistlings rude;
But none follow, though he twice
Has those sounds renew'd.

"He'll return, he threats, ere long,
And he'll come no doubt!
Father, friend to lyric song,
Please to show him out!—"

Father Phœbus laughing hears
The complaint they've brought;
"Don't be frighten'd, pray, my dears,
We'll soon cut them short!

"One must hasten to hell-fire,
Go, Melpomene!
Let a Fury borrow lyre,
Notes, and dress, of thee.

"Let her meet, in this array,
One of these vile crews,
As though she had lost her way
Soon as night ensues.

"Then with kisses dark, I trust,
They'll the dear child greet,
Satisfying their wild lust
Just as it is meet!"—

Said and done!—The one from hell
Soon was dress'd aright.
Scarcely had the prey, they tell,
Caught the fellows' sight,

Than, as kites a pigeon follow,
They attack'd her straight—
Part, not all though, I can swallow
Of what folks relate.

If fair boys were 'mongst the band,
How came they to be—
This I cannot understand,—
In such company?

* * * *

The goddess a miscarriage had, good luck!
And was deliver'd of an—Almanack!

EPITAPH.

ON A CERTAIN PHYSIOGNOMIST.

On ev'ry nose he rightly read
What intellects were in the head :
And yet—that he was not the one
By whom God meant it to be done,
This on his own he never red.

THE HYPOCHONDRIACAL PLUTO.

A ROMANCE.

BOOK I.

The sullen maycr who reigns in hell,
By mortals Pluto height,
Who thrashes all his subjects well,

Both morn and eve, as stories tell,
 And rules the realms of night,
 All pleasure lost in cursing once,
 All joy in flogging, for the nonce.

The sedentary life he led
 Upon his brazen chair
 Made his hind-quarters very red,
 While pricks, as from a nettle-bed,
 He felt both here and there :
 A burning ann, too, chanc'd to shine,
 And boil'd down all his blood to brine.

'Tis true he drank full many a draught
 Of Phlegethon's black flood ;
 By cupping, leeches, doctors' craft,
 And venesection, fore and aft,
 They took from him much blood.
 Full many a clyster was applied,
 And purging, too, was also tried.

His doctor, vers'd in sciences,
 With wig beneath his hat,
 Argued and show'd with wondrous ease,
 From Celsus and Hippocrates,
 When he in judgment sat,—
 "Right worshipful the mayor of hell,
 The liver's wrong, I see full well."—

"He's but a booby," Pluto said,
 "With all his trash and pills !
 A man like me—pray where's his head ?
 A young man yet—his wits have fled !
 While youth my veins yet fills !
 Unless electuaries he'll bring,
 Full in his face my club I'll fling !"

Or right or wrong,—'twas a hard case
 To weather such a trial ;
 (Poor men, who lose a king's good grace !)
 He's straight saluted in the face
 By ev'ry splint and phial.—
 He very wisely made no fuss ;
 This hint he learnt of Cerberus.

"Go ! fetch the barber of the skies,
 Apollo, to me soon !"
 An airy courier straightway flies
 Upon his beast, and onward hies,
 And skims past poles and moon ;
 As he went off, the clock struck four,
 At five his charger reached the door.

"Just then Apollo happen'd—" Heigh-ho !
 A sonnet to have made ?"
 Oh, dear me, no !—upon Miss Io
 (Such is the tale I heard from Clio)
 The midwife to have play'd.
 The boy, as if stamped out of wax,
 Might Zeus as father fairly tax.

He read the letter half asleep,
 Then started in dismay ;
 "The road is long, and hell is deep,
 Your rocks I know are rough and steep . . .
 Yet like a king he'll pay !"
 He dons his cap of mist and furs,
 Then through the air the charger spurs.

With locks all frizzled a la mode,
 And ruffles smooth and nice,
 In gala dress, that brightly glow'd
 (A gift Aurora had bestow'd),
 With watch-chains of high price,
 With toes turn'd out, and chapeau bas,—
 He stood before hell's mighty czar.

BOOK II.

The grumbler, in his usual tone,
 Receiv'd him with a curse :
 "To Pomerania straight begone !
 Ugh ! how he smells of eau de Cologne.
 Why, brimstone isn't worse.
 He'd best be off to heaven again,
 Or he'll infect hell's wide domain."

The god of pills, in sore surprise,
 A spring then backwards took . . .
 "Is this his highness' usual guise?
 'Tis in the brain, I see, that lies
 The mischief—what a look!

See how his eyes in frenzy roll!
 The case is bad, upon my soul!

"A journey to Elysium
 Th' infectious would dissolve,
 Making the cap's laws tough become,
 As through the capitulum
 And stomach they revolve,
 Provisionally be it so;
 Let's start, then—but incognito!"—

"Ay, worthy sir, No doubt well meant!
 If, in these regions lazy,
 As with you folk, so charg'd with scent,
 You dapper ones, who heaven frequent,
 'Twere proper to be lazy,
 If hell a master needed not,
 Why, then I'd follow on the spot!

"Ha! if the cat once turn'd her back,
 Pray where would be the mice?
 They'd sally forth from ev'ry crack,
 My very mufti would attack,
 Spoil all things in a trice!
 Oddsbodikins! 'tis pretty cool!
 I'll let him see I'm no such fool!

"A pleasant uproar happen'd erst,
 When they assail'd my tower!
 No fault of mine 'twas, at the worst,
 That from their desks and chains to burst
 Philosophers had power.
 What, has there e'er escaped a poet?
 Help, heaven! what misery to know it!

“When days are long, folks talk more stuff!
 Upou your seats, no doubt,
 With all your cards and music rough,
 And scribblings too, ’tis hard enough
 The moments to eke out.
 Idleness, liko a flea, will gnaw
 On velvet cushions,—as on straw.

“My brother no attempt omits
 To drive away ennui;
 His lightning round about him flits,,
 The target with his storms he hits
 (Those howls provo that to me),
 Till Rhea’s trembling shoulders ache,
 And force mo e’en for hell to quake.

“Were I grandfather Cœlus, though,
 You wouldn’t soon escape!
 Into my belly straight you’d go,
 And in your swaddling-clothes cry ‘oh!’
 And through five windows gaze!
 First o’er my stream you’d have to come.
 And then, perhaps, to Elysium!—

“Your steed you mounted, I dare say,
 In hopes to catch a goose;
 If it is worth the trouble, pray
 Tell what you’ve heard from me to-day,
 At shaving-time, to Zeus.
 Just leave him, then, to swallow it;
 I don’t care what he thinks, a bit!

“You’d better now go homeward straight?
 Your server: ;! there’s the door!
 For all your pains—one moment wait!
 I’ll give you—liberal is the rate—
 A piece of ruby-ore.
 In heaven such things are rarities.
 We use them for baso purposes.”—

BOOK III.

The god at once, then, said farewell,
 At small pains so striving;
 When sudden through the crowds of hell
 A flying courier rush'd pell-mell,
 From 'Tellus' bounds arriving.
 "Monarch! a doctor follows me!
 Behold this wondrous prodigy!"

"Place for the doctor!" each one said—
 He comes with spurs and whip.
 To ev'ry one he nods his head,
 As if he had been born and bred
 In 'Tartarus,—the rip!
 As jaunty, fearless, full of vim;
 As Britons in the Lower House.

"Good morrow, worthy sirs!—Ahem!
 I'm glad to see that here
 (Where all they of Prometheus' stem
 Must come, whene'er the Fates condemn
 One meets with such good cheer!
 Why for Elysium care a rush?
 I'd rather see hell's fountains gush!"—

"Stop! stop! his impudence, I vow,
 Its due reward shall meet;
 By Charles's Wain, I swear it now!
 He must—no questions I'll allow,— Prescribe me a receipt.
 All hell is mine, I'm Pluto light!
 Make haste to bring your wares to light!"

The doctor, with a knowing look,
 The swarthy king survey'd;
 He neither felt his pulse, nor took
 The usual steps,—(see Galen's book),—
 No difference 'twould have made
 As piercing as electric fire
 He ey'd him to his heart's desire.

“Monarch ! I’ll tell thee in a trice
 The thing that’s needed here ;
 Though desperate may seem the advice,—
 The caso itself is very nice—
 And children dragons fear.
 Devil must devil eat !—no more !—
 Either a wife,—or hellebore !

“Whether she scold, or sportive play
 (’Tween these, no medium’s known),
 She’ll drive the incubus away
 That has assail’d thee many a day
 Upon thine iron throne.
 She’ll make the nimble spirits fleet
 Up tow’rds the head, down tow’rds the feet.”

Long may the doctor honour’d be
 Who let this saying fall !
 He ought to have his effigy
 By Phidias sculptur’d so that he May be discern’d by all ;
 A monument for ever thriving,
 Boerhaave, Hippocrates, surviving !

* * * *

ACTÆON.

Thy wife is destin’d to deceive thee !
 She’ll seek another’s arms and leave thee,
 And horns upon thy head will shortly sprout !
 How dreadful, that, when bathing, thou shouldst see
 me
 (No æther-bath can wash the stigma out),
 And then, in perfect innocence, shouldst flee me !

TRUST IN IMMORTALITY.

THE dead has risen here, to live thro’ endless ages,
 This I with firmness trust and know.
 I was first led to guess it by the sages,
 The knaves convince me that ’tis really so.

REPROACH—TO LAURA.

MAIDEN, stay!—oh, whither wouldst thou go?
Do I still or pride or grandeur show?

Maiden, was it right?
'Thou the giant mad'st a dwarf once more,
Scatter'dst far th' mountains that of yore
Climb'd to glory's sunny height.

Thou hast doom'd my flow'rets to decay,
All the phantoms bright hast blown away,
Whose sweet follies form'd the hero's trust;
All my plans that proudly rais'd their head
Thou dost, with thy gentle zephyr-tread,
Prostrate, laughing, in the dust.

To the godhead, eagle-like, I flew,— Smiling, fortune's juggling wheel to view,
Careless when so'er her ba'l might fly;
Hov'ring far beyond Coeytus' wave,
Death and life receiving like a slave—
Life and death from out one beaming eye;

Like the victors, who, with thunder-lance,
On the iron plain of glory dance,
Starting from their mistress' breast,—
From Aurora's rosy bed upsprings
God's bright sun, to roam o'er towns of kings,
And to make the young world blest!

Tow'rd the hero doth this heart still strain?
Drink I, eagle still the fiery rain
Of thine eye, that burneth to destroy?
In the glances that destructive gleam,
Laura's LOVE I see with sweetness beam,—
Weep to see it—like a boy!

My repose, like yonder image bright,
Dancing in the waters—cloudless, light,
Maiden, hath been slain by thee!
On the dizzy height now totter I—
Laura—if from me—my Laura fly!
Oh, the thought to madness hurries me!

Gladly shont the revellers as they quaff,
 Raptures in the leaf-crown'd goblet laugh,
     Jests within the gold'n wine have birth,
 Since the maiden hath enslav'd my mind,
 I have left each youthful sport behind,
     Friendless roam I o'er the earth.

Hear I still bright glory's thunder-tone?
 Doth the laurel still allure me on?
     Doth thy lyre, Apollo Cynthius?
 In my breast no echoes now arise,
 Ev'ry shame-fac'd muse in sorrow flies,—
     And thou, too, Apollo Cynthius?

Shall I still be, as a woman, tame?
 Do my pulses, at my country's name,
     Proudly burst their prison-thralls?
 Would I boast the eagle's soaring wing?
 Do I long with Roman blood to spring,
     When my Hermann calls?

Oh, how sweet the eye's wild gaze divine!
 Sweet to quaff the incense at that shrine!
     Prouder, bolder, swells the breast,—
 That which once set ev'ry sense on fire,
 That which once could ev'ry nerve inspire,
     Scarce a half-smile now hath power to wrest!

That Orion might receive my fame,
 On the time-flood's heaving waves my name,
     Rock'd in glory in the mighty tide;
 So that Kronos' dreaded scytha was shiver'd,
 When against my monument it quiver'd,
     'Tow'ring tow'rd firmament in pride.

Smil'st thou?—No? To me naught perish'd now!
 Star and laurel I'll to fools allow,
     To the dead their marble cell;—
 Love hath granted all as my reward,
 High o'er man 'twere easy to have soar'd,
     So I love him well!

THE SIMPLE PEASANT.*

MATTHEW.

Gossip, you'll like to hear, no doubt !
 A learned work it is just come out --
No name is the name 'twill bear :
 The man has travel'd through the air,
 And on the sun beplaster'd roads,
 Has lost shoe-leather by whole loads, --
 Has seen the heavens lie open wide,
 And hell has travers'd with whole hide.
 The thought has just occur'd to me
 That one so skill'd as he must be
 May tell us how our flax and wheat arise,
 What say you ? -- Shall I try to ascertain ?

LUKE.

You fool, to think that any one so wise
 About mere flax and corn would rack his brain

THE MESSIAH.

REVERSON 'twas produced this poem's five :
 Perverted also ? -- prithee, don't inquire !

MAN'S DIGNITY.

I AM a man ! -- Let ev'ry one
 Who is a man too, spring
 With joy beneath God's shining sun,
 And leap on high, and sing !

To God's own image fair on earth
 Its stamp I've power to show ;
 Down to the front, where heaven has birth
 With boldness I dare go.

* A pointless satire upon Klopstock and his Messias.

'Tis well that I both dare and can !
When I a maiden see,
A voice exclaims : thou art a man !
I kiss her tenderly.

And redder then the maiden grows,
Her bodice seems too tight—
That I'm a man the maiden knows,
Her bodice therefore's tight.

Will she, perchance, for pity cry,
If unawares she's caught ?
She finds that I'm a man—then, why
By her is pity sought ?

I am a man ; and if alone
She sees me drawing near,
I make the emperor's daughter run,
Though ragged I appear.

This golden watchword wins the smile
Of many a princess fair ;
They call—ye'd best look out the while,
Ye gold-laced fellows there !

That I'm a man, is fully shown
Where'er my lyre I sweep ;
It thunders out a glorious tone—
It otherwise would creep.

The spirit that my veins now hold,
My manhood calls its brother !
And both commands, like lions bold,
And fondly greet each other.

From out this same creative flood
From which we men have birth,
Both godlike strength and genius bud,
And ev'ry thing of worth.

My talisman all tyrants hates,
And strikes them to the ground ;
Or guides us gladly through life's gates
To where the dead are found.

Even Pompey, at Pharsalia's sight,
 My talisman o'erthrew;
 On German: and it hurl'd with might
 Rome's sensual children too.

Didst see the Roman, proud and stern,
 Sitting on Afric's shore?
 His eyes like Hecla seem to burn,
 And fiery flames outpour.

Then comes a frank and merry knave,
 And spreads it through the land:
 "Tell them that thou on Carthage's grave
 Hast seen great Marius stand!

Thus speaks the son of Rome with pride,
 Still mighty in his fall;
 He is a man, and naught beside,—
 Before him tremble all.

His grandsons afterwards began
 Their portions to o'erthrow,
 And thought it well that ev'ry man
 Should learn with grace to crow.

For shame, for shame,—once more for shame!
 "The wretched ones?—they've even Squander'd the tokens of their fame,
 The choicest gifts of Heaven.

God's counterfeit has sinfully
 Disgrac'd his form divine,
 And in his vile humanity
 Has wallow'd like the swine.

The face of earth each vainly treads,
 Like gourds, that boys in sport
 Have hollow'd out to human heads,
 With skulls, whose brains are—naught.

Like wine that by a chemist's art
 Is through retorts refin'd,
 Their spirits to the dence depart,
 The phlegma's left behind.

From ev'ry woman's face they fly,
 Its very aspect dread,—
 And if they dar'd—and could not—why,
 'Twere better they were dead.

*                      *                      *

They shun all worthies when they can,
 Grief at their joy they prove—
 The man who cannot make a man
 A man can never love !

The world I proudly wander o'er,
 And plume myself and sing :
 I am a man !—Whoe'er is more ?
 Then leap on high and spring !

---

HYMN TO THE ETERNAL.

'Twixt the heavens and earth, high in the airy ocean,
 In the tempest's cradle I'm born with a rocking motion ;
     Clouds are tow'ring,
     Storms beneath me are low'ring,
 Giddily all the wonders I see,
 And, O ETERNAL, I think of Thee !

All Thy terrible pomp, lend to the Finite now,
 Mighty Nature ! Oh, of Infinity, thou
     Giant daughter !
     Mirror God, as in water !
 Tempest, oh, let thine organ-peal
 God to the reasoning worm reveal !

Hark ! it peals—how the rocks quiver beneath its growl
 ZENAOH'S glorious name, wildly the hurricane howls !
     Graving the hills
     With the lightning's style :
 " CREATURES, DO YE ACKNOWLEDGE ME ?"
 Spurn us, Lord ! We acknowledge Thee !

THOUGHTS ON THE 1st OCTOBER, 1781.

What mean the joyous sounds from yonder vine-clad height?

What the exulting Evox?*

Why glows the cheek? Whom is't that I, with pinions light,

Swinging the lofty Thyrsus see?

Is it the Genius whom the gladsome throng obeys?

Do I his numerous train descry?

In plenty's teeming horn the gifts of heaven he sways,
And reels from very ecstasy!—

See how the golden grape in glorious beauty shines,

Kiss'd by the earliest morning-beams!

The shadow of yon bow'r, how lovingly it sighs,

As it with countless blessings tans!

Hail glad October, thou art welcome unto me!—

October's first-born, welcome thou!

Thanks of a purer kind, than all who worship thee,

More heartfelt thanks I'm bringing now!

For thou to me the one whom I have lov'd so well,

And love with fondness to the grave,

Who merits in my heart for evermore to dwell,—

The best of friends in Rieger I gave.

'Tis true thy breath doth rock the leaves upon the trees

And sadly make their charms decay;

Gently they fall:—and swift, as morning phantasies

With those who waken fly away.

'Tis true that on thy track the fleecy spoiler hastes,

Who makes all nature's chords resound

With discord dull, and turns the plains and groves to wastes,

So that they sadly mourn around.

* Schiller, who is not very particular about the quantities of classical names, gives this word with the o long—which is, of course, the correct quantity—in The Gods of Greece (see page 52).

† A well-known General, who died in 1783.

See how the gloomy forms of years, as on they roll,
Each joyous banquet overthrows,
When, in uplifted hand, from out the foaming bowl,
Joy's noble purple brightly flows !

See how they disappear, when friends sweet converse hold,
And loving wander arm-in-arm ;
And, to revenge themselves on winter's north wind cold,
Upon each other's breasts grow warm !

And when Spring's children smile upon us once again,
When all the youthful splendor bright,
When each melodious note of each sweet rapturous strain
Awakens with it each delight :

How joyous then the stream that our whole soul pervades !

What life from out our glances pours !
Sweet Philomela's song, resounding through the glades,
Ourselves, our youthful strength restores !

Oh, may this whisper breathe,—(let Rieger bear in mind
The storm by which in age we're bent !)—
His guardian angel, when the evening star so kind
Gleams softly from the firmament !

In silence be he led to yonder thund'ring height,
And guided be his eye, that he,
In valley and on plain, may see his friends aright,
And that, with growing ecstasy,

On yonder holy spot, when he their number tells
He may experience friendship's bliss,
Now first unveil'd, until with pride his bosom swells,
Conscious that all their love is his.

Then will the distant voice be loudly heard to say :
“And G—, too, is a friend of thine !
When silv'ry locks no more around his temples play,
G— still will be a friend of thine !

"E'en yonder"—and now in his eye the crystal tear
 Will gleam—"o'er yonder he will love!
 Love thee too, when his heart, in yonder spring-like sphere,
 Link'd on to thine, can rapture prove!"

THE WIRTEMBERGER.

THE name of Wirtemberg they hold
 To come from Wirth am Berg,* I'm told.
 A Wirtemberger who ne'er drinks
 No Wirtemberger is, methinks!

THE PLAGUE.

A PHANTASY.

PLAGUE's contagious murderous breath
 God's strong might with terror reveals,
 As through the dreary valley of death
 With its brotherhood fell it steals!

Fearfully throbs the anguish-struck heart,
 Horribly quivers each nerve in the frame;
 Frenzy's wild laughs the torment proclaim,
 Howling convulsions disclose the fierce smart.

Fierce delirium writhes upon the bed—
 Poisonous mists hang o'er the cities dead;
 Men all haggard, pale, and wan,
 To the shadow-realm press on.
 Death lies brooding in the humid air,
 Plague, in dark graves, piles up treasures fair,
 And its voice exultingly raises
 Funeral silence—churchyard calm,
 Rapture change to dread alarm,—
 Thus the plague God wildly praises!

MONUMENT OF MOOR THE ROBBER.*

'Tis ended !
Welcome ! 'tis ended !
Oh thou sinner majestic,
All thy terrible part is now play'd !

Noble abas'd one !
Thou, of thy race beginner and ender !
Wondrous son of her fearfulest humor,
Mother Nature's blunder sublime !

Through cloud-cover'd night a radiant gleam !
Hark how behind him the portals are closing !
Night's gloomy jaws veil him darkly in shade !
Nations are trembling,
At his destructive splendor afraid !
Thou art welcome ! 'Tis ended !
Oh thou sinner majestic,
All thy terrible part is now play'd !

Crumble,—decay
In the cradle of wide-open heaven !
Terrible sight to each sinner that breathes,
When the hot thirst for glory
Raises its barriers OVER AGAINST THE DREAD THRONE !
See ! to eternity shame has consign'd thee !
To the bright stars of fame
Thou hast clamber'd aloft, on the shoulders of shame !
Yet time will come when shame will crumble beneath
thee,
When admiration at length will be thine !

---

* See the play of The Robbers.

With moist eye, by thy sepulchre dreaded,
 Man has pass'd onward—
 Rejoice in the tears that man sheddeth,
 Oh thou soul of the judg'd !
 With moist eye, by thy sepulchre dreaded,
 Lately a maiden pass'd onward,
 Hearing the fearful announcement
 Told of thy deeds by the herald of marbles ;
 And the maiden—rejoice thee ! rejoice thee !
 Sought not to dry up her tears.
 Far away I stood as the pearls were falling,
 And I shouted : Amalin !

Oh, ye youths ! Oh, ye youths !
 With the dangerous lightning of Genius
 Learn to play with more caution !
 Wildly his bit champs the charger of Phœbus
 Though, 'neath the reins of his master,
 More gently he rocks Earth and Heaven,
 Rein'd by a child's hand, he kindles
 Earth and Heaven in blazing destruction !
 Obstinate Phaëton perish'd,
 Buried beneath the sad wreck.

Child of the heavenly Genius !
 Glowing bosom all panting for action !
 Art thou charm'd by the tale of my robber, Glowing like thine was his bosom, and panting for action !
 He, like thee, was the child of the heavenly Genius.
 But thou smilest and go'st—
 Thy gaze flies through the realms of the world's a long story,
 Moor the robber it finds not there—
 Stay, thou youth, and smile not !
 Still survive all his sins and his shame—
 Robber Moor liveth—in all but name.

QUIRL.

You tell me that you feel surprise
 Because Quirl's paper's grown in size ;
 And yet they're crying through the streets
 That there's a rise in bread and meat.

THE BAD MONARCHS.

EARTHLY gods—my lyre shall win your praise.
 Though but wout its gentle sounds to raise
 When the joyous feast the people throng;
 Softly, at your pompous-sounding names,
 Shyly round your greatness' purple flames,
 Trembles now my song.

Answer ! shall I strike the golden string,
 When, borne on by exultation's wing,
 O'er the battle-field your chariots trail ?
 When ye, from the iron grasp set free,
 For your mistress' soft arms, joyously
 Change your pond'rous mail ?

Shall my daring hymn, ye gods, resound,
 While the golden splendor gleams around,
 Where, by mystic darkness overcome,
 With the thunderbolt your spleen may play,
 Or in crime humanity array,
 Till—the grave is dumb ?

Say ! shall peace 'neath crowns be now my theme ?
 Shall I boast, ye princes, that ye dream ?—
 While the worm the monarch's heart may tear,
 Golden sleep twines round the Moor by stealth,
 As he, at the palace, guards the wealth,
 Guards—but covets ne'er.

Show how kings and galley-slaves, my muse,
 Lovingly one single pillow use,—
 How their lightnings flatter, when suppress'd
 When their humors have no power to harm,
 When their mimic Minotaurs are calm
 And—the lions rest !

---

* Written in consequence of the ill-treatment Schiller experienced at the hands of the Grand Duke Charles of Württemberg.

Up, thou Hecate ! with thy magic seal
 Make the barr'd-up grave its wealth reveal,—
 Hark ! its doors like thunder open spring !
 When death's dismal blast is heard to sigh,
 And the hair on end stands fearfully,
 Princes' bliss I sing !

Do I here the strand, the coast detect
 Where your wishes' haughty fleet was wreck'd,—
 Where was stay'd your greatness' proud career
 That they ne'er with glory may grow warm,
 Night, with black and terror-spreading arm,
 Forges monarchs here.

On the death-chest sadly gleams the crown,
 With its heavy load of pearls weigh'd down,
 And the sceptre, needed now no more.
 In what splendor is the mould array'd !
 Yet but worms are with the body paid,
 That—the world watch'd o'er.

Haughty plants within that humble bed :
 See how death their pomp decay'd and fled
 With unblushing ribaldry besets !
 They who rul'd o'er north and east and west
 Suffer now his ev'ry nauseous jest
 And—no sultan threats ?

Leap for joy, ye stubborn dumb, to-day,
 And your heavy slumber shake away !
 From the battle, victory upsprings !
 Harken to the trump's exulting song !
 Ye are worshipp'd by the shouting throng !—
 Rouse ye, then, ye kings !

Seven sleepers !—to the clarion hark !
 How it rings, and how the fierce dogs bark !
 Shots from out a thousand barrels whizz.
 Eager steeds are neighing for the wood—
 Soon the bristly bear rolls in his blood,—
 Yours the triumph is !

But what now?—Are even princes dumb?
 'Tow'rd me scornful echoes ninefold come,
     Stealing through the vault's terrific gloom—
 Sleep assails the page by slow degrees.
 And Madonna gives to you the keys
     Of—her sleeping-room.

Not an answer—hush'd and still is all—
 Does tho veil, then, e'en on monarch's fall,
     Which enshrouds their humble flatt'ers' glance?
 And ye ask for worship in the dust,
 Since the blind jade, Fate, a world has thrust
     In your purse perchance?

And ye clatter, giant puppet-troops,
 Marshall'd in your proudly childish groups,
     Like the juggler on the opera scene?—
 Though the sound may please the vulgar ear,
 Yet the skilful, fill'd with sadness, jeer
     Powers so great, but mean.

*        *        *        *        *        *

Let your tow'ring shame be hid from sight
 In the garment of a sovereign's right,
     From the ambush of the throne outspring!
 Tremble, though, before the voice of song:
 Through the purple, vengeance will, ere long,
     Strike down e'en a king!

THE PEASANTS.*

Look outside, good friend, I pray!
 Two whole mortal hours
 Dogs and I've out here to-day
     Waited, by the powers!

Rain comes down as from a spout,
 Doomsday-storms rage round about,
     Dripping are my hose;
 Drench'd are coat and mantle too,

* Written in the Suabian dialect,

THE PEASANTS.

Coat and mantle, both just new;
 Wretched plight, Heav'n knows!
 Pretty stir's abroad to-day;
 Look outside, good friend, I pray!

Ay, the devil! look outside!
 Out is blown my lamp,—
 Gloom and night the heavens now hide,
 Moon and stars decamp.
 Stumbling over cack and stone,
 Jerkin, coat, I've torn, echono!
 Let me pity beg!
 Hedges, bushes, all around,
 Here a ditch, and there a mound,
 Breaking arm and leg.
 Gloom and night the heavens now hide
 Ay, the devil! look outside!

Ay, the deuce, then look outside!
 Listen to my prayer!
 Praying, singing, I have tried,
 Wouldst thou have me swear?
 I shall be a steaming mass,
 Freeze to rock and stone, alas!
 If I don't remove.
 All this, love, I owe to thee,
 Winter-bumps thou'lt make for me,
 Thou confounded love!
 Cold and gloom spread far and wide!
 Ay, the deuce! then look outside!

Thousand thunders! what's this now
 From the window shoots?
 Oh, thou witch! 'Tis dirt, I vow,
 That my head salutes!
 Rain, frost, hunger, tempests wild,
 Bear I for the devil's child,
 Now I'm vex'd full sore,
 Worse and worse 'tis! I'll begone.
 Pray be quick, thou Evil One!
 I'll remain no more.
 Pretty tumult there's outside!
 Fare thee well—I'll homeward stride.

THE SATYR AND MY MUSE.

An aged satyr sought
 Around my Muse to pass,
 Attempting to pay court,
 And eyed her fondly through his glass.

By Phœbus' golden torch,
 By Luna's pallid light,
 Around her temple's porch
 Crept the unhappy sharp-ear'd wight;

And warbled many a lay,
 Her beauty's praise to sing,
 And fiercely scrap'd away
 On his discordant fiddle-string.

With tears, too, swell'd his eyes,
 As large as nuts, or larger;
 Ho gasp'd forth heavy sighs,
 Like music from Sileens' charger.

Tho Muse sat still, and play'd
 Within her grotto fair,
 And peevishly survey'd
 Signor Adonis Goatsfoot there.

“Who ever would kiss thee,
 Thou ugly, dirty dunce?
 Wouldst thou a gallant be,
 As Midas was Apollo once?”

“Speak out, old horn'd boor!
 What charms canst thou display?
 Thou'rt swarthy as a Moor,
 And shaggy as a beast of prey.

“I'm by a bard ador'd
 In far Teutonia's land;
 To him, who strikes the chord,
 I'm link'd in firm and loving band.”

THE SATYR AND MY MUSE.

She spoke, and straightway fled
 The spoiler,—he pursued her,
 And, by his passion led,
 Soon caught her, shouted, and thus woo'd her :

“Thou prudish one, stay, stay !
 And hearken unto me !
 Thy poet, I dare say,
 Repents the pledge he gave to thee.

“Behold this pre ty thing,—
 No merit would I claim,—
 Its weight I often fling
 On many a clown's back, to his shame.

“His sharpness it increases,
 And spices his discourse,
 Instilling learned theses,
 When mounted on his hobby-horse.

“The best of songs are known,
 Thanks to this heavy whip ;
 Yet fool's blood 'tis alone
 We see beneath its lashes drip.

“This lash, then shall be his,
 If thou'lt give me a smack ;
 Then thou mayst hasten, miss,
 Upon thy German sweetheart's track.”

The Muse, with purpose sly,
 Ere long agreed to yield—
 The satyr said good-bye,
 And now the lash I wield !

And I wout drop it here,
 Believe in what I say !
 The kisses of one's dear
 One does not lightly throw away.

They kindle raptures sweet,
 But fools ne'er know their flame !
 The gentle Muse will kneel at honor's feet,
 But cudgels those who mar her fame.

THE WINTER NIGHT.

FAREWELL ! the beauteous sun is sinking fast,
 The moon lifts up her head ;
 Farewell ! mute night o'er earth's wide round at last
 Her darksome raven-wing has spread.

Across the wintry plain no echoes float,
 Save, from the rock's deep womb,
 The murmuring streamlet, and the screech-owl's note,
 Arising from the forest's gloom.

The fish repose within the watery deeps,
 The snail draws in his head ;
 The dog beneath the table calmly sleeps,
 My wife is slumb'ring in her bed.

A hearty welcome to ye, brethern mine !
 Friends of my life's young spring !
 Perchance around a flask of Rhenish wine
 Ye're gather'd now, in joyous ring.

The brimming goblet's bright and purple beams
 Mirror the world with joy,
 And pleasure from the golden grape-juice gleams
 Pleasure untainted by alloy.

Conceal'd behind departed years, your eyes
 Find roses now alone ;
 And, as the summer tempest quickly flies,
 Your heavy sorrows, too, are flown.

From childish sports, to e'en the doctor's hood,
 The book of life ye thumb,
 And reckon o'er, in light and joyous mood,
 Your toils in the Gymnasium ;

Ye count the oaths that Terence—may he ne'er,
 Though buried, calmly slumber !—
 Caus'd you, despite Minelli's nets, to swear,—
 Count your wry faces without number.

How, when the dread examinations came,
 The boy with terror shook!
 How, when the rector had pronounced his name,
 The sweat stream'd down upon his brow!

* * *

All this is now involv'd in mist for ever,
 The boy is now a man,
 And Frederick, wiser grown, discloses never
 What little Fritz once lov'd to plan.

At length—a doctor one's declar'd to be,—
 A regimental one *!

And then,—and not too soon,—discover we
 That plans soap bubbles are alone.*

Blow on! blow on! and let the bubbles rise,
 If but this heart remain!
 And if a German laurel as the prize
 Of song, 'tis given me to gain!

---

* An allusion to the appointment of regimental surgeon, conferred upon Schiller by the Grand Duke Charles in 1780, when he was 21 years of age.

APPENDIX;

CONTAINING

TRANSLATIONS OF THE VARIOUS POEMS, ETC.

COMPRISED IN

SCHILLER'S DRAMATIC WORKS.

APPENDIX.

---

THE following variations appear in the first two verses of Hector's Farewell (see page 1), as given in The Robbers, act ii. scene 2.

ANDROMACHE.

WILT thou, Hector, leave me?—leave me weeping,
Where Achilles' murderous blade is heaping
Bloody off'rings on Patroclus' grave?
Who, alas, will teach thine infant truly
Spears to hurl, the gods to honor duly,
When thou'rt buried 'neath dark Xanthus' wave?

HECTOR.

Dearest wife, go,—fetch my death-spear glancing,
Let me join the battle-dance entrancing,
For my shoulders bear the weight of Troy!
Heaven will be our Astyanax' protector!
Falling as his country's savior, Hector
Soon will greet thee in the realms of joy.

---

THE following additional verse is found in Amalia's Song (see page 2), as sung in The Robbers, act iii. scene 1. It is introduced between the first and second verses, as they appear in the Poems.

His embrace—what madd'ning rapture bound us!—
Bosom throb'd 'gainst bosom with wild might;
Mouth and ear were chain'd—night reign'd around us—
And the spirit wing'd tow'rd heaven its flight.

From The Robbers, act iv. scene 5.

CHORUS OF ROBBERS.

What so good for banishing sorrow
As women, tuff and bloody affray?
We must dance in the air to-morrow,
Therefore let's be right merry to-day!

A free and jovial life we've led,
Ever since we began it,
Beneath the tree we make our bed,
We ply our task when the storm's o'erhead
And deem the moon our planet,
The fellow we swear by is Mercury,
A capital hand at our trade is he.

To-day we become the guests of a priest,
A rich farmer to-morrow must feed us;
And as for the future, we care not the least,
But leave it to Heaven to heed us,

And when our throats with a vintage rare
We've long enough been supplying,
Fresh courage and strength we drink in there,
And with the Evil One friendship swear,
Who down in hell is frying.

The groans o'er fathers' rest of breath,
The sorrowing mothers' cry of death,
Deserted brides' sad sobs and tears,
Are sweetest music to our ears.

Hu! when under the axe each one quivering lies,
When they bellow like calves, and fall round us
like flies,
Naught gives such pleasure to our sight,
It fills our ears with wild delight.

And when arrives the fatal day
The devil straight may fetch us!
Our foe we get without delay—
They instantly Jack-Ketch us.
One draught upon the road of liquor bright and clear,
And hip! hip! hurrah! we're seen no longer here!

APPENDIX.

From The Robbers, act iv. scene 5.

MOOR'S SONG.

BRUTUS.

Ye are welcome, peaceful realms of light?
 Oh, receive Rome's last surviving son!
 From Philippi, from the murderous fight,
 Come I now, my race of sorrow run.—
 Cassius, where art thou?—Rome overthrown!
 All my brethern's loving band destroy'd!
 Safety find I at death's door alone,
 And the world to Brutus is a void!

CÆSAR.

Who now, with no'er-subdued-one's tread,
 Hither from you rocks makes hasty to come?—
 Ha! if by no vision I'm misled,
 'Tis the footstep of a child of Rome.—
 Son of Tiber—whence dost thou appear?
 Stands the seven hill'd city as of yore?
 Oft her orphan'd lot awakes my tear,
 For, alas, her Cæsar is no more!

BRUTUS.

Ha! thou with the three-and-twenty wounds?
 Who hath, dead one, summon'd thee to light?
 Back to gaping Orens' fearful bounds,
 Haughty mourner! Triumph not to-night
 On Philippi's iron altar, lo!
 Reeks now Freedom's final victim's blood;
 Rome o'er Brutus' bier feels her death-throe,—
 He seeks Minos.—Back to thy dark flood?

CÆSAR.

Oh, the death-stroke Brutus' sword then hurl'd!
 Thou, too—Brutus—thou? Could this thing be?
 Son!—It was thy father!—Son! The world
 Would have fallen heritage to thee!
 Go—'mongst Romans thou art deem'd immortal,
 For thy steel hath pierc'd thy father's breast.

Go—and about it even to you portal :
 ' Brutus is 'mongst Roman, deem'd immortal, ,
 For his steel hath pierc'd his father's breast ;
 Go—thou know'st now what on the's strand
 Made me as a prisoner stand. —
 Now, grim steersman, push thy bark from land !

BRUTUS.

Father, stay !—In all earth's realms so fair,
 It hath been my lot to know but one,
 Who with mighty Caesar could compare ;
 And of yore thou call'dst him thy son,
 None but Caesar could a Rome o'erthrow,
 Brutus only made great Caesar fear ;
 Where lives Brutus, Caesar's blood must flow ;
 If thy path lies yonder, mine is here.

From Wallenstein's Camp, scene 7.

MICHAEL'S SONG.

How sweet the wild's and
 Of drum and of life !
 To roam o'er earth's round,
 Lead a wandering life,
 With a steady train'd aright,
 And bold for the fight,
 With a sword by the side,
 To rove far and wide,—
 Quick, nimble, and free
 As the finch that we see
 On bushes and trees,
 Or braving the breeze,—
 Huzza, then ! the Friedlander's banner for me !

From Wallenstein's Camp, scene the last.

SECOND CUIRASSIER sings.

Up, up, my brave comrades ! to horse ! to horse !
 Let us haste to the field and to freedom !
 To the field, for 'tis there that is prov'd our heart's force,
 'Tis there that in earnest we need 'em !
 None other can there our places supply.
 Each must stand alone,—on himself must rely.

CHORUS.

None other can there our places supply,
Each must stand alone,—on himself must rely.

DRAGOON.

Now freedom appears from the world to have flown,
None but lords and their vassals one traces;
While falsehood and cunning are ruling alone
O'er the living cowardly races.
The man who can look upon death without fear—
The soldier,—is now the sole freeman left here.

CHORUS.

The man who can look upon death without fear—
The soldier,—is now the sole freeman left here.

FIRST YAGER.

The cares of this life he casts them away,
Untroubled by care or by sorrow;
He rides to his fate with a countenance gay,
And finds it to-day or to-morrow;
And if 'tis to-morrow, to-day we'll employ
To drink full deep of the goblet of joy.

CHORUS.

And if 'tis to-morrow, to-day we'll employ
To drink full deep of the goblet of joy.
[They re-fill their glasses, and drink.]

CAVALRY SERGEANT.

The skies o'er him shower his lot fill'd with mirth,
He gains, without toil, its full measure;
The peasant, who grubs in the womb of the earth,
Believes that he'll find there the treasure.
Through lifetime he shovels and digs like a slave,
And digs—till at length he has dug his own grave,

APPENDIX.

CHORUS.

Through lifetime he shovels and digs like a slave,
And digs—till at length he has dug his own grave.

FIRST YAGER.

The horse man, as well as his swift-footed beast,
Are guests by whom all are afrighted.
When glimmer the lamps at the wedding feast,
In the banquet he joins uninvited;
He woe's not long, and with gold he ne'er buys,
But carries by storm love's blissful prize.

CHORUS.

He woe's not long, and with gold he ne'er buys,
But carries by storm love's blissful prize.

SECOND CURASSIER.

Why weeps the maiden? Why sorrows she so?
Let me hence, let me hence, girl, I pray thee?
The soldier on earth no sure quarters can know;
With true love he ne'er can repay thee.
Fate hurries him onward with fury blind,
His peace he never can leave behind.

CHORUS.

Fate hurries him onward with fury blind,
His peace he never can leave behind.

FIRST YAGER.

(Taking his two neighbors by the hand. The rest do the same, forming a large semicircle.)

Away, then, my comrades, our chargers let's mount!
In the battle the bosom bounds lightly!
Youth boils, and life's goblet still foams at the fount.

APPENDIX.

Away ! while the spirit glows brightly !
 Unless ye have courage your life to stake,
 That life ye never your own can make !

CHORUS.

Unless ye have courage your life to stake,
 That life ye never your own can make.

From William Tell, act i. scene 1.

SCENE—The high rocky shore of the Lake of Lucerne, opposite Schwytz.

The Lake forms an inlet in the land ; a cottage is near the shore ; a Fisher-boy is rowing in a boat. Beyond the Lake are seen the green pastures, the villages, and farms of Schwytz, glowing in the sunshine. On the left of the Spectator are the peaks of the Hacken, enveloped in clouds ; on his right, in the distance, are seen the glaciers. Before the curtain rises, the RANZ DES VACHES and the musical sound of the cattle-bells are heard, and continue also for some time after the scene opens.

FISHER-BOY (sings in his boat).

AIR—Ranz des Vaches.

BRIGHT smiles the lake, as it woos to its deep,—
 A boy on its margin of green lies asleep ;
 Then hears he a strain,
 Like the flute's gentle note,
 Sweet as voices of angels
 In Eden that float.
 And when he awakens, with ecstasy blest,
 The waters are playing all over his breast.
 From the depths calls a voice :
 "Dearest child, with me go !
 I lure down the sleeper,
 I draw him below."

HERDSMAN (on the mountain).

Air—Variation of the Ranz des Vaches.

Ye meadows, farewell !
Ye pastures so glowing !
The herdsman is going,
For summer has fled !

We depart to the mountain ; we'll come back again,
When the cuckoo is calling,—when wakens the strain,—
When the earth is trick'd out with her flowers so gay,
When the stream sparkles bright in the sweet month of May.

Ye meadows, farewell !
Ye pastures so glowing !
The herdsman is going,
For summer has fled !

CHAMOIS-HUNTER (appearing on the top of a rock).

Air—Second Variation of the Ranz des Vaches.

O'er the heights growls the thunder, while quivers the bridge,
Yet no fear feels the hunter, though dizzy the ridge ;
He strides undaunted,
O'er plains icy-bound,
Where spring never blossoms,
Nor verdure is found ;
And, a broad sea of mist lying under his feet,
Man's dwellings his vision no longer can greet ;
The world he but views
When the clouds broken are,—
With its pastures so green,
Through the vapor afar,

From William Tell, act iii, scene 1.

WALKER sings:

Bow and arrow bearing
Over hills and streams
Moves the hunter daring,
Soon as daylight gleams.

As all flying creatures
Own the eagle's sway,
So the hunter, nature's Mounts and crags obey.

Over space he reigneth,
And he makes his prize
All his bolt attaineth,
All that creeps or flies.

---

From William Tell, act iv, scene 3.

CHORUS OF BROTHERS OF MERCY.

DEATH comes to man with hasty stride,
No respite is to him e'er given ;
He's stricken down in manhood's pride,
E'en in mid race from earth he's driven,
Prepar'd, or not, to go from here,
Before his Judge he must appear !

---

From Turandot, act ii, scene 1.

RIDDLE.

THE tree whereon decay
All those from mortals sprung,—
Full old, and yet whose spray
Is ever green and young ;

APPENDIX.

To catch the light, it rolls
Each leaf upon one side ;
The other, black as coals,
The sun has ne'er described

It places on new rings
As often as it blows ;
The age, too, of all things
To mortal gaze it shows.
Upon its bark so green
A name oft meets the eye,
Yet 'tis no longer seen,
When it grows old and dry.
This tree—what can it mean ?
I wait for thy reply.*

---

From Mary Stuart, act iii, scene 1.

SCENE.—A Park. MARY advances hastily from behind some trees. HANNAH KENNEDY follows her slowly.

MARY.

Let me my newly-won liberty taste !
Let me rejoice as a child once again !
And as on pinions, with airy foot haste
Over the tapestried green of the plain !
Have I escap'd from my prison so drear ?
Shall I no more in my sad dungeon pine ?
Let me in long and in thirsty draughts here
Drink in the breezes, so free, so divine !

* * * * *

Thanks, thanks, ye trees, in smiling verdure dress'd,
In that ye veil my prison-walls from sight !
I'll dream that I am free and blest :
Why should I waken from a dream so bright ?
Do not the spacious heavens encompass me ?
Behold ! my gaze, unshackled, free,

---

* The year.

Pierces with joy the trackless realms of light !
 There, where the grey-ting'd hills of mist project,
 My kingdom's boundaries I begin ;
 Yon clouds, that tow'rd the south their course direct.
 France's far-distant ocean seek to win.

Swift-flying clouds, hardy sailors through air !
 Mortal hath roam'd with ye, sail'd with ye, ne'er .
 Greetings of love to my youthful home bear !
 I am a prisoner, I am in chains,
 Ah, not a herald, save ye, now remains !
 Free through the air hath your path ever been,
 Ye are not subject to England's proud queen !

* * * * *

Yonder's a fisherman trimming his boat,
 E'en that frail skiff from all danger might tear me,
 And to the dwellings of friends might bear me.
 Scarcely his earnings can keep life afloat.
 Richly with treasures his lap I'd heap over,—
 Oh ! what a draught should reward him to-day !
 Fortune held fast in his nets he'd discover,
 If in his bark he would take me away !

* * * * *

Hear'st thou the horn of the hunter resound,
 Wak'ning the echo through forest and plain ?
 Ah, on my spirited courser to bound !
 Once more to join in the mirth-stirring train !
 Hark ! how the dearly-lov'd tones come again !
 Blissful, yet sad, the remembrance they wake ;
 Oft have they fallen with joy on mine ear,
 When in the highlands the bugle rang clear,
 Rousing the chase over mountain and brake.

---

From The Maid of Orleans, Prologue, scene 4.

JOAN OF ARC (soliloquizing).

FAREWELL, ye mountains, and ye pastures dear
 Ye still and happy valleys, fare ye well !
 No longer may Joan's footsteps linger here !
 Joan bids ye now a long, a last farewell !

APPENDIX.

Ye me down that I water'd, and each bush
Set by my hands, ne'er may your verdure fall!
Farewell, ye grots, ye springs, that cooling gush!
Thou echo, blissful voice of this sweet vale,
So wont to give me back an answering strain,—
Jean must depart, and ne'er return again!

Ye haunts of all my silent joys of old,
I leave ye now behind for evermore!
Disperse, ye lambs, far o'er the trackless wold!
She now hath gone who tended you of yore!
I must away to guard another fold.
On yonder field of danger, stain'd with gore,
Thus am I bidden by a spirit's tone:
'Tis no vain earthly longing drives me on.

For he who erst to Moses on the height
Of Horeb, in the fiery bush came down,
And bade him stand in haughty Pharaoh's sight,—
He who made choice of Jesse's pious son,
The shepherd, as his champion in the fight,—
He who to shepherds grace hath ever shown,—
He thus address'd me from this lofty tree:
"Go hence! On earth my witness thou shalt be!

"In rugged brass, then, clothe thy members now,
In steel thy gentle bosom must be dress'd!
No mortal love thy heart must e'er allow,
With earthly passion's sinful flame possess'd.
No'er will the bridal wreath adorn thy brow,
No darling infant blossom on thy breast;
Yet thou with warlike honors shalt be laden,
Raising the high above each earthly maiden.

"For when the bravest in the fight despair,
When France appears to wait her final blow,
Then thou my holy Orillamme must bear;
And, as the ripen'd corn the reapers mow,
How down the conqueror as he triumphs there;
His fortune's wheel thou thus wilt overthrow,
To France's hero-sons salvations bring,
Deliver Rheims once more, and crown thy king!

APPENDIX.

The Lord hath promis'd to send down a sign :

A helmet He hath sent, it comes from Him,—
His sword endows mine arm with strength divine,
I feel the courage of the cherubim ;
To join the battle-turmoil how I pine !

A raging tempest thrills through ev'ry limb ;
The summons to the field bursts on mine ear,
My charger paws the ground, the trump rings clear.

---

From The Maid of Orleans, act iv, scene 1.

SCENE—A hall prepared for a festival.

The pillars are covered with festoons of flowers; flutes and hautboys are heard behind the scene.

JOAN OF ARC (soliloquizing).

EACH weapon rests, war's tumults cease to sound,
While dance and song succeed the bloody fray ;
Through ev'ry street the merry footsteps bound,
Altar and church are clad in bright array,
And gates of branches green arise around,
Over the columns twine the garlands gay ;
Rheims cannot hold the ever-swelling train
That seeks the nation-festival to gain.

All with one joyous feeling are elate,
One single thought is thrilling ev'ry breast ;
What, until now, was sever'd by fierce hate,
Is by the general rapture truly bless'd.
By each who call'd this land his parent-state,
The name of Frenchman proudly is confess'd ;
Tho' glory is reviv'd of olden days,
And to her regal son France homage pays.

Yet I who have achiev'd this work of pride,
I cannot share the rapture felt by all ;
My heart is chang'd, my heart is turn'd aside,
It shuns the splendor of this festival ;
'Tis in the British camp it seeks to hide,—
'Tis on the foe my yearning glances fall ;

APPENDIX.

And from the joyous circle I must steal,
My bosom's crime o'erpowering to conceal.

Who? I? What! in my bosom chaste
Can mortal's image have a seat?
This heart, by heav'nly glory graced,—
Dares it with earthly love to beat?
The savior of my country, I,—
The champion of the Lord Most High,
Own for my country's foe a flame—
To the chaste sue my guilt proclaim,
And not be crush'd beneath my shame?

(The music behind the scene changes into a soft, melting melody.)

Woe! oh woe! what strains entralling!
How bewildering to mine ear!
Each his voice belov'd recalling,
Charming up his image dear!

Would that battle-tempests bound me!
Would that spears were whizzing round me
In the hotly-raging strife!
Could my courage find fresh life!

How those tones, those voices blest
Coil around my bosom burning!
All the strength within my breast
Melting into tender yearning,
Into tears of sadness turning!

* * *

The flutes are again heard—she falls into a silent melancholy.)

Gentle crook! oh that I never
For the sword had barter'd thee!
Sacred oak! why didst thou ever
From thy branches speak to me?
Would that Thou to me in splendor,
Queen of heav'n, hadst ne'er come down!
Take—all claim I must surrender,—
Take, oh take away thy crown!

APPENDIX.

Ah, I open saw yon heaven,
Saw the features of the blest !
Yet to earth my hopes are riven,
In the skies they ne'er can rest !
Wherefore make me ply with ardor
This vocation, terror-fraught ?
Would this heart were render'd harder—
That by heaven to feel was taught !

To proclaim Thy might sublime
Those select, who, free from crime
In Thy lasting mansions stard ;
Send Thou forth Thy spirit-band,
The Immortal, and the Pure,
Feelingless, from tears secure !
Never choose a maiden fair,
Shepherdess' weak spirit ne'er !

Kings' dissensions wherefore dread .
Why thine fortune of the fight ?
Guilelessly my lambs once fed I
On the silent mountain-height.
Yet Thou into life didst bear me,
To the halls where monarchs throne.
In the toils of guilt to snare me—
Ah, the choice was not mine own !

THE END.

The sun now sinks to rest,—hot burns the fight,
While o'er the armies broods the murky light.

God be with ye, comrades brave,—
We shall meet beyond the grave!

The life blood in torrents spurts high as the head,
The living confusedly mix with the dead;
The foot as it moves stumbles over the slain,
While the conflict 'gins raging more wildly again.
'What, Frank! And thou, too?'—"Kiss my Charlotte for me!"

"Aye, Frank, that I will! . . . Good God! Comrades, <sup>see, see,</sup>

"How the grapeshot bursts full on our rear!

" . . . I will kiss her for thee! Now in peace slumber
on,

"While I, left, alas! in the world all-alone,
"Stalk the fast-falling bills without fear."

Now hither, and now thither bends the fight,
Still murkier o'er the armies broods the night

God be with ye, comrades brave,—
We shall meet beyond the grave!

What means this sudden trampling sound?
The Adjutants are flying round,
Dragoons are rattling 'gainst the foe,
Whose thund'ring guns are lying low,
While they in all directions fly,—
Hurrah, my Comrades, Victory!
Their coward limbs in terror shrink,
And down their boasting banners sink!

Decided is the fearful fight,
The day gleams brightly through the night!
And hark, how triumphantly rise on the ear
The roll of the drum and the life's note so clear!

Farewell, ye perish'd comrades brave,—
Oh, we shall meet beyond the grave!

ROUSSEAU.

MONUMENT of our own Age's shame,
 On thy Country casting endless blame,
 Rousseau's Grave, how dear thou art to me !
 Calm repose to be to thy ashes blest !
 In thy life thou vainly sought'st for rest,
 But at length 'twas here obtained by thee !

When will ancient wounds be covered o'er ?
 Wise men died in heathen days of yore ;
 Now 'tis lighter—yet they die again.
 Socrates was killed by Sophists vile,
 Rousseau meets his death through Christians' wile,— Rousseau—who would fain make Christians men !

FRIENDSHIP.

FROM THE "LETTERS OF JULIUS TO RAPHAEL;" AN UNPUBLISHED ROMANCE.

TEMPERATE is the Being-Ruler, Friend !—
 On those Thinkers mean let shame attend
 Who so anxiously seek Laws to solve !
 Living-Worlds, and Regions of the Soul
 On one Flywheel, tow'rd their limit roll ;
 Here my Newton saw that Wheel revolve !

Spheres,—the slaves of but one rein,—it tells Round the mighty world's heart, as it swells,
 Labyrinthine paths to cause to rise—
 Spirits in entwining Systems laced,
 Tow'rd the mighty Spirit-Sun to haste,
 As the stream to join the ocean flies.

Was't not this Machinery divine,
 That compell'd our Bosoms to entwine
 In the blest and endless bonds of Love ?
 Raphael, on thine Arm—oh, ecstasy !
 Tow'rd that mighty Spirit-Sun, e'en I
 On Perfection's path would gladly rove.

Joy, oh, Joy ! 'Thou now art found by me.
 I, of millions, have embraced but thee,
 And, of millions, mine art thou alone—
 Let this world in Chaos still be lost,
 Atoms in confusion wild be tost,
 Into one our Hearts for aye have flown !

Must not I, from out thy flaming gaze,
 Of my Rapture seek the answering rays ?
 'Tis in thine alone myself I view—
 Fairer still appears the earth so fair,
 Brighter in the Loved One's features there
 Heaven is mirror'd,—of more dazzling hue.

Sweeter from the Passions' storm to rest,
 Melancholy casts upon Love's breast
 All the burden of her tearful gloom ;
 Does not e'en tormenting Rapture seek,
 In thine eyes that eloquently speak,
 Eagerly to find a blissful tomb ?

Stood I in creation all alone,
 Spirits I would dream into each stone,
 And their forms with kisses then would greet,—
 When my wailings echoed far and wide,
 Would be happy if the rocks replied,
 Fool, enough ! to sympathy so sweet.

Lifeless groups are we, if hate we prove,
 Gods—if we embrace in kindly love !
 While we languish for the Fetters blest—
 Upwards through the thousand-varying scale
 Of unnumber'd Souls that nought avail,
 Does this godlike impulse raise the breast.

Arm in arm, tow'rd some still higher sphere,
 From the Mongol to the Grecian seer,
 Who is with the last of seraphs bound,
 Roam we on, in dancing orbit bright,
 Till in yonder Sea of endless light
 Time and Measure evermore are drown'd !

Friendless was the Mighty Lord of Earth,
 Felt a Want—so gave the Spirit birth,
 Mirror blest where His own glories shine !—
 Ne'er his Like has found that Being high,— Nought o'er gushes—save Infinity—
 From the Spirit-Region's Cup Divine !

---

GROUP FROM TARTARUS.

Hark ! Like the sea in wrath tho Heav'ns assailing,
 Or like a brook through rocky basin wailing,
 Comes from below in groaning agony,
 A heavy, vacant, torment-breathing sigh !

Their faces marks of bitter torture wear,
 While from their lips burst curses of despair ;
 Their eyes are hollow, and full of woe,
 And their looks with heartfelt anguish
 Seek Cocytus' stream that runs wailing below,
 For the bridge o'er its waters they languish.

And they say to each other in accents of fear,
 "Oh, when will the time of Fulfilment appear ?"
 High over them boundless Eternity quivers,
 And the scythe of Saturnus all-ruthlessly shivers !

---

ELYSIUM.

Those groans of deep anguish no longer resound,
 Each accent of sorrow, each sigh, is now drown'd
 In Elysium's banquets so bright ;
 In bliss never-ending, in rapturous song,
 As when through the meadows a brook sings along,
 Elysium's days take their flight.

A May-day enduring, a ne'er changing spring
 All gently its youthful and balm-laden wing
 Waves over the sweet smiling plain ;
 In visions ecstasie the days fleet apace,
 The Spirit expands through the wide realms of space,
 And Truth rends the Cov'ring in twain.

'Tis here that the bosom is swelling alone,
 With rapture eternal and free from alloy ;
 The name of affliction is here e'er unknown,
 And sorrow means nought but a more tranquil joy.

The pilgrim beneath these cool shades lays to rest
 His feverish limbs by long wand'ring oppress,
 His burden behind him for ever he leaves ;
 The sickle escapes from the hand of the reaper,
 And, lulled by the harp's strains seraphic, the sleeper
 Beholds in his vision the harvest's ripe sheaves.

He whose banner war's fierce thunder woke,
 On whose ears the din of slaughter broke,
 'Neath whose foot the mountain quak'd in fear,
 Slumbers calmly by the streamlet's side,
 While its silvery waters onward glide,
 And forgets his wildly-clanging spear.

Here all faithful lovers meet again,
 Kiss each other on the verdant plain,
 Scented by the balmy zephyr's breath ;
 Love here finds once more his crown of gold,
 'Gins his endless marriage feast to hold,
 Safe for ever from the stroke of Death !

---

THE FUGITIVE.

The air is perfum'd with the morning's fresh breeze,
 From the bush peer the sunbeams all purple and
 bright,
 While they gleam through the clefts of the dark-waving trees,
 And the cloud-crested mountains are golden with light.

With joyful, melodious, ravishing strain,
 The lark, as he wakens, salutes the glad sun,
 Who glows in the arms of Aurora again,
 And blissfully smiling, his race 'gins to run.

All hail, light of day !
 Thy sweet gushing ray
 Pours down its soft warmth over pasture and field ;
 With hues silver-tinged
 The Meadows are fringed,
 And numberless suns in the dewdrop reveal'd.

Young Nature invades
 The whispering shades,
 Displaying each ravishing charm ;
 The soft zephyr blows,
 And kisses the rose,
 The plain is sweet-scented with balm.

How high from yon city the smoke-clouds ascend !
 Their neighing, and snorting, and bellowing blend.

The horses and cattle ;
 The chariot-wheels rattle
 As down to the valley they take their mad way ;
 And even the forest with life seems to move,
 The eagle, and falcon, and hawk soar above,
 And flutter their pinions in Heaven's bright ray.

In search of repose
 From my heart-rending woes,
 Oh, where shall my sad spirit flee ?
 The earth's smiling face,
 With its sweet youthful grace,
 A tomb must, alas, be for me !

Arise, then, thou sunlight of morning, and fling
 O'er plain and o'er forest thy purple-dyed beams
 Thou twilight of evening, all noiselessly sing
 In melody soft to the world as it dreams !

Ah ; sunlight of morning, to me thou but flingest
 Thy purple-dyed beams o'er the grave of the past !
 Ah, twilight of evening, thy strains thou but singest
 To one whose deep slumbers for ever must last !

THE FLOWERS.

Ye offspring of the morning sun,
 Ye flowers that deck the smiling plain,
 Your lives, in joy and bliss begun,
 In Nature's love unchanged remain.
 With hues of bright and godlike splendor
 Sweet Flora graced your forms so tender,
 And clothed ye in a garb of light;
 Spring's lovely children, weep for ever,
 For living Souls she gave ye never,
 And ye must dwell in endless night!

The nightingale and the lark still sing
 In your tranced ears the bliss of love;
 The toying sylphs, on airy wing,
 Around your fragrant bosoms rove.
 Of yore, Dione's daughter* twining
 In garlands sweet your cup so shining,
 A pillow form'd where love might rest!
 Spring's gentle children mourn for ever,
 The joys of love she gave you never,
 Ne'er let ye know that feeling blest!

But when ye're gather'd by my hand,
 A token of my love to be,
 Now that her mother's harsh command
 From Nanny's† sight has banished me,— E'en from that passing touch ye borrow
 Those heralds mute of pleasing sorrow,
 Life, language, hearts and souls divine;
 And to your silent leaves 'tis given,
 By him who mightiest is in Heaven,
 His glorious Godhead to enshrine.

* Venus.

† Originally Laura, this having been one of the "Laura-Poems," as the Germans call them, of which so many appeared in the Anthology (see preface). English readers will probably not think that the change is for the better.

ODE TO SPRING.

Thou'rt welcome, lovely stripling !
 Thou Nature's fond delight !
 With thy basket filled with flowers,
 'Thou'rt welcome to my sight !

Huzza ! once more we greet thee !
 How fair and sweet thou art !
 To usher in thy presence
 We haste with joyful heart !

Remembers't thou my Maiden ?
 Thou never eanst forget !
 My Maiden lov'd me dearly,—
 My Maiden loves me yet !

For my Maiden many a flow'ret
 I begg'd of yore from thee—
 Once more I make entreaty,
 And thou ?—thou giv'st them me !

Thou'rt welcome, lovely stripling !
 Thou Nature's fond delight !
 With thy basket fill'd with flowers,
 Thou'rt welcome to my sight !

---

TO MINNA.

Am I dreaming ? Is mine eye
 Dimm'd by some deceiving ray ?
 Is't my Minna passing by,
 Turning her cold look away ?
 She, who vain of each fair charm,
 Fans herself so haughtily,
 Leaning on some fopling's arm,— Is't my Minna ?—'Tis not she !

On her light hat, feathers proud,
 Once my gift, are waving yet ;
 While her breast-knots cry aloud,
 Saying : " Minna, ne'er forget !"
 Flowers still grace her breast, her brow,
 Foster'd by my loving care ;
 Ah, that breast is faithless now,—
 Yet those flowers still blossom there !

Go ! Ador'd by empty wits,
 Go ? Without a thought of me
 Prey to venal hypocrites—
 Scorn is all I feel for thee !
 Go ! for thee once throbb'd a heart
 Fill'd with stainless purity,
 Great enough to bear the smart
 That it throbb'd for such as thee !

'Tis by beauty thou'rt betray'd—
 By thy features, shameless one !
 But their roses soon will fade,
 Soon their transient charms be gone !
 Swallows that in spring-time play,
 Fly when north winds cold return ;
 Age will scare thy wooers gay
 Yet a friend thou now canst spurn !

Ah ! methinks I hear thee sigh,
 Wreck of what thou once hast been,
 Looking back with streaming eye
 To thy May-day's flowery scene.
 They who once thy kisses sought,
 On the wings of rapture borne,
 Make thy vanish'd youth their sport,
 Laugh thy winter sad to scorn.

'Tis by beauty thou'rt betray'd—
 By thy features, shameless one !
 But their roses soon will fade,
 Soon thy transient charms be gone !
 How I then will scoff and jeer !—
 Scoff ? Great Heavens ! oh, pardon me !
 I will weep full many a tear—
 Tears of anguish weep for thee !

THE TRIUMPH OF LOVE.

A HYMN.

By Love are blest the Gods on high,
 Frail man becomes a Deity
     When Love to him is given ;
 'Tis Love that makes the Heavens shine
 With hues more radiant, more divine,
     And turns dull Earth to Heaven !

In Pyrrha's rear (so poets sang
     In ages past and gone),
 The world from rocky fragment sprang—
     Mankind from lifeless stone.

Their soul was but a thing of night,
     Like stone and rock their heart ;
 The flaming torch of Heav'n so bright
     Its glow could ne'er impart.

Young Loves, all gently hov'ring round,
 Their souls as yet had never bound
     In soft and rosy chains ;
 No feeling Muse had sought to raise
 Their bosoms with ennobling lays,
     Or sweet, harmonious strains.

Around each other lovingly
     No garlands then entwin'd ;
 Tho' sorrowing Springs fled tow'rd the sky,
     And left the Earth behind.

From out the sea Aurora rose
     With none to hail her then ;
 The sun unhail'd, at daylight's close,
     In ocean sank again.

In forests wild, man went astray,
 Misled by Luna's cloudy ray,—
     He bore an iron yoke ;

He pin'd not for the stars on high,
 With yearning for a Deity
 No tears in torrents broke.

* * * *

But see ! from out the deep-blue Ocean
 Fair Venus springs with gentle motion ;
 The graceful Naiad's smiling band
 Conveys her to the gladden'd strand.

A May-like, youthful, Magic power
 Entwines, like morning's twilight hour,
 Around that form of godlike birth,
 The charms of air, sea, heaven, and earth.

The day's sweet eye begins to bloom
 Across the forest's midnight gloom ;
 Narcissuses, their balm distilling,
 The path her footstep treads are filling

A song of Love sweet Philomel
 Soon caroll'd through the grove ;
 The streamlet, as it murmuring fell,
 Discours'd of nought but Love.

Pygmalion ! Happy one ! Behold !
 Life's glow pervades thy marble cold !
 Oh, Love, thou conqueror all-divine,
 Embrace each happy child of thine !

* * * *

By Love are blest the Gods on high,—
 Frail man becomes a Deity
 When Love to him is given ;
 'Tis Love that makes the Heavens shine
 With hues more radiant, more divine,
 And turns dull Earth to Heaven !

* * * *

The Gods their days for ever spend
 In banquets bright that have no end,—
 In one voluptuous morning-dream,
 And quaff the Nectar's golden stream.

Enthron'd in awful Majesty,
 Kronion wields the bolt on high;
 In abject fear Olympus rocks
 When wrathfully he shakes his locks.

To other Gods he leaves his throne,
 And fills, disguis'd as Earth's frail son,
 The grove with mournful numbers;
 The thunders rest beneath his feet,
 And lull'd by Leda's kisses sweet,
 The Gant-Slayer slumbers.

Through the boundless realms of light
 Phoebus' golden reins, so bright,
 Guide his horses white as snow,
 While his darts lay Nations low.
 But when Love and Harmony
 Fill his breast, how willingly
 Ceases Phoebus then to heed
 Rattling dart and snow-white steed!

See! Before Kronion's spouse
 Every great Immortal bows;
 Proudly soar the peacock pair
 As her chariot thro' them they bear,
 While she decks with crown of night
 Her ambrosial tresses bright.

Beautiful Princess, ah! with fear
 Quakes, before thy splendor, Love,
 Seeking, as he ventures near,
 With his power thy breast to mere!
 Seen from her immortal throne
 Heaven's great Queen must fain descend,
 And in prayer for Beauty's rose,
 To the Heart-Enchainer bend!

By Love are blest the Gods on high,
 Frail man becomes a Deity
 When Love to him is given ;
 'Tis Love that makes the Heavens shine
 With hues more radiant, more divine,
 And turns dull Earth to Heaven !

* * * *

'Tis Love illumines the realms of Night,
 For Orcus dark obeys his night,
 And bows before his magic spell ;
 All-kindly looks the King of Hell
 At Ceres' daughter's smile so bright,—
 Yes—Love illumines the realms of Night !

In Hell were heard, with heavenly sound,
 Holding in chains its warder bound,
 Thy lays, O Thracian one !
 A gentler doom dread Minos pass'd,
 While down his cheeks the tears cours'd fast
 And e'en around Megæra's face
 The serpents twin'd in fond embrace,
 The lashes' work seem'd done.
 Driven by Orphens' lyre away,
 The Vulture left his Giant-prey ;*
 With gentler motion roll'd along
 Dark Lethe and Cocytus' River,
 Enraptur'd, Thracian, by thy song,—
 And Love its burden was for ever !

* * * *

By Love are blest the Gods on high,
 Frail man becomes a Deity
 When Love to him is given ;
 'Tis Love that makes the Heavens shine
 With hues more radiant, more divine,
 And turns dull Earth to Heaven !

* * * *

Wherever Nature's sway extends,
 The fragrant balm of Love descends,
 His golden pinions quiver ;
 If 'twere not Venus' eye that gleams
 Upon me in the moon's soft beams,
 In sun-lit hill or river,—
 If 'twere not Venus smiles on me
 From yonder bright and starry sea,
 Not stars, not sun, not moonbeams sweet
 Could make my heart with rapture beat.
 'Tis Love alone that smilingly
 Peers forth from Nature's blissful eye,
 As from a mirror ever !

Love bids the silv'ry streamlet roll
 More gently as it sighs along,
 And breathes a living, feeling Soul
 In Philomel's sweet plaintive song ;
 'Tis Love alone that fills the air
 With strains from Nature's lute so fair.

Thou Wisdom with the glance of fire,
 Thou mighty Goddess, now retire,
 Love's power thou now must feel !
 To victor proud, to monarch high,
 Thou ne'er hadst knelt in slavery, —
 To Love thou now must kneel !
 Who taught thee boldly how to climb
 The steep, but starry path sublime,
 And reach the seats immortal ?

Who rent the myrtle Veil for Leda,
 And showed thee the Elysian plain
 Beyond Death's gloomy portal ?
 If Love had been a God from his throne
 Had we gain'd Immortality ?
 If Love had not been a God each thought,
 Had we the Master spirit within ?
 'Tis Love that guides the Soul divine
 To Nature's Father's heavenly throne !

By Love are blest the Gods on high,
 Foul man becomes a Deity
 When Love to him is given;
 'Tis Love that makes the Heavens shine
 With hues more radiant, more divine,
 And turns dull Earth to Heaven !

FORTUNE AND WISDOM.

Entered against a quondam friend,
 To Wisdom once proud Fortune said :
 " I'll give thee treasures without end,
 " If thou wilt be my friend instead.

" My choicest gifts to him I gave,
 " And ever blest him with my smile ;
 " And yet he ceases not to crave,
 " And calls me niggard all the while.

" Come, Sister, let us friendship vow !
 " So take the money, nothing loth ;
 " Why always labor at the plough ?
 " Here is enough, I'm sure, for both !

Sage Wisdom laugh'd,—the prudent elf !—
 And wip'd her brow, with moisture hot :
 " There runs thy friend to hang himself,—
 " Be reconcil'd—I need thee not ! "

TO A MORALIST.

Woe teach that Love is nought but Trifling vain ?—
 Why cavil at our youthful joyous play ?
 Thou art benumb'd in Winter's icy chain,
 And yet canst view with scorn the golden May !

When erst thou didst assail the Nymph's bright charms,
 A Hero of the Carnival,—didst trip
 In German Waltz,—held'st Heaven within thine arms,
 And from the lips of Maidens balm didst sip,—

Ha, Seladon ! if then Earth's pond'rous ball
 Had from its axis slipp'd with mighty groan,
 Thine ears would not have heard the heavy fall,
 In Love-knot twin'd with Julia into one !

Oh, look back now upon thy rosy days !
 Learn that Philosophy degenerates,
 E'en as the pulse with feebler motion plays ;
 Thy knowledge, man Immortal ne'er creates.

'Tis well when, through the ice of Sense refin'd,
 The fervent blood more fiercely can expand ;
 What ne'er can be accomplish'd by mankind,
 Leave to the inmates of a better Land !

And yet in prison walls the Guide of Earth
 Confines the Soul whose life in Heaven began ;
 He will not let me rise to Angel-worth,—
 I fain would follow him, to be a Man !

COUNT EBERHARD, THE GROANER OF WURTEMBERG.

A WAR SONG.

Now hearken, ye who take delight
 In boasting of your worth !
 To many a man, to many a knight,
 Belov'd in peace and brave in fight,
 The Swabian land gives birth.

Of Charles and Edward, Louis, Guy,
 And Frederick, ye may boast ;
 Charles, Edward, Louis, Frederick, Guy,—
 None with Sir Eberhard can vie,—
 Himself a mighty host !

And then young Ulerick, his son,
 Ha ! how he loved the fray !
 Young Ulerick, the Count's bold son

When once the battle had begun,
No foot's-breadth e'er gave way.

The Rentlingers, with gnashing teeth;
Saw our bright ranks reveal'd;
And, panting for the victor's wreath,
They drew the sword from out the sheath,
And sought the battle-field.

He charged the foe,—but fruitlessly,—
Then, mail-clad, homeward sped;
Stern anger fill'd his father's eye,
And made the youthful warrior fly,
And tears of anguish shed.

Now, rascals, quake!—This grieved him sore,
And rankled in his brain;
And by his father's beard he swore,
With many a craven townsman's gore
To wash out this foul stain.

Ere long the feud raged fierce and loud,—
Then hasten'd steed and man
To Döslingen in thronging crowd,
While joy inspir'd the youngster proud,—
And soon the strife began.

Our army's signal-word that day
Was the disastrous light;
It spur'd us on like lightning's ray,
And plunged us deep in bloody fray,
And in the spears' black night.

'The youthful Count his pond'rous mace
With lion's rage swung round;
Destruction stalk'd before his face,
While groans and howlings fill'd the place,
And hundreds bit the ground.

'Woe! Woe! A heavy sabre-stroke
Upon his neck descended;
The sight each warrior's pity woke—
In vain! In vain! No word he spoke—
His course on earth was ended.

Loud wept both friend and foeman then,
 Check'd was the victor's glow ;
 The Count cheer'd thus his Knights again—
 “ My Son is like all other men,—
 “ March, children, 'gainst the Foe ! ”

With greater fury whizz'd each lance,
 Revenge inflam'd the blood ;
 O'er corpses mov'd the fearful dance—
 The townsmen fled in random chance
 O'er mountain, vale and flood.

Then back to camp, with trumpets' bray,
 We hied in joyful haste ;
 And wife and child, with roundelay,
 With clanging cup, and waltzes gay,
 Our glorious triumph graced.

And our old Count,—what now does he ?
 His son lies dead before him ;
 Within his tent all woefully
 He sits alone in agony,
 And drops one hot tear o'er him.

And so, with true affection warm,
 The Count our Lord we love ;
 Himself a mighty hero-swarm—
 The thunders rest within his arm—
 He shines like star above !

Farewell, then, ye who take delight
 In boasting of your worth !
 To many a man, to many a knight,
 Belov'd in peace, and brave in fight,
 The Swabian land gives birth !

SEMELE:

IN TWO SCENES.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

JUNO.

SEMELE, Princess of Thebes.

JUPITER.

MERCURY.

SCENE—The Palace of Cadmus at Thebes.

SCENE I.

JUNO. (Descending from her chariot, enveloped in a cloud.) Away, ye Peacocks, with my winged car!
 Upon Cithæron's cloud-capp'd summit wait!

[The chariot and cloud vanish.]

Hail, hail, thou House of my undying anger!
 A fearful hail to thee, thou hostile roof,
 Ye hated walls!—This, this, then, is the place
 Where Jupiter pollutes his marriage bed
 Even before the face of modest day!
 'Tis here, then, that a woman, a frail mortal,
 A dust-created being, dares to lure
 The mighty Thunderer from out mine arms,
 And hold him prisoner against her lips!

Juno! Juno! thought of madness!
 Thou all lonely and in sadness,
 Standest now on Heaven's bright throne!
 Though the votive smoke ascendeth,
 Though each knee in homage bendeth,
 What are they when Love has flown?

To humble, alas, each too-haughty emotion
That swell'd my proud breast, from the foam of the ocean

Fair Venus arose, to enehant Gods and men !
And the Fates my still-deeper abasement decreeing,
Her offspring Hermione brought into being,
And the bliss once mine own can ne'er glad me again !

Amongst the Gods do I not reign the Queen ?
Am I not Sister of the Thunderer ?
Am I not wife of Zeus the Lord of All ?
Groans not the mighty axis of the Heav'n's
At my command ? Gleams not Olympus' crown
Upon my head ? Ha ! now I feel myself !
In my immortal veins is Kronos' blood,
Right royally now swells my god-like heart.
Revenge ! revenge !
Shall she unpunish'd ridicule my might ?
Unpunish'd, discord roll amongst the Gods,
Inviting Eris to invade the courts,
The joyous courts of Heav'n ? Vain, thoughtless one !
Perish, and learn upon the Stygian stream
The difference 'twixt divine and earthly dust !
Thy giant-armor, may it weigh thee down,—
Thy passion for a God to atoms crush thee !
Armed with revenge, as with a coat of mail,
I have descended from Olympus' heights,
Devising sweet, ensnaring, flatt'ring words ;
But in those words, death and destruction lurk.
Hark ! 'tis her footstep ! she approaches now,—
Approaches ruin and a certain death !
Veil thyself, Goddess, in a mortal form !

[Exit.

SEMELE. (Calling behind the scenes.)
The sun is fast declining ! Maidens, haste,
Scatter ambrosial fragrance through the hall,
Strew roses and narcissus-flowers around,
Forgetting not the gold embroider'd pillow.
He comes not yet—the sun is fast declining—

JUNO. (Hastily entering in the form of an old woman.)

Prais'd be the Deities, my dearest daughter !

SEMELE. Ha ! Do I dream ? Am I awake ? Gods !
Beroë :

JUNO. Is't possible that Semele can e'er
Forget her nur- ?

SEMELÉ. 'Tis Beroë ! By Zeus !
Oh, let thy daughter clasp thee to her heart !
Thou liv'st still ? What can have brought thee here
From Epidaurus ? Tell me all thy tale !
Thou'rt still my mother as of old ?

JUNO. Thy mother !
Time was, thou call'd'st me so.

SEMELÉ. Thou art so still,
And wilt remain so, till I drink full deep
Of Lethe's madd'ning draught.

JUNO. Soon Beroë
Will drink oblivion from the waves of Lethe ;
But Cadmus' daughter ne'er will taste that draught.
SEMELÉ. How, my good nurse ? Thy language ne'er was wont

To be mysterious or of hidden meaning ;
The spirit of gray hairs 'tis speaks in thee ;
Thou say'st I ne'er shall taste of Lethe's draught ?

JUNO. I said so, Yes ! But wherefore ridicule
Gray hairs ? 'Tis true that they, unlike fair tresses,
Have ne'er been able to ensnare a God !

SEMELÉ. Pardon poor thoughtless me ! What cause have I
To ridicule gray hairs ? Can I suppose
That mine for ever fair will grace my neck ?
But what was that I heard thee muttering
Between thy teeth ?—A God ?

JUNO. Said I, a God ?
The Deities, in truth, dwell everywhere !
'Tis good for Earth's frail children to implore them.
'The Gods are found where thou art—Semele !
What would'st thou ask !

SEMELÉ. Malicious heart ! But say
What brings thee to this spot from Epidaurus !
'Tis not because the Gods delight to dwell
Near Semele !

JUNO. By Jupiter, nought else !—
What fire was that which mounted to thy cheeks
When I pronounced the name of Jupiter ?
Nought else, my daughter ! Fearfully the plaguo
At Epidaurus rages ; ev'ry blast

Is deadly poison, ev'ry breath destroys ;
 The son his mother burns, his bride the bridegroom ;
 The funeral piles rear up their flaming heads,
 Converting even midnight to bright day,
 While howls of anguish ceaseless rend the air ;
 Full to o'erflowing is the cup of woe !—
 In anger, Zeus looks down on our poor nation ;
 In vain the victim's blood is shed, in vain
 Before the altar bows the priest his knee ;
 Deaf is his ear to all our supplications—
 Therefore, my sorrow-stricken country now
 Has sent me here to Cadmus' regal daughter
 In hopes that I may move her to avert
 His anger from us—" Beroë, the nurse,
 " Has influence," thus they said, " with Semele,
 " And Semele with Zeus"—I know no more,
 And understand still less what means the saying,
 That Semele such influence has with Zeus.

SEMELE. (Eagerly and thoughtlessly.)
 The plague shall cease to-morrow ! Tell them so Zeus loves me ! Say so ! It shall cease to-day !

JUNO. (Starting up in astonishment.)
 Ha ! Is it true what Fame with thousand tongues
 Has spread abroad from Ida to Mount Hæmus ?
 Zeus loves thee ! Zeus salutes thee in the glory
 Wherein the denizens of Heav'n regard him,
 When in Saturnia's arms he sinks to rest ?—
 Let, O ye Gods, my gray hairs now descend
 To Oreus' shades, for I have lived enough !
 In god-like splendor Kronos' mighty Son
 Comes down to her,—to her, who on this breast
 Once suckled—yes ! to her—

SEMELE. Oh, Beroë !
 In youthful form he came, in lovelier guise
 Than they who from Aurora's lap arise ;
 Fairer than Hesper, breathing incense dim—
 In floods of æther steep'd appeared each limb ;
 He mov'd with graceful and majestic motion,
 Like silv'ry billows heaving o'er the ocean,
 Or as Hyperion, whose bright shoulders ever
 His bow and arrows bear, and planging quiver ;
 His robe of light behind him gracefully
 Danced in the breeze, his voice breath'd melody,
 Like crystal streams with silv'ry murmur falling,

More ravishing than Orpheus' strains enravelling.
 JUNO. My daughter!—Inspiration spurs thee on—

Raising thy heart to flights of Helicon!
 If thus in strains of Delphic ecstasy
 Ascends the short-liv'd blissful memory
 Of his bright charms,—Oh, how divine must be
 His own sweet voice,—his look how heavenly!

But why of that great attribute
 Kronion joys in most, be mute,—
 The majesty that hurls the thunder,
 And tears the fleeting clouds asunder?
 Wilt thou say nought of that alone!

Prometheus and Deucalion
 May lend the fairest charms of love,
 But none can wield the bolt save Jove!
 The thunderbolt it is alone
 Which he before thy feet laid down
 That proves thy right to Beauty's crown.

SEMELE. What say'st thou? What are thunderbolts to me?

JUNO. (Smiling.) Ah, Semele! A jest becomes thee well!

SEMELE. Deucalion has no offspring so divine
 As is my Zeus—of thunder naught I know.

JUNO. Mere envy! Fie!

SEMELE. No, Beroë! By Zeus!

JUNO. Thou swear'st?

SEMELE. By Zeus! By mine own Zeus!

JUNO. (Shrilling.) Thou swear'st?
 Unhappy one!

SEMELE. (In alarm.) What mean'st thou? Beroë!

JUNO. Repeat the word that dooms thee to become
 The wretchedest of all on Earth's wide face!—
 Alas, lost creature! 'Twas not Zeus!

SEMELE.

Oh, fearful thought!

JUNO. A cunning traitor 'twas
 From Attica, who, 'neath a god-like form,
 Robb'd thee of honor, shame, and innocence!—

[SEMELE sinks to the ground
 Well may'st thou fall! Ne'er may'st thou rise again!
 May endless night enshroud thine eyes in darkness,
 May endless silence round thine ears encamp!
 Remain for ever here a lifeless mass:]

Oh, infamy! Enough to hurl chaste day
Back into Hecate's gloomy arms once more!
Ye Gods! And is it thus that Beroë
Finds Cadmus' daughter, after sixteen years
Of bitter separation! Full of joy

I came from Epidaurus; but with shame
To Epidaurus must retrace my steps.—
Despair I take with me. Alas, my people!
E'en to the second Deluge with the plague
May rage at will, may pile Mount Oeta high
With corpses upon corpses, and may turn
All Greece into one mighty charnel-house,
Ere Semelo can bend the angry Gods.

I, thou, and Greece, and all, have been betray'd!
SEMELE. (Trembling as she rises, and extending an arm towards her.) Ob, Beroë!

JUNO. Take courage, my dear heart!
Perchance 'tis Zeus! altho' it scarce can be!
Perchance 'tis really Zeus! This we must learn!
He must disclose himself to thee, or thou Must fly his sight for ever, and devote
The monster to the death-revenge of Thebes.
Look up, dear daughter—look upon the face
Of thine own Beroë, who looks on thee
With sympathizing eyes—my Semelo,
Were it not well to try him?

SEMELE. No, by Heaven?
I should not find him then——

JUNO. What! Wilt thou be Perchance less wretched, if thou piest on
In mournful doubt?—and if 'tis really he,—

SEMELE. (Hiding her face in Juno's lap.) Ah!
'tis not he!

JUNO. And if he came to thee
Array'd in all the majesty wherewith
Olympus sees him? Semelo! What then?
Wouldst thou repent thee then of having tried him?

SEMELE. (Springing up.) Ha! be it so! He must unveil himself!

JUNO. (Hastily.) Thou must not let him sink into thine arms

Till he unveils himself—so hearken, child,
To what thy faithful nurse now counsels thee,—
To what affection whispers in mine ear,

And will accomplish '—Say I will be soon come?

SEMELÉ. Before Hyperion sinks in Thetis' bed,
He promis'd to appear.

JUNO. (Forgetting herself, hastily.) Is't so, indeed?
He promis'd? Ha! To-day? (Recovering herself.)

Let him approach,
And when he would attempt, inflam'd with love,
To clasp his arms around thee, then do thou,—
Oh, rive me well,—as if by lightning struck,
Start back in haste. Ha! picture his surprise!
Leave him not long in wonderment, my child;
Continue to repulse him with a look

As cold as ice—more wildly, with more ardor

He'll press thee than—the coyness of the fair

Is but a dam, that for awhile keeps back

The torrent, only to increase the flood

With greater fury. Then begin to weep:

'Gainst giants he might stand,—look calmly on

When Typhæus, hundred-arm'd, in fury hurl'd

Mount Ossa and Olympus 'gainst his throne:

But Zeus is soon subdued by beauty's tears.

Thou smilest?—Be it so! Is, then, the scholar

Wiser, perchance, than she who teaches her?—

Then thou must pray the God one little, little

Most innocent request to grant to thee—

One that may seal his love and Godhead too.

He'll swear by Styx. The Styx he must obey!

That oath he dares not break! Then speak these words

“Thou shalt not touch this body, till thou com'st

“To Cadmus' daughter cloth'd in all the night

“Wherein thou art embrac'd by Kronos' daughter!”

Be not thou terrified, my Semele,

If he, in order to escape thy wish,

As bugbears paints the horrors of his presence—

Describes the flames that round about him roar,

The thunder round him rolling when he comes:

These, Semele, are nought but empty fears—

The Gods dislike to show to us frail mortals

These the most glorious of their attributes;

Be thou but obstinate in thy request,

And Juno's self will gaze on thee with envy.

SEMELÉ. The frightful ox-eyed one! How often he Complains, in the blest moments of our love,
Of her tormenting him with her black gall—

JUNO. (Aside, furiously, but with embarrassment.)
Ha! creature! Thou shalt die for this contempt!

SEMELE. My Beroë! What art thou murmuring there?

JUNO. (In confusion.)

Nothing, my Semele! Black gall torments
Me also—Yes! a sharp, reproachful look
With lovers often passes for black gall—
Yet ox-eyes, after all, are not so ugly.

SEMELE. Oh, Beroë, for shame, they're quite the worst

That any head can possibly contain!
And then her cheeks of green and yellow hues,
The obvious penalty of poisonous envy—
Zeus oft complains to me that that same shrew
Each night torments him with her nauseous love,
And with her jealous whims,—enough, I'm sure,
Into Ixion's wheel to turn all Heaven.

JUNO. (Raving up and down in extreme confusion.)
No more of this!

SEMELE. What, Beroë! So angry?
Have I said more than what is true? Said more Than what is wise?

JUNO. Thou hast said more, young woman
Than what is true—said more than what is wise!
Deem thyself truly blest, if thy blue eyes
Smile thee not into Charon's bark too soon!
Saturnia has her altars and her temples,
And wanders amongst mortals—that great Goddess
Avenges naught so bitterly as scorn.

SEMELE. Here let her wander, and give birth to scorn!

What is't to me?—My Jupiter protects
My ev'ry hair,—what harm can Juno do?
But now enough of this, my Beroë!
Zeus must appear to-day in all his glory;
And if Saturnia should on that account
Find out the path to Orus—

JUNO. (Aside.) That same path
Another probably will find before her,
If but Kronion's lightning hits the mark!—

(To Semele.)

Yes, Semele, she well may burst with envy
When Cadmus' daughter, in the sight of Greece,

Ascends in triumph to Olympus' heights!—

SEMELÉ. (Smiling gently.)

'Think'st thou they'll hear in Greece of Cadmus' daughter?

JUNO. From Salon to Athens the trumpet of Pans
Shall ring with no other but Semele's name!
The Gods from the Heavens shall even descend,
And before thee their knees in deep homage shall bend,
While mortals in silent submission abide
The will of the Giant-Destroyer's lov'd bride;
And when distant years shall see
Thy last hour—

SEMELÉ. (Springing up, and falling on her neck.)
Oh Berce!

JUNO. Then a tablet white shall bear
This inscription graven there:
Here is worshipp'd Semele!
Who on earth so fair as she?
She who from Olympus' throne
Lur'd the Thunder-hurler down!
She who, with her kisses sweet,
Laid him prostrate at her feet!

And when Fame on her thousand wings bears it
around,

The echo from valley and hill shall resound.

SEMELÉ. (Beside herself.)

Pythia! Apollo! Hear!

When, oh when will he appear?

JUNO. And on smoking altars they Rites divine to thee shall pay—

SEMELÉ. (Inspired.)

I will hearken to their prayer,
And will drive away their care,—

Quench with my tears the lightning of great Jove,
His breast to pity with entreaty move!

JUNO. (Aside.) Poor thing! that wilt thou ne'er have power to do. (Meditating.)
Ere long will melt . . . yet—yet—she call'd me ugly!—

No! Pity only when in Tartarus!

(To Semele.)
Fly now, my love! Make haste to leave this spot,
That Zeus may not observe thee—Let him wait
Long for thy coming, that he with more fire
May languish for thee—

MERCURY. (Rising.) Let but thy head a nod almighty give,
 And in an instant I am there,—am back
 In the same instant—

ZEUS. Stay! As I o'er Argos
 Was flying, from my temples curling rose
 The sacrificial smoke: it gave me joy
 That thus the people worship me—to fly
 To Ceres, to my sister,—thus speaks Zeus:
 "Ten-thousandfold for fifty years to come
 "Let her reward the Argive husbandmen!"— MERCURY. With trembling haste I execute thy wrath,—

 With joyous speed thy messages of grace,
 Father of All! For to the Deities
 'Tis bliss to make man happy; to destroy him
 Is anguish to the Gods. Thy will be done!
 Where shall I pour into Thine ears their thanks,—
 Below in dust, or at Thy throne on high?
 ZEUS. Here at my throne on earth—within the palace,
 Of Semele! Away!

[Exit Mercury.]

Does she not come,
 As is her wont, Olympus' mighty king
 To clasp against her rapture-swelling breast?
 Why hastes not my Semele to meet me?
 A vacant, death-like, fearful silence reigns
 On ev'ry side around the lonely palace,
 So wont to ring with wild Bacchantic shouts—
 No breath is stirring—on Cithæron's height
 Exulting Juno stands. Will Semele
 Never again make haste to meet her Zeus?

(A pause, after which he continues.)

Ha! Can yon impious one perchance have dar'd
 To set her foot in my love's sanctuary?—
 Saturnia—Mount Cithæron—her rejoicings!
 Fearful foreboding!—Semele—yet peace!
 Take courage!—I'm thy Zeus! the scatter'd Heav'n's
 Shall learn, my Semele, that I'm thy Zeus!
 Where is the breath of air that dares presume
 Roughly to blow on her whom Zeus calls His?
 I scold at all her malice.—Where art thou,
 Oh Semele? I long have pin'd to rest

My world-tormented head upon thy breast,—
 To lull my wearied senses to repose
 From the wild storm of earthly joys and woes,—
 To dream away the emblems of my might,
 My reins, my taller, and my chariot bright,
 And live for naught beyond the joys of love!
 Oh heav'nly inspiration, that can move
 Even the Gods divine! What is the blood
 Of mighty Uranus—what all the flood
 Of Nectar and ambrosia—what the throne
 Of high Olympus—what the pow'r I own,
 The golden sceptre of the starry skies—
 What the Omnipotence that never dies,
 What Might eternal, Immortality—
 What e'en a God, oh love, if rest of thee?
 The shepherd who, beside the murmuring brook,
 Leans on his true love's breast, nor cares to look
 After his straying lambs, in that sweet hour
 Envious me not my thunderbolt of power!
 She comes—she hastens nigh! Pearl of my works,
 Woman!—the Artist who created thee
 Should be ador'd. 'Twas I—myself I worship:
 Zeus worship Zeus, for Zeus created thee.
 Ha! who will now, in all the Being-realm,
 Condemn me? How unseen, yes, how despised
 Dwindle away my worlds, my constellations,
 So ray-diffusing, all my dancing systems,
 What wise men call the music of my spheres!—
 How dead are all when weigh'd against a soul!

(Semele approaches without looking up.)

My praise! my throne on earth! Oh Semele!

(He rushes towards her; she seeks to fly.)

Thou fly'st?—Art mute?—Ha! Semele! thou fly'st?

SEMELE. (Repulsing him.) Away!

ZEUS. (After a pause of astonishment.)

Is Jupiter asleep? Will Nature
 Rush to her fall?—Can Semele speak thus?—
 What, not an answer? Eagerly mine arms
 Tow'rd thee are stretch'd—my bosom never throbb'd Responsive to Agenor's daughter—never Throbb'd against Leto's breast,—my lips ne'er burn'd
 For the sweet kiss of prisoned Dione,
 As now—

SEMELE. Peace, Traitor! Peace!

ZEUS. (With displeasure, but tenderly.) My Semelo!

SEMELÉ. Out of my sight!

ZEUS. (Looking at her with majesty.)

Know, I am Zeus!

Thou Zeus?

SEMELÉ.

Tremble, Salmoneus, for he fearfully
Will soon demand again the stolen chariot
That thou hast robb'd him of—thou art not Zeus!

ZEUS. (With dignity.)

The mighty universe around me whirls,
And calls me so—

SEMELÉ. Ha! Fearful blasphemy!

ZEUS. (More gently.) How, my divine one?

Wherefore such a tone?

What reptile dares to steal thine heart from me?

SEMELÉ. My heart was vow'd to Him whose apothen art!

Men oft-times come beneath a godlike form
To snare a woman. Hence! thou art not Zeus!

ZEUS. Thou doubtest? What! Can Semelo still doubt

My Godhead?

SEMELÉ. (Mournfully.) Would that thou wert Zeus!
No son

Of morrow-nothingness shall touch this mouth;
This heart is vow'd to Zeus! Would thou wert Ho!

ZEUS. Thou weepest? Zeus is here—weeps Semelo?
[Falling down before her.]

Speak! But command! and then shall slavish Nature
Lie trembling at the feet of Cadmus' daughter!

Command! and streams shall instantly make halt—

And Helicon, and Caucasus, and Cynthus,

And Athos, Mycalo, and Rhodope, and Pindus,

Shall burst their bonds when I order it so,

And kiss the valleys and plains below,

And dance in the breeze like flakes of snow.

Command! and the Winds from the East and the North,

And the fierce Tornado shall rally forth,

While Poseidon's trident their power shall own,

When they shake to its base his watery throne;

The billows in angry fury shall rise,

And every sea-mark and dam despise;

The lightning shall gleam thro' the firmament black,

While the poles of Earth and of Heaven shall crack;
 The Ocean the heights of Olympus explore,
 From thousandfold jaws with wild deafening roar
 The thunder shall howl, while with mad jubilee
 The hurricane fierce sings in triumph to thee.
 Command—

SEMELE. I'm but a woman, a frail woman!
 How can the Potter bend before his pot?
 How can the Artist kneel before his statue?

ZEUS. Pygmalion bow'd before his masterpiece—
 And Zeus now worships his own Semele!

SEMELE. (Weeping bitterly.)
 Arise—arise! Alas, for us poor maidens!
 Zeus has my heart, Gods only can I love.
 'The Gods deride me, Zeus despises me!

ZEUS. Zeus who is now before thy feet—

SEMELE. Arise!
 Zeus reigns on high, above the thunderbolts,
 And, clasp'd in Juno's arms, a reptile scorns.

ZEUS. (Hastily.)
 Ha! Semele and Juno—which the reptile?

SEMELE. How blest beyond all utterance would be Cadmus' daughter—wert thou Zeus! Alas!
 'Thou art not Zeus!

ZEUS. (Arises.) I am!
 (*He extends his hand, and a rainbow fills the hall;
 music accompanies its appearance.*)

Know'st thou me now?

SEMELE. Strong is that mortal's arm, whom Gods protect,— Saturnus loves thee—nono can I o'er love
 But Deities—

ZEUS. What! art thou doubting still
 Whether my might is lent me by the Gods,
 And not God-born? Tho Gods, my Semele,
 In charity oft lend their strength to man;
 Ne'er do the Deities their terrors lend—
 Death and destruction is the Godhead's seal—
 Bearer of death to thee were Zeus unveil'd!
 (He extends his hand. Thunder, fire, smoke, and earthquake. Music accompanies the spell here and subsequently.)

SEMELE. Withdraw, withdraw thy hand!—Oh, mercy, mercy

For the poor nation! Yes! thou art the Child
Of great Saturnus—

ZEUS. Ha! thou thoughtless one!
Shall Zeus, to please a woman's stubbornness,
Bid planets whirl, and bid the suns stand still?
Zeus will do so!—Oft has a God's descendant
Ripp'd up the fire-impregnate womb of rocks,
And yet his might's confined to 'Tellus' bounds;
Zeus only can do this!

(He extends his hand—the sun vanishes, and it becomes suddenly night.)

SEMELE. (Falling down before him.) Almighty one!
Couldst thou but love!

ZEUS. Ha! Cadmus' daughter asks
Kronion if Kronion e'er can love!
One word, and he throws off Divinity—
Is flesh and blood, and dies, and is belov'd!

SEMELE. Would Zeus do that?

ZEUS. Speak, Semele! What more?
Apollo's self confesses that 'tis bliss
To be a man 'mongst men—a sign from thee,
And I'm a man!

SEMELE. (Falling on his neck.)
Oh Jupiter, the Epidaurus women
Thy Semele a foolish maiden call,
Because, though by the Thunderer belov'd,
She can obtain naught from him—

ZEUS. (Eagerly.) They shall blush,
Those Epidaurus women! Ask!—but ask!
And by the dreaded Styx—whose boundless might Binds e'en the Gods like slaves—if Zeus deny thee,
Then shall the Gods, e'en in that self-same moment,
Hurl me despairing to annihilation!

SEMELE. (Springing up joyfully.)
By this I know that thou'rt my Jupiter!
Thou swearest—and the Styx has heard thine oath!
Let me embrace thee, then, in the same guise
In which—

ZEUS. (Shrinking with alarm.)
Unhappy one! Oh stay! oh stay!

SEMELE. Saturnus—

ZEUS. (Attempting to stop her mouth.)
Be thou dumb!

SEMELE. Embraces thee.

ZEUS. (Pale, and turning away.)

Too late ! The sound escap'd !—The Styx !—'Tis death
Thou, Semele, hast gain'd !

SEMELE. Ha ! Loves Zeus thus ?

ZEUS. All Heaven I would have given, had I only Lov'd thee but less ! (Gazing at her with cold horror.)
Thou'rt lost—

SEMELE. Oh, Jupiter !

ZEUS. (Speaking furiously to himself.)

Ah ! Now I mark thine exultation, Juno !

Accurs'd jealousy ! This rose must die !

Too fair—alas ! too sweet for Acheron !

SEMELE. Methinks thou'rt niggard of thy majesty !

ZEUS. Accurs'd be my majesty, that now
Has blinded thee ! Accurs'd be my greatness,
That must destroy thee ! Curs'd be I myself
For having built my bliss on crumbling dust !

SEMELE. These are but empty terrors, Zeus ! In truth

I do not dread thy threats !

ZEUS. Deluded child !

Go ! take a last farewell for evermore

Of all thy friends belov'd—naught, naught has power

To save thee, Semele ! I am thy Zeus !

Yet that no more—Go—

SEMELE. Jealous one ! the Styx !—

Think not that thou'lt be able to escape me. [Exit.]

ZEUS. No ! Juno shall not triumph.—She shall tremble—

Aye, and by virtue of the deadly might

That makes the earth and makes the heavens my foot-stool,

Upon the sharpest rock in Thracia's land

With adamantino chains I'll bind her fast.

But, oh, this oath—[Mercury appears in the distance.]

What means thy hasty flight ?

MERCURY. I bring the fiery, wing'd, and weeping thanks

Of those whom thou hast bless'd—

ZEUS. Again destroy them !

MERCURY. (In amazement.) Zeus !

ZEUS. None shall now be bless'd !

She dies—

[The Curtain falls.]

HYMN TO JOY.

Joy, thou Goddess, fair, immortal,
 Offspring of Elysium,
 Mad with rapture, to the portal
 Of thy holy fane we come !
 Fashion's laws, indeed, may sever,
 But thy magic joins again ;
 All mankind are brethren ever
 'Neath thy mild and gentle reign.

CHORUS.

Welcome, all ye myriad creatures !
 Brethren, take the kiss of love !
 Yes, the starry realms above
 Hide a father's smiling features.

He, that noble prize possessing—
 He that boasts a friend that's true,
 He whom woman's love is blessing,
 Let him join the chorus too !
 Aye, and he who but one spirit
 On this earth can call his own !—
 He who no such bliss can merit,
 Let him mourn his fate alone !

CHORUS.

All who nature's tribes are swelling
 Homage pay to Sympathy ;
 For she guides us up on high,
 Where THE UNKNOWN has his dwelling.

From the breasts of kindly Nature
 All of Joy imbibe the dew ;
 Good and bad alike, each creature
 Would her roseate path pursue.
 'Tis through her the wine-cup maddens,
 Love and friends to man she gives !
 Bliss the meanest reptile gladdens,—
 Near God's throne the Cherub lives !

CHORUS.

Bow before him all creation !
 Mortals, own the God of love !

Seek him high the stars above,—
Yonder is his habitation !

Joy, in Nature's wide dominion,
Mightiest cause of all is found ;
And 'tis joy that moves the pinion,
When the wheel of time goes round ;
From the bud she lures the flower,—
Suns from out their orbs of light ;
Distant spheres obey her power,
Far beyond all mortal sight.

CHORUS.

As through Heaven's expanse so glorious,
In their orbits suns roll on,
Brethren, thus your proud race run,
Glad as warriors all victorious !

Joy from Truth's own glass of fire
Sweetly on the Searcher smiles ;
Lest on Virtue's steps ho tire,
Joy the tedious path beguiles.
High on Faith's bright hill before us,
See her banner proudly wave !
Joy, too, swells the Angels' chorus, —
Bursts the bondage of the grave !

CHORUS.

Mortals, meekly wait for Heaven !
Suffer on in patient love !
In the starry realms above,
Bright rewards by God are given.

To the Gods we ne'er can render Praise for every good they grant ;
Let us, with devotion tender,
Minister to Grief and Want.
Quench'd be hate and wrath for ever
Pardon'd be our mortal foe—
May our tears upbraid him never,
No repentance bring him low !

CHORUS.

Sense of wrong: forget to treasure—
 Brethren, live in perfect love!
 In the starry realms above,
 God will mete as we may measure.

Joy within the goblet flushes,
 For the golden nectar, wine,
 Ev'ry fierce emotion hushes,—
 Fills the breast with fire divine.
 Brethren, thus in rapture meeting,
 Send 'e round the brimming cup.
 Yonder kindly Spirit greeting,
 While the foam to Heaven mounts up!

CHORUS.

Ho whom Seraphs worship over,
 Whom the stars praise as they roll,
 Yes—to Him now drain the bowl—
 Mortal eye can see Him never!

Courage, ne'er by sorrow broken!
 Aid where tears of virtue flow;
 Faith to keep each promise spoken!
 Truth alike to friend and foe!
 'Neath kings' frowns a manly spirit!—
 Brethren, noble is the prize—
 Honor due to ev'ry merit!
 Death to all the brood of lies!

CHORUS.

Draw the sacred circle closer!
 By this bright wine plight your troth
 To be faithful to your oath!
 Swear it by the Star-Disposer!

Safety from the Tyrant's power! *
 Mercy e'en to traitors base!
 Hope in death's last solemn hour!
 Pardon when before His face!

* This concluding and fine strophe is omitted in the later editions of Schiller's Poems.

Lo, the dead shall rise to Heaven!
 Brethren, hail the blest decree :
 Ev'ry sin shall be forgiven,
 Hell for ever cease to be !

CHORUS.

When the golden bowl is broken,
 Gentle sleep within the tomb !
 Brethren, may a gracious doom
 By the Judge of Man be spoken !

THE INVINCIBLE ARMADA.

SHE comes, she comes—Iberia's proud Armada—
 The waves beneath the heavy burden sigh ;
 Laden with bigotry and chains, the invader,
 Charged with a thousand thunders now draws nigh
 And as she sweeps along in stately motion,
 With trembling awe is filled the startled Ocean.
 Each ship a floating citadel,
 Men call her "The Invincible !"
 Why should she boast that haughty name ?
 The fear she spreads allows her claim.

With silent and majestic step advancing,
 Affrighted Neptune bears her on his breast ;
 From ev'ry port-hole fierce destruction glancing,
 She comes, and lo ! the tempest sinks to rest.

And now at length the proud fleet stands before thee
 Thrice-happy Island, Mistress of the Sea !
 Mighty Britannia, danger hovers o'er thee,
 Those countless galleons threaten slavery !
 Woe to thy freedom-unrur'd nation !
 Yon cloud is big with desolation !

How came that priceless gem in thy possession,
 Which raised thee high above each other State ?
 Thyself it was, who, struggling 'gainst oppression,
 Earn'd for thy sons that statute wise and great—

The MAGNA CHARTA—'neath whose shelt'ring wings
 Monarchs but subjects are, and subjects kings!
 To rule the waves thy ships have prov'd their right,
 Defeating each proud foe in ocean-fight.
 All this thou ow'st,—ye nations, blush to hear it!—
 To thy good sword alone, and dauntless spirit!

See where the monster comes—unhappy one!
 Alas, thy glorious race is well-nigh run!
 Alarm and terror fill this earthly ball,
 The hearts of all free men are beating madly,
 And ev'ry virtuous soul is waiting sadly
 The hour when thy great name is doom'd to fall.

God the Almighty look'd down from his throne,
 And saw thy foe's proud "Lion-Banner" flying,
 And saw the yawning grave before thee lying,—
 "What!" he exclaim'd, "shall my lov'd Albion,
 And all her race of heroes, now so free,
 Pine in the galling bonds of slavery?
 Shall she, whose name with dread all tyrants hear,
 Be swept for ever from this hemisphere?"

"Never," He cried, "shall Freedom's Eden true,
 That bulwark of all human rights, be shatter'd!"—
 God the Almighty blew,
 And to the winds of heaven the fleet was scatter'd!*

THE CONFLICT.

No longer will I fight this conflict weary,
 The giant fight that Duty bids me wage;
 Why, Virtue, ask a sacrifice so dreary,
 If then my bosom's pangs canst not assuage?

I've sworn it,—yes! I solemnly have sworn it,—
 Upon my passions to impose a rein;
 Behold thy garland!—yet, tho' long I've worn it,
 Take it back now, and let me sin again!

---

* These last two lines refer to the medal struck by Queen Elizabeth to commemorate the overthrow of the Armada, on which was the inscription—Uffavit Deus et dissipati sunt.

Dissolv'd be ev'ry vow between us spoken—
 She loves me !—What is now thy crown to me ?
 Happy the man who, wrapp'd in bliss unbroken,
 His deep, deep fall can view so tranquilly !

She sees the worm my youthful bloom assailing,
 She sees my days in sorrow fleeting on ;
 And my heroic efforts gently hailing,
 Awards the prize she deems me to have won.

Fair soul ! mistrust this virtuo angel-seeming,
 For on to erime thy pity hurries me
 In the unbounded realms where life is beaming,
 Is there another fairer prize than thee ?

Or than that sin so dreaded by my spirit ?—
 Oh cruel, all-relentless tyranny !
 The only prize my virtuo e'er can merit
 Must, in the moment, see that virtue die !

RESIGNATION.

Yes ! even I was in Areadia born,
 And, in mine infant ears,
 A vow of Rapture was by Nature sworn ;
 Yes ! even I was in Areadia born,
 And yet my short Spring gavo me only—tears !

Once blooms, and only once, Life's youthful May ;
 For me its bloom hath gone.
 The Silent God—O Brethren, weep to-day—
 The Silent God hath quench'd my Torch's ray,
 And the vain dream hath flown.

Upon thy darksome bridge, Eternity,
 I stand e'en now, dread thought !
 Take, then, these Joy-Credentials back from me !
 Unopen'd I return them now to thee,
 Of Happiness, alas, know nought !

Before thy throne my mournful cries I vent,
 Thou Judge, conceal'd from view!
 To yonder Star a joyous Saying went:
 With Judgment's scales to rule us thou art sent,
 And call'st thyself INQUIRER, too!

Here,—say they,—ferrors on the Bad alight,
 And joys to greet the Virtuous spring,
 The bosom's windings thou'lt expose to sight,
 Riddle of Providence wilt solve aright,
 And reckon with the suffering!

Here to the Exile be a home outspread,
 Here end the meek man's thorny path of strife!
 A god-like child, whose name was Truth, they said,
 Known but to few, from whom the many fled,
 Restrain'd the ardent bridle of my Life.

"It shall be thine another Life to live,—
 Thy youth to me surrender!
 To thee this surety only can I give"—
 I took the surety in that Life to live;
 And gave to her each youthful joy so tender.

"Give me the woman precious to thy heart,
 Give up to me thy Laura!
 Beyond the grave will usury pay the smart."—
 I wept aloud, and from my bleeding heart
 With resignation tore her.

"The obligation's drawn upon the Dead!"
 Thus laugh'd the World in scorn;
 "The Lying One, in league with Despots dread,
 For Truth, a Phantom palm'd on thee instead,
 Thou'lt be no more, when once this Dream
 has gone!"

Shamelessly scoff'd the Mockers' serpent-band:
 "A Dream that but Prescription can admit
 Dost dread? Where now thy God's protecting hand, (The sick world's Saviours with such cunning plann'd),
 Borrow'd by Human need of Human wit?

“What Future is't that graves to us reveal?
 What the Eternity of thy discourse?
 Honor'd because dark veils its form conceal,
 The giant shadows of the awe we feel,
 View'd in the hollow mirror of Remorse!

An Image false of shapes of living mould,
 (Time's very mummy, she!)
 Whom only Hope's sweet balm hath power to hold
 Within the chambers of the grave so cold,—
 Thy fever calls this Immortality!

“For empty hopes,—corruption gives the lie—Didst thou exchange what thou hadst surely done?
 Six thousand years sped Death in silence by,—
 Has corpse from out the grave e'er mounted high,
 That mention made of the Requiring One?”—

I saw Time fly to reach thy distant shore,
 I saw fair Nature lie
 A shrivell'd corpse behind him evermore,—
 No dead from out the grave then sought to soar
 Yet in that Oath divine still trusted I.

My ev'ry joy to thee I've sacrific'd,
 I throw me now before thy Judgment throne!
 The Many's scorn with boldness I've despis'd,—
 Only thy gifts by me were ever priz'd,—
 I ask my wages now, Requiring One!

“With equal love I love each child of mine!”
 A Genius hid from sight exclaim'd.
 “Two flowers,” he cried, “ye mortals, mark the sign,—
 Two flowers to greet the Searcher wise entwine,—
 Hope and enjoyment they are nam'd.

“Who of these flowers plucks one, let him ne'er yearn
 To touch the other sister's bloom.
 Let him enjoy, who has no faith; eterno
 As earth, this truth!—Abstain, who faith can learn!
 The World's long story is the world's own doom.

"Horr thou hast felt,—thy wages, then, are paid;
 Thy Fartu 'twas form'd the rapture pledg'd to thee.
 Thou might'st have of the Wise inquiry made, —
 The minutes thou neglectest, as they fade,
 Are given back by no Eternity!"

THE GODS OF GREECE.

Whilst the smiling Earth ye govern'd still,
 And with Rapture's soft and guibling hand
 Let the happy Nations at your will,
 Beauteous Beings from the Fable-land!
 Whilst your blissful worship smil'd around,
 Ah! how diff'rent was it in that day!
 When the people still thy temples crown'd,
 Venus Amathusia!

When the magic veil of Poesy
 Still round Truth entwin'd its loving chain—
 Through creation pour'd Life's fulness free,
 Things then felt, which ne'er can feel again.
 Then to press her 'gainst the breast, of Love,
 They on Nature nobler power bestow'd, —
 All, to eyes enlighten'd from above,
 Of a God the traces show'd.

There, where now, as we're by Sages told,
 Whirls on high a soulless fiery ball,
 Helios guided then his car of gold,
 In his silent majesty, o'er all.
 Oreads then these heights around us fill'd,
 'Then a Dryad dwelt in yonder tree,
 From the Urn of loving Naiads rill'd
 Silver streamlets foamingly.

Yonder Laurel once imploring wou'd,
 Tantal's daughter slumbers in this stone;
 From you rush rose Syrinx' mournful sound,
 From this thicket, Philomela's moan.

Yonder brook Demeter's tears receiv'd,
 That sho wept for her Persephone,
 From this hill, of her lov'd friend bereav'd,
 Cried Cythere, fruitlessly !

To Deucalion's race from realms of air
 Then the great Immortals still came down ;
 And to vanquish Pyrrha's daughter fair,
 Then a shepherd's staff took Leto's son.
 Then 'tween Heroes, Deities, and Men,
 Was a beauteous bond by Eros twiu'd,
 And with Deities and Heroes then Knelt in Cyprus' Isle, mankind.

Gloomy sternness and denial sad
 Ne'er were in your service blest descried ;
 Each heart throbb'd then with emotions glad,
 For the Happy were with you allied.
 Nothing then was Holy, save the Fair ;
 Of no rapture was the God asham'd,
 When the modest Muse was blushing there,
 When their sway the Graces claim'd !

Palace-like, then smil'd your Temples all,
 Ye wero honor'd in tho hero-sport
 At the Isthmus' crown-clad festival,
 And tho goal the thund'ring chariots sought.
 Beauteous dances that a Spirit breath'd
 Circled round your altars bright and fair ;
 Round your brows the crown of triumph wreath'd,
 Garlands graced your fragrant hair.

Thyrsns-swingers' loud Evoë then,
 And the panther-team that shono afar,
 Welcom'd Him who Rapture brought to men ;
 Fauns and Satyrs reel'd beforo his Car !
 Round him sprang the Mænads' raving crew,
 Whilo their dances show'd his wine's great worth,
 And the Host's full cheeks of tawny hue
 Pointed to the cup with mirth.

In those days, before tho bed of Death
 Stood no ghastly form. Then took away
 From the lips a kiss the parting breath,
 And a Genius quench'd his torch's ray.

Even Orcus' rigid judgment-seat
 By a mortal's sighs and wails were held;
 And the Lacedæmon a spirit-breathing wail
 Even the angry Furies quell'd.

Once again within Elysium's grove
 Met the happy Shade his joys so dear;
 Lov'd faithful found his faithful Love,
 And his path regain'd the charioteer;
 Linus' lute gave back each wonted strain,
 Admet clasp'd a cow's to his heart,
 And Orestes found his friend again,
 Philoctetes found his dart.

Nobler prizes than the wrestler crown'd,
 Who the arduous path of Virtue press'd;
 Glorious workers then of deeds renown'd
 Clamber'd up to join the Spirits blest.
 All the Band of Silent Gods the while
 Bow'd to Him who summon'd back the dead;
 From Olympus' height the twin-stars smile
 O'er the waves the Pilot led.

Beauteous World, where art thou gone? Oh, then,
 Nature's blooming youth, return once more!
 Ah, but in Song's fairy region now
 Lives thy fabled trace so dear of yore!
 Cold and perish'd, sorrow now the phæbus,
 Not one Godhead greets my longing sight;
 Ah, the Shadow only now remains
 Of yon living Image bright!

All those lovely blossoms now are gone,
 Scatter'd by the North-wind's piercing breath;
 To enrich amongst the whole, but one.
 All this God-like world was doom'd to death.
 Sadly turn I to the stars on high—
 Thou, Selene, canst not there be found!
 Through the forest, through the waves I cry—
 Ah, they echo back no sound!

Feeling not the joy she bids me share,
 No'er entranced by her own majesty,
 Knowing her own guiding spirit ne'er,
 Ne'er made happy by my ecstasy,

Senseless even to her Maker's praise,
 Like the pendule clock's dead, hollow tone,
 Nature Gravitation's law obeys
 Servilely—her Godhead flown.

That to-morrow she hers if may free,
 She prepares for sepulchre to-day;
 And on spindle balanced equally,
 Up and down the Moons alternate play.
 Idly homeward to the Poet land
 Go the Gods — a world they'd serve in vain,
 That's upheld by its own motive hand,
 Casting off the guiding-rein.

Aye! they homeward go — and they have flown,
 All that's bright and fair they've taken too,
 Ev'ry color, ev'ry living tone,—
 And a soulless world is all we view.
 Borne off by the Time-flood's current strong,
 They on Pindus' height have safety found.
 All that is to live in endless song,
 Must in Life-time first be drown'd!

THE ARTISTS.

How gracefully, O Man, with thy palm-bough,
 Upon the waning Century standest thou,
 In proud and noble manhood's prime,
 With unlock'd Senses, with a Spirit freed,
 Of firmness mild,—though silent, rich in deed,
 The ripest son of Time,
 Through meekness great, through precepts strong,
 Through treasures rich, that time had long
 Hid in thy bosom, and through Reason free—
 Master of Nature, who thy fetters loves,
 And who thy strength in thousand conflicts proves,
 And from the Desert soar'd in pride with thee!

Flash'd with the glow of Victory,
 Never forget to prize the hand
 That found the weeping Orphan child
 Deserted on Life's barren strand,

And left a prey to hazard wild,—
 Then, ere thy Spirit-honor saw the day,
 Thy youthful heart watch'd over silently,
 And from thy tender bosom turn'd away
 Each thought that might have stained its purity;
 That kind One ne'er forget who, as in sport,
 Thy youth to noble aspirations train'd,
 And who to thee in easy riddles taught
 The secret how each Virtue might be gain'd;
 Who to receive him back more perfect still,
 E'en into strangers' arms her favorite gave—
 Oh, may'st thou never with degenerate will,
 Humble thyself to be her abject slave!

In Industry, the Bee the palm may bear;
 In Skill, the Worm a lesson may impart;
 With Spirits blest thy Knowledge thou dost share,
 But thou, O Man, alone hast Art!

Only through Beauty's morning gate
 Didst thou the land of Knowledge find.
 To merit a more glorious fate,
 In Graces trains itself the Mind.
 What thrill'd thee through with trembling blest,
 When erst the Muses swept the chord,
 That Power created in thy breast,
 Which to the mighty Spirit soar'd.

What first was seen by doting Reason's ken,
 When many a thousand years had pass'd away,
 A Symbol of the Fair and Great e'en then,
 Before the childlike Mind uncovered lay.
 Its blest form bade us honor Virtue's cause—
 The honest Sense 'gainst Vice put forth its powers,
 Before a Selon had devis'd the Laws
 That slowly bring to light their languid flowers.
 Before Eternity's vast Scheme
 Was to the Thinker's mind reveal'd,
 Was't not foreshadow'd in his dream,
 Whose eyes explor'd yon starry field?

Urania—the majestic dreaded One,
 Who wears a Glory of Orions twin'd
 Around her brow, and who is seen by none
 Save purest Spirits, when in splendor shrin'd,
 Sho soars above the stars in pride,
 Ascending to her sunny throne,—
 Her fiery chaplet lays aside,
 And now, as Beauty, stands alone;
 While, with the Graces' girdle round her cast.
 She seems a Child, by children understood;
 For we shall recognize as TRUTH at last,
 What here as BEAUTY only we have view'd.

When the Creator banish'd from his sight
 Frail Man to dark Mortality's abode,
 And granted him a late return to Light,
 Only by treading Reason's arduous road,—
 When each Immortal turn'd his face away,
 She, the Compassionate, alone
 Took up her dwelling in that house of clay,
 With the deserted, banish'd One.
 With drooping wing she hovers hero
 Around her darling, near the Senses' land,
 And on his prison walls so drear
 Elysium paints with fond deceptive hand.

While soft Humanity still lay at rest,
 Within her tender arms extended,
 No flame was stirr'd by Bigots' murderous zest,
 No guiltless blood on high ascended.
 The heart that she in gentle fetters binds,
 Views Duty's slavish escort scornfully;
 Her path of Light, though fairer far it winds,
 Sinks in the Sun-track of Morality.
 Those who in her chaste service still remain,
 No grovelling thought can tempt, no Fate
 alfright;
 Tho Spiritual Life, so free from stain,
 Freedom's sweet birthright, they receive again,
 Under the mystic sway of holy Might.

The purest among millions, happy they
 Whom to her service sho has sanctified,

Whose mouths the Mighty One's commands convey;
 Within whose breasts she's design'd to abide;
 Whom she ordain'd to feed her holy fire
 Upon her altar's ever-flaming pyre,—
 Whose eyes alone her unveil'd Graces meet,
 And whom she gathers round in union sweet
 In the much-honor'd place be glad
 Where noble Order bade ye climb,
 For in the Spirit-world sublime,
 Man's loftiest rank ye've ever had!

Ere to the world Proportion ye reveal'd,
 That ev'ry Being joyfully obeys,—
 A boundless structure, in Night's veil conceal'd,
 Illum'd by naught but faint and languid rays,
 A band of Phantoms, struggling ceaselessly,
 Holding his mind in slavish fetters bound,
 Unsocial and rude as he,
 Assailing him on every side around,—
 Thus seem'd to Man Creation in that day!
 United to surrounding forms alone
 By the blind chains the Passions had put on,
 Whilst Nature's beauteous Spirit fled away,
 Unfelt, untasted, and unknown.

And, as it hover'd o'er with parting ray,
 Ye seiz'd the shades so neighborly,
 With silent hand, with feeling mind,
 And taught how they might be combin'd
 In one firm bond of Harmony.
 The gaze, light-soaring, felt uplifted then,
 When first the Cedar's slender trunk it view'd,
 And pleasingly the Ocean's crystal flood
 Reflected back the dancing form again.
 Could ye mistake the look, with beauty fraught,
 That Nature gave to help ye on your way?
 The Image floating on the billows taught
 The art the fleeting shadow to portray.
 From her own Being torn apart,
 Her Phantom, beauteous as a dream,
 She plung'd into the silv'ry stream,
 Surrendering to her spoiler's art.

For the first time the soul feels joy,
 By raptures bless'd that calmer are,
 That only greet it from afar,
 That passions wild can ne'er destroy,
 And that, when tasted, do not cloy.

And now the Spirit, free and fair,
 Awoke from out its sensual sleep ;
 By you unchain'd, the Slave of Care
 Into the arms of joy could leap.
 Each brutish barrier soon was set at naught,
 Humanity first graced the cloudless brow.
 And the majestic, noble stranger, thron'd,
 From out the wond'ring brain sprang boldly now.
 Man in his glory stood upright,
 And show'd the stars his kingly face ;
 His speaking glance the Sun's bright light
 Bless'd in the realms sublime of space.
 Upon the cheek now bloom'd the smile,
 The voice's soulful Harmony
 Expanded into Song the while,
 And Feeling swam in the moist eye ;
 And from the mouth, with Spirit teeming o'er,
 Jest, sweetly link'd with Grace, began to pour.

Sunk in the instincts of the worm,
 By naught but sensual lust possess'd,
 Ye recogniz'd within his breast
 Love-Spiritual's noble germ ;
 And that this germ of Love so blest
 Escaped the senses' abject load,
 To the first pastoral song he ow'd.
 Rais'd to the dignity of Thought,
 Passions more calm to flow were taught
 From the Bard's mouth with melody.
 The cheeks with dewy softness burn'd ;
 The longing that, though quench'd, still yearn'd,
 Proclaim'd the Spirit-Harmony.

The Wisest's wisdom, and the strongest's vigor,
 The Meekest's meekness, and the Noblest's grace,
 By you were knit together in one Figure,
 Wreathing a radiant Glory round the place.

Man at the Unknown's sight must tremble,
 Yet its refulgence needs must love ;
 That mighty Being to resemble,
 Each glorious Hero madly strove ;
 The prototype of Beauty's earliest strain
 Ye made resound through Nature's wide domain.

The Passions' wild and headlong course,
 The ever-varying plan of Fate,
 Duty and Instinct's twofold force,
 With proving mind and-guidance straight
 Ye then conducted to their ends.

What Nature, as she moves along,
 Far from each other ever rends,
 Become upon the stage, in song,
 Members of Order, firmly bound.

Awed by the Furies' chorus dread,
 Murder draws down upon its head
 The doom of Death from their wild sound.
 Long ere the wise to give a verdict dar'd,
 An Hind had Fate's mysteries declar'd
 To early Ages from afar ;
 While Providence in silence far'd
 Into the world from Thespis' ear.

Yet into that world's current so sublime
 Your Symmetry was borne before its time,
 When the dark hand of Destiny
 Fail'd in your sight to part by force
 What it had fashion'd 'neath your eye,
 In darkness as Life made haste to die,
 Ere it fulfill'd its beauteous course ;
 Then ye with bold and self-sufficient might
 Led the arch further than the Future's sight ;
 Then, too, ye plung'd, without a fear,
 Into Averna's ocean black,
 And found the vanish'd life as dear
 Beyond the Ura, and brought it back.
 A blushing Peloponnesus appear'd to you,
 The Carle's features, and confirm'd in sight.
 The shadow that is seen upon the way,
 How she has fill'd her early days with light ;

Yet higher,—higher still above the Earth
 Inventive Genius never ceas'd to rise :
 Creation from creation, had their birth,
 And harmonies from harmonies,
 What here alone enchants the ravish'd sight,
 A nobler Beauty yonder must obey ;
 The graceful charmes that in the Nymphs unite,
 In the divin' Athlete meet away ;
 The strength with which the Wrestler is endow'd,
 In too God's beauty we no longer find :
 The wonder of his time—Jove's image proud—
 In the Olympian temple is enshrin'd.

The world, transform'd by Industry's bold hand,
 The human heart, by newborn instincts mov'd,
 That have in burning lights been fully prov'd,
 Your circle of Creation now expand,
 Advancing Man bears on his soaring pinions,
 In gratitude, Art with him in his flight,
 And out of Nature's now-enrich'd dominions
 New worlds of beauty issue forth to light.
 The barriers upon knowledge are o'erthrown ;
 The Spirit that, with pleasure soon-matur'd,
 Has in your easy triumphs been hur'd
 To hasten through an Artist's whole of graces,
 Nature's more distant columns only places,
 And overtakes her on her pathway lone,
 He weighs her now with weights that human are,
 Meets her with measures that she lent of old ;
 While in her beauty's rites more practis'd far,
 She now must let his eye her form behold,
 With youthful and self-pleasing bliss,
 He lends the spheres his harmony,
 And, if he praise earth's edifice,
 'Tis for its wondrous symmetry.

In all that now around him breathes,
 Proportion sweet is ever rife ;
 And beauty's golden girdle wreathes
 With mildness round his path through life ;
 Perfection blest, triumphantly,
 Before him in your works soars high ;

Wherever boisterous Rapture swells,
Wherever silent Sorrow flees,
Where pensive Contemplation dwells,
Where he the tears of Anguish sees,
Where thousand terrors on him glare,
Where Harmonious streams are yet behind—
He sees the Graces sporting there,
With feelings silent and refin'd.
Gentle as Beauty's lines together linking,
As the Appearances that round him play,
In tender outline in each other sinking,
The soft breath of his life thus fleets away.
His Spirit melts in the harmonious Sea,
That, rich in rapture, round his senses flows,
And the dissolving Thought all silently
To omnipresent Cytherea grows
Joining in lofty union with the Fates,
On Graces and on Muses calm relying,
With freely-offer'd bosom he awaits
The shaft that soon against him will be flying
From the soft bow Necessity creates.

Fav'rites belov'd of blissful Harmony,
Welcome attendants on Life's dreary road,
The noblest and the dearest far that she,
Who gave us Life, to bless that life bestow'd !
That myek'd Man his duties bears in hand,
And loves the fetters that his motion bind,
That Chance with brazen sceptre rules him not,—
For this, Poverty is now your lot,
Your heart has won a bright reward for this
That round the cup where Freedom flows,
You're seated at the Gods of bliss,—
Praise to our country and its fragrant shades,
— And this, too, is a loving land !

[illegible]

The banks with chequer'd dances hover,
 The flow'ry mead, the sunset's light,—
 Thus gleamed, life's barren pathway over,
 Poet's shadowy world so bright,
 In bridal dress ye led us on
 Before the terrible Unknown,
 Before inexorable Fate,
 As in your urns the bones are laid,
 With beauteous Magic veil ye shade
 The chorus dread that ears create.
 Thousands of years I hasten'd through
 The boundless realm of vanish'd time.
 How sad it seems when left by you—
 But where ye linger, how sublime !
 She who, with fleeting wing, of yore
 From your creating hand arose in night,
 Within your arms was found once more,
 When, vanquish'd by Time's silent flight,
 Life's blossoms faded from the cheek,
 And from the limbs all vigor went,
 And mournfully, with footstep weak,
 Upon his stall the greybeard leant.
 Then gave ye to the languishing,
 Life's waters from a new-born spring ;
 Twice was the youth of Time renew'd,
 Twice, from the seeds that ye had strew'd.

When chas'd by fierce barbarian hordes away,
 The last remaining votive brand ye tore
 From Orient's altars, now pollution's prey,
 And to these Western lands in safety bore
 The fugitive from yonder Eastern shore,
 'The youthful day, the West her dwelling made ;
 And on Hesperia's plains sprang up once more
 Ionia's flowers, in pristine bloom array'd,
 Over the Spirit fairer Nature shed,
 With soft refulgence, a reflection bright,
 And through the graceful Soul with stately tread
 Advanced the mighty Deity of light.
 Millions of chains were burst asunder then,
 And to the Slave then human laws applied,
 And mildly rose the younger race of men
 As brethren, gently wand'ring side by side,

With noble inward ecstasy,
 The bliss imparted ye receive,
 And in the veil of modesty,
 With silent merit take your leave.
 If on the paths of Thought, so freely given,
 The Searcher now with daring fortune stands,
 And, by triumphant Paeans onward driven,
 Would seize upon the crown with dauntless hands—
 If he with grovelling hireling's pay
 Thinks to dismiss his glorious guide—
 Or, with the first slave's place array
 Art near the throne his dream supplied—
 Forgive him !—O'er your head to-day
 Hovers Perfection's crown in pride.
 With you the earliest plant <sup>first</sup> had,
 Soul-forming nature first <sup>gave</sup> :
 With you, the harvest-chap <sup>of</sup> glori-
 Perfected Nature ends her plan.

The Art Creative, that all-modestly arose
 From clay and stone, with silent triumph throws
 Its arms around the Spirit's vast domain.
 What in the land of knowledge the Discoverer knows,
 He knows, discovers, only for your gain !
 The treasures that the Thinker has amass'd,
 He will enjoy within your arms alone,
 Soon as his knowledge, beauty-ripe at last,
 To Art ennobled shall have grown,—
 Soon as with you he scales a mountain-height,
 And there, illumin'd by the setting sun,
 The smiling valley bursts upon his sight.
 The richer ye reward the eager gaze—
 The higher, fairer orders, that the mind
 May traverse with its magic rays,
 Or compass with enjoyment unconfined—
 The wider thoughts and feelings open lie
 To more luxuriant floods of Harmony,
 To Beauty's richer, more majestic stream,—
 The fair members of the world's vast scheme,
 That, main'd, disgrace on his Creation bring,
 He sees the lofty forms then perfecting—

'The fairer riddles come from out the night—
 'The richer in the world his arms enclose,
 'The broader stream the sea with which he flows—
 'The wider, too, is Destiny's blind night—
 'The nobler instincts does he prove—
 'The smaller he himself, the greater grows his love.
 'Thus is he led, in still and hidden race,
 By Poetry, who strews his path with flowers,
 Through ever purer forms, and purer powers,
 Through ever higher heights, and fairer grace.
 At length, arrived at the ripe goal of Time,—
 Yet one more inspiration all-sublime,
 Poetic outbursts of Man's latest youth,
 And—he will glide into the arms of Truth !

Herself, the gentle Cypria,
 Illum'd by her fiery crown,
 Then stands before her full-grown Son
 Unveil'd—as great Urania ;
 The sooner only by him caught,
 The faster he had fled away !
 Thus stood, in wonder rapture fraught,
 Ulysses' noble Son that day,
 When the sage Mentor who his youth beguil'd
 Herself transfigur'd as Jove's glorious Child !

Man's honor is confided to your hand,—
 There let it well-protected be !
 It sinks with you ! with you it will expand !
 Poesy's sacred sorcery
 Obeys a world-plan wise and good ;
 In silence let it swell the flood
 Of mighty-rolling Harmony !

By her own time view'd with disdain,
 Let solemn Truth in song remain,
 And let the Muses' band defend her !
 In all the fulness of her splendor,
 Let her survive in numbers glorious,
 More dread, when veil'd her charms appear
 And vengeance take, with strains victorious,
 On her tormentor's ear !

The freest Mother's Children free,
 With steadfast countenance then rise
 To highest Beauty's radiancy,
 And ev'ry other crown despise !
 The Sisters who escap'd you here,
 Within your Mother's arms ye'll meet ;
 What noble Spirits may revere,
 Must be deserving and complete.
 High over your own course of time
 Exalt yourselves with pinions bold,
 And dimly let your glass sublime
 The coming century unfold !
 On thousand roads advancing fast
 Of ever-rich variety,
 With fond embraces meet at last
 Before the throne of Harmony :
 As into seven mild rays we view
 With softness break the glimmer white,
 As rainbow beams of seven-fold hue
 Dissolve again in that soft light,
 In clearness thousandfold thus throw
 Your magic round the ravish'd gaze,—
 Into one stream of light thus flow,—
 One bond of truth that ne'er decays !

THE CELEBRATED WOMAN.

A LETTER FROM ONE HUSBAND TO ANOTHER.

SHALL I lament thy lot? Dost curse thy marriage vow?
 With tears of grief and rage combin'd?
 And why? Because thy faithless Spouse
 Seeks in another's arms to find
 What she no more obtains from thee?—
 Friend, hearken to Another's care,
 And be at thine own more easily !

It pains thee that a Second of us
 Thy sister?—How truly enviable thy case !
 My wife belongs to the wide human race.
 Even so thou art to the Male
 To Appraise a high way as well,

Even in fashion's native city,
 She is exposed for sale in ev'ry shop,
 And may be handled (more's the pity!)
 By ev'ry pedant, ev'ry silly fop—
 On board the packet, on the coach's top,—
 Beneath the cockney's stare must patient be,
 And, as each dirty critic may desire,
 Must walk on flowers or coals of fire
 To the Pantheon or the pillory.
 A Leipzig fellow—may the rascal meet his dues!—
 As of a fortress, takes her topographic measure,
 And parts for sale he offers to the public view,
 Which none but I should know about, had I my pleasure!

My wife,—thanks to the canon law, 'tis true,—
 The name of consort holds all-duly priz'd;
 She knows its meaning and its practice too.
 As Ninon's husband I'm but recogniz'd,
 'Thou'rt grieved that at the Faro-table, in the Pit,
 When thou appear'st, each tongue exerts its wit?
 Oh, happy man! How fortunate is he
 Who can say that! Good brother, as for me,
 A whey-cure purchased me, at length, the honor
 At her left side to humbly wait upon her.
Me no one sees, and ev'ry look is thrown Upon my haughty spouse alone.

The veil of night is scarcely rent,
 When, lo! the staircase swarms with blue and yellow coats,
 With unpaid letters, packages and notes,
 To "The Illustrious Lady" sent.

How sweet her sleep!—to wake her though's my duty:
 "Madam, the last Berlin and Jena News!"
 Sudden her eyelids opes the sleeping Beauty;
 The first thing that they meet are—the Reviews
 Her fair blue eye for me has not one look,
 A trump'ry Paper's all that it can brook,
 Soon from the nursery comes a roaring cry,
 And, asking for her little ones, she lays it by.

Her dressing-table now is set,
 But half-looks only on her glass she flings;
 A grumbling and impatient threat
 To her affrighted Maid gives wings.
 The Graces all have fled from her toilette,
 And in the place of Cupids young and fair,
 Furies upon her wait to dress her hair.

The sound of carriage-wheels has now begun,
 And nimble lacqueys from behind dismount,
 To cravo an audience with the Famous One :
 First for the scented Abbé, then the Count,
 Or Englishman, who German scorns to know,
 Grossing and Son, or Messrs. So and So.
 A thing that in the corner meekly takes its place,—
 A Husband call'd,—is star'd at in the face.

Here may the dullest fool, the poorest wight,
 (And this thy rival surely would not do,)
 Express his admiration at her sight, —
 Express it in my presence, too !
 And I, for fear of being thought uncivil,
 Must beg he'll stop to dine—(the devil !)

At table, Friend, begins my misery,
 Quickly each flask's contents are dried !
 With Burgundy, that Doctors strictly keep from me,
 Her flatterers' throats I needs must keep supplied.
 The meat that I so hardly earn'd at first
 Her hungry parasites' lean paunches lince ;
 This fatal immortality accrues'd
 Has been the death of all my choicest wines—
 The plague take ev'ry hand that dares to print !
 What, think'st thou, are my thanks? A scornful hint
 A gesture or a rude and vulgar sneer.—
 Dost guess the meaning? Oh, 'tis very clear !
 That any woman, who is such a jewel,
 Should be possess'd by such a clown, seems cruel !

The spring-time comes. O'er meadow and o'er plain
 Nature now throws her capst, many-hued :
 The flow'rs are clothed in smiling green attire—
 Sweet sings the lark, with life to every wood.

To her no joy does spring impart,
 The songstress of the feelings blest of love,
 The witness of our sports—the beauteous grove,—
 Appeal no longer to her heart.
 The nightingales have never learn'd to read—
 The lilies never to admire.
 The joyous choruses all creatures lead,
 In her—an Epigram inspire!
 But no!—The season's fine for traveling—
 How very crowded Pyrmont now must be!
 And all in Carlsbad's praises, too, agree.

Presto, she's there!—Amongst that honor'd ring,
 Where lords and sages are combining,—
 All kinds of folk, in fact, of note,
 Lovingly pair'd, as if in Charon's boat,
 All at one board together dining;
 Where, from a distance thither hur'd,
 The bleeding virtues of their wounds are cur'd,
 And others—for temptation praying are,
 That they may ward it off with more éclat.
 There, Friend,—Oh, bless thy happier lot in life!
 Leaving me seven young Orphans,—goes my wife.

Oh, happy golden time of love's young day!
 How soon,—alas, how soon thou'rt flown away!
 A Woman, who no equal has, or had—
 A very Goddess, in her graces clad,
 With radiant spirit, with a mind clear-sighted,
 And feelings soft, to pity open wide,—
 I saw her thus, while each heart she delighted;
 Like a fair May-day sporting by my side;
 Her beauteous eyes appear'd to falter
 The blissful words: I love thee well!
 And so I led her to the altar;
 My rapture then, oh, who could tell!
 Of enviable years a blooming field
 From out this mirror sweetly on me smil'd;
 A perfect heaven was then to me reveal'd.
 Soon round me sported many a lovely child;
 Amongst them all, the fairest She;
 The happiest, She, amid the throng;
 And Mine by spirit-harmony,
 By heart-alliance, firm and strong.
